Bank Teller Says Foreigner Asked For $2,000 And Made Threats

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 25.—A foreigner in destitute circumstances exploded the bomb in the Farmers' Deposit National Bank here late yesterday which claimed two lives and injured 40 persons, according to the theory on which the police were working today.

The bomb-carrier received the full force of the blast and was almost decapitated. George C. Ortmann, bank policeman, who was rushing toward the man when the bomb exploded, died ten minutes later in a hospital.

Police Lieut. Peter Connors, head of the homicide squad, said there was a bare possibility that the identity of the bomb hurler will be established.

Hundreds of persons viewed the body in the morgue today, but thus far none has recognized the man. The only clues police have, which may ultimately lead to identifying him, are a cheap belt buckle, initialed "L", and remnants of his clothing.

Examination of parts of the bomb picked up from the floor of the wrecked banking room showed it to be of the nitroglycerine type. Had the bomb not been on the marble floor when it explodod many more persons would have been killed, police believe.

Officials Resume Questioning Of Cleveland Youth

City Chemist Starts Analysis Of Girl's Vital Organs For Poison

By PAUL E. BROKAW
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 25.—Questioning of Emil Balanescu, youthful medical student, in connection with the mysterious death of Dorothy Kirk, 21-year-old stenographer, in a hospital Sunday, was resumed by detectives today while city chemists continued analyzing the girl's vital organs.

Balanescu is held on "suspicion" pending an official report of the coroner on the causes of the girl's death, but charges will be placed against him if the chemists' analysis reveals that drugs the youth was said to have admitted giving her contributed to her death, detectives Bernard Wolf and George Clark said today.

Meanwhile, Isedore Moidel, attorney of Warren, O., retained as counsel for Balanescu, was expected to begin legal action today looking toward the youth's release.

Balanescu, according to the detectives, admitted advising the girl about a month ago to take two pills when she was not feeling well.

PLAN DEMONSTRATION FOR GERTRUDE EDERLE

(International News Service)
NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—A welcome home demonstration such as will rival if not surpass that accorded Bobby Jones, will be put on for the benefit of Gertrude Ederle, heroine of the recent record-breaking channel swim, when she arrives on the Berengaria on Friday.

To the shriek of whistles in the harbor and a "water salute" from a battery of fire boats, "Trudy" will be escorted ashore by a mayor's committee of welcome and paraded proudly up Broadway to City Hall to be officially greeted and felicitated by Mayor Walker.

In spite of the fact that "Trudy" turned professional last year, fifty A. A. U. clubs plan to be represented in the line of march to City Hall.

Following the mayor's greeting, a reception to New York's "leading lady" will be held in the aldermanic chambers, following which the parade will be resumed to her now-famous Amsterdam avenue home. A guard of honor, composed of mounted, motorcycle and foot policemen, will accompany the swimmer on her triumphal entry, seated between her father and mother.

Elmer Alles Describes Scene When Blast Let Loose

INJURED RUSH OUT OF BANK

Among the hundreds of pedestrians who were in the neighborhood of the Farmers' Deposit Savings Bank in Pittsburgh Tuesday afternoon when the unidentified anarchist exploded the bomb which resulted in two deaths, a score of injuries and much property damage was Elmer Alles of West Washington street, this city.

Mr. Alles had business in Pittsburgh Tuesday and was near the bank on Fifth avenue when the blast let loose. He states that for a period of ten minutes utter confusion raged. Hysterical woman and men but a little less affected rushed from the bank, their clothing torn into shreds and blood streaming from wounds. Order was restored with the arrival of the police, but the dense crowd which gathered had no inkling of what had caused the trouble until newspaper extras were on the streets. The Pittsburgh publications, according to Mr. Alles, had extras carrying the details of the bombing on the streets not more than 20 minutes after it occurred.

Others Near Crash.

"It sounded to me as though one of the buildings in the downtown district had collapsed," said C. A. Cleaveland today in speaking of the bomb outrage in the Farmers bank in Pittsburgh on Tuesday.

With Charles Freeman, John Newman and Leo Malloy, Mr. Cleaveland was on Sixth avenue, just about a block away from the Farmers bank when the bomb exploded.

"It was a terrifying thing," he continued. "We rushed over to the

New Army Air Control Board Assumes Duties

Unofficial Board Announced For Three Departments Of Air Service

MITCHELL PLAN NOW FORESEEN

Administration Embarks On New Policy Already Approved By Coolidge

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Acting under the authority of the new program laid down by congress, the administration has embarked upon an ambitious policy of coordinating all American air activities without the creation of one national department of aviation.

An unofficial board composed of the three new assistant secretaries for air—F. Trubee Davison, war; Edward P. Warner, navy, and William McCracken, commerce department—will carry out the new policy which is said to bear the stamp of approval of President Coolidge.

Preliminary consideration having convinced the assistant secretaries the policy is right, frequent meetings will be held in the near future in which every possibility of joint action will be explored, Davison said today.

Aviation enthusiasts in both the army and navy who have supported Col. Mitchell's plan for consolidating the air service believe the creation of the unofficial board is a long step in this direction.

One of the first proposals to be taken up is expected to be the creation of a joint board of experimentation to assign definite objectives to the experts of the army and navy air corps.

Standardication of training and tactics, and the interchange of officers between the army and navy for limited periods to break down the intense rivalry which is said to have become a serious obstacle to cooperation also will be taken up, it is understood.

Probe Of Mellett Case Started By Grand Jury May Develop New Facts

Widow Of Slain Publisher Uses $100,000 Damage Suit As Legal Weapon

Evidence Secured At Grand Jury Probe Will Prove Valuable In Trial

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CANTON, O., Aug. 25.—Holding the sword of an ingenious legal move in her hands, Mrs. Florence Mellett, widow of Don R. Mellett, grimly watched from the background today the opening of the grand jury investigation into the Canton publisher's murder, determined to see that justice was done and the slaying avenged.

With the filing of a $100,000 damage suit by Mrs. Mellett against three of the alleged murder conspirators, a "checking up" procedure on the action of the county grand jury was assured. Further suits against any who obstruct the inquiry was promised by Mrs. Mellet if conditions warrant it.

"The purpose of this move is not to collect money, but to secure vigorous prosecution of the murderers," Frances Poulson,. Mrs. Mellett's attorney, said today. "No matter what the Stark county grand jury does, the evidence will thus become available in federal jurisdiction when the damage suit is tried.

The suit will be amended to include possibly a dozen more defendants before the trial, Poulson said.

Beside the three defendants named in her petition as causing the death of her husband, Mrs. Mellett mentions "other persons" who "unlawfully, purposely and of deliberate and premeditated malice did kill and murder" the publisher.

The Death Note

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—The note, demanding $2,000, which an unidentified bandit shoved through a teller's cage at the Farmers' National bank here, shortly before he and a bank policeman were blown to pieces, was found today in the pocket of George Ortmann, the policeman.

It read:

"Sirs: You are held up for $2,000. Dynamite is in my hand. It will discharge when the handle is out of my hand.

"If you or anyone else fire a gun at me there will be no cage left and we will all be blowing up to pieces.

"If you are willing to come with $2,000 be quiet and keep off the alarms. The help will do you no good. If they come they will come for their death. If not, make all the noise you like. I help you with the noise that whole Pittsburgh will hear.

"If you wish to see the death machine, ask for it. Otherwise absolute silence. Death or $2,000. Either you like".

POLA NEGRI ON WAY TO NEW YORK CITY

(International News Service)
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—Her heart heavy with grief, Pola Negri, beautiful Polish film star, will leave here at noon today for New York, where she will meet Alberto Guglielmo, brother of the dead Rudolph Valentino, when the latter arrives on the steamer Homeric. She will try to persuade the brother that "Rudy's" body should be buried in Hollywood, in the city and state he loved.

Charles Eyton, a personal friend of Miss Negri, who, with his wife, Kathlyn Williams, a motion picture actress, has been with Miss Negri since she has been prostrated following the report of Valentino's death, declared today that although the decision where Valentino was to be buried was entirely in the hands of his brother, that Miss Negri would urge him to allow the body of the late film star to be buried in California.

"I am sure that Rudolph wished it," Mr. Eyton quoted Miss Negri as saying.

Mr. Eyton, himself a close friend of Valentino, was positive the "sheik" personaly would desire a California burial.

"He was 100 per cent American and loved especially California, the state of his adoption. He himself told me that California would always be his home, even when he was through with motion pictures."

(International News Service)
BELLEFONTE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Two boys, who found Lieut. Cyrus Bettis wandering in the mountain forests between here and Lewistown, brought the missing army aviator to Bellefonte hospital today.

Hospital physicians said Lieut. Bettis was suffering from a fractured jaw and a fractured leg. Although the pilot's physical condition generally is good, it will be some time before he is able to leave the hospital, it was learned.

The boys brought Bettis here in an automobile from the mountains. He was almost exhausted from lack of food and from his harrowing experience in the treacherous Alleghenies.

At the hospital it was said Bettis had not been questioned about the crash because his fractured jaw made it difficult for him to talk, but the boys who brought him here said his plane was wrecked.

Cameron Found Wandering On Croton Avenue

Missing Teacher Victim Of Amnesia, According To Doctor's Diagnosis

WAS NOT ABLE TO TELL NAME

Believed That He Has Been Wandering About City Since Last Monday

F. Willard Cameron, 420 East Garfield avenue, missing since last Friday morning, was found about 2:30 o'clock this morning at Croton avenue and East Washington street, by Officers Llewellyn and Golis, in a dazed condition.

Cameron, evidently the victim of amnesia, which causes loss of memory of past events, was stopped and questioned by the officers, who, from descriptions furnished, felt convinced that he was Cameron.

He asked where he could get a cup of coffee and when questioned did not seem to know his name, where he lived or where he was. The officers took him to the police station, where papers found on him proved conclusively that he was the missing man.

Members of his family were advised at once and he was removed to the home of his brother, Donald Cameron, 104 South Mulberry street, and a physician summoned. The physician, on examination, expressed the opinion that it was a case of physical exhaustion and amnesia. He has failed so far to give any information concerning his absence and has been sleeping most of the time.

His car, in which he left last Friday morning, was also found during the night on Liberty street in the Seventh Ward by Officers Hagan and Allgier. It had been standing there since Monday morning at a point near the Westfall store. It was placed in the Mahoning garage by the officers.

Cameron was seen in his car on Grant street last Saturday and on the Wampum road on Sunday. It is quite evident that since Monday, when he must have left his car in the Seventh Ward, he has been wandering about the city.

Arthur Mometer

The world is getting goofy, said Justinian McKay, we're getting closer to the well known cobbles every day, we're driving automobiles at a speed inspiring awe, and bandits ply their pleasant art, in spite of rules and law. The girls are cigaretting and they're rouging and they drink, and like Sodom and Gomorrah we are on the well known brink. Below us yawns the abyss of oblivion I wot, and any day old Gabriel's horn will call us, like as not. Ah woe is me he sadly sighed, and likewise lack-a-day, there's too much laughter in the world, and every one's too gay. I left him as he spoke his gloom, his ravings peeved me quite, for old Justinian talks like that from morning until night. I have no doubt his liver's bad, his gizzard and his spleen, else there would be no thoughts like that, gyrating in his bean. The world's a better place each day, I'm glad that I'm alive, I hope I live till 96, the weather's sixty-five.

Hundreds Injured In Riot To Glimpse Valentino Features

Police Reserves Have Trying Time With 100,000 Curious Citizens

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. — Thousands of admirers of Rudolph Valentino assembled again today in the streets for blocks around Campbell's funeral church in Broadway in the hope of getting a two-second glimpse of the body of the famous motion picture star which is lying in state.

They came in great numbers in spite of the fact that one hundred persons were injured late yesterday and last night when a crowd of 100,000 (police estimate) fought with police reserves for a glimpse of the features of the dead star. Most of the injured were women and three of them policemen. They were deluged with fragments of plate glass windows that had been pushed in or injured in the rioting in the streets.

Sidewalks and streets were littered with pocketbooks, umbrellas, furs and women's shoes when the doors of the chapel were closed at midnight and the police chased, or rather tried to chase, the people home.

Long before 9 o'clock, when the doors of the funeral church were to be opened, another throng began to assemble. By eight o'clock this morning it had reached several thousands. The doors will remain open until midnight.

TWO KILLED AS BOMB EXPLODES ON BANK FLOOR

he released the bomb, cut on the face and suffering from shock, vividly described events preceding and immediately following the blast.

It was late in the afternoon, Jones said, when the alien, roughly dressed and with hat pulled down over his eyes, shoved a crumpled piece of scrap paper through the grilled window.

On the face of the note was scribbled in almost undecipherable handwriting the demand: "Give me $2,000 or I'll blow up the bank."

"The man seemed calm enough," Jones related, "and his face was almost expressionless.

"My first thought was to play for time, so I told the caller to wait a minute while I phoned the vice president, at the same time motioning to the teller in the adjoining cage to engage in conversation."

The man grew impatient, J. V. Brogan, the second teller, said and inquired: "Will I get the money?"

Brogan assured the bomber that he would get the $2,000 and attempted to keep him calm while Edward B. Coll, president of the bank; M. A. Kendall, vice president, and the two bank policemen, Ortmann and A. C. Anderson, were summoned.

"Coll and Kendall approached from inside the cage," Jones said, "while the bank policemen, with Ortmann in the lead, came up from the corridor.

"Then the bomber became excited. He seemed to realize that all chances of getting the money were gone.

"He leaped from the cage window, let out a maniacal shout and that was all I remember. The next thing I knew I was lying flat on the floor of the cage with excited persons rushing about in all directions."

Other witnesses said the bandit kicked the black satchel containing the bomb as it fell to the floor. He received the force of the blast in the stomach and head. Ortmann was knocked against a marble wall. He was rushed to a hospital, but died ten minutes later.

Twenty-four persons, bank employes, depositors and passersby, were rushed to hospitals in ambulances and any means of transportation available.

After receiving first aid treatment, 15 of the victims were taken to their homes. The condition of four others is critical, although physicians hoped all would recover.

The interior of the bank in the vicinity of the explosion was wrecked. President Coll estimated the damage to the building and bank fixtures at $150,000.

That there were not more serious casualties was due in a large measure to the arrangement and construction of the bank fixtures. The walls, floor and the lower part of the cages were covered with thick white marble. This afforded a certain protection for the men inside the cages.

Plate glass windows for blocks around were shattered and many persons not near the blast were cut and bruised in this manner.

The bomb exploded at one of the busiest hours of the day when hundreds of workers were leaving for their homes. Within 15 minutes the crowd around the bank was so great that police reserves found considerable difficulty in holding the masses back.

The bank opened for business as usual today.

Origin Of Tar Heel Dates To Revolution

Tar heel, the nickname applied to residents of North Carolina originated as the result of an incident in the Revolutionary war. When Cornwallis and his forces headed for the eastern part of the state the end of the conflict the residents were in a quandry as to what to do with their accumulated naval stores which, above all, they wanted to keep from falling into the hands of the British.

They decided it would be better to lose them than have them confiscated by Cornwallis, so they dumped all their tar and pitch into the stream now called Tar river. The tar naturally sank and when the British troops reached the stream in their march and rolled up their trousers and waded across they received a coating of tar on their feet and legs.

Weeks later, relates the Raleigh News and Observer, when Cornwallis' forces surrendered at Yorktown remains of the tar were still visible on their feet. They believed that the rivers in North Carolina flowed tar. From then on North Carolinians have been called Tar Heels.

Seek 'Phantom Burglar" Trail

CHILLICOTHE, O., Aug. 25.—Police admitted today they are puzzled by the "phantom burglar" who on two successive nights visited the home of D. C. Wharton here and terrorized the neighborhood.

Wharton today offered $100 reward for the terrorist's capture.

After locking their doors Sunday night the Whartons heard a voice issuing from the cold air vent, threatening their lives if they did not unlock the basement doors.

Later it was found the intruder hid in the flue and escaped by an upstairs window after police left.

Last night while Wharton and a policeman lay in wait in the rear of the home, the terrorist leaped from the bushes at the side of the house and attacked Mrs. Wharton and her son, 15.

Both were felled by the man's fist. After kicking Mrs. Wharton, he fled on hearing her husband and the policeman approaching.

IRVING BERLIN AND WIFE SHY AT REPORTERS

(International News Service)

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Irving Berlin and his wife, the former Ellin Mackay, plan to stay here at least until the first of September, the song writer told International News Service today.

And they'll stay indoors at the home of Max Winslow, where they are guests, if that seems necessary to avoid photographers. At Mrs. Berlin's first appearance in public yesterday the cameramen attempted to get pictures, but their efforts merely resulted in her retiring to the house in a state of hysteria.

Later Berlin intimated that he would appreciate it if the photographers would show more consideration for his wife's present condition.

"We are here for a rest, and I have some work to complete which I started in Europe," he said. "We don't want to see reporters or pose for photographers. That's not the purpose of our visit."

Berlin then invited the newspapermen to join him and Winslow in a round of golf.

PARIS, Aug. 25.—Prior to his departure for New York, Alberto Guglielmi, brother of the late Rudolph Valentino, stated today that he would not make a final decision as to the burial place of his brother until he reached New York.

"I am consulting my sister in Turin," he said. "I cannot make a decision before I reach New York as there are so many factors to be considered."

Yesterday Alberto stated that he did not feel that the body should be brought back to Turin for burial, but should be laid at rest in the America which Rudolph had loved.

ALEX. BAIRD, 55, SUFFERS BROKEN NECK IN CRASH

In default of bail he is being held in the county jail pending a hearing.

According to the police, Sheriff H. M. Reynolds informed them at 12:45 o'clock this morning that a large touring car had upset on the Wilmington road. That the occupants had righted it and started for New Castle. The occupants, he reported, were believed to be drunk.

Officers Thompson, Steiner and Lockard were detailed and started to look for the car and men. They found them at the Shenango Valley hospital. Finding that Baird was seriously injured and that the other occupants of the car had escaped with minor bruises and injuries, the officers brought Stacel and his companions to the police station.

A physician was called and examined Stacel, who admitted that he had been driving at the time of the accident. His decision was that he was under the influence of liquor. The county detective, George S. Kennedy, was advised of the situation and asked that Stacel and the rest of the occupants of the car be held until this morning. This was done and this morning all were turned over to Kennedy, who made the information against Stacel.

Stacel in his statement to the police here, said that they were enroute toward this city on the Wilmington road, and that he was driving. The car was rounding a curve, about five miles from the city, when it left the road and upset, throwing the seven occupants of the car out. He claims that the car was going from 30 to 35 miles an hour.

When they had righted the car, which was apparently not badly damaged, they placed the injured man in the car and hurried to the hospital, George Rittelman, who was perfectly sober, according to the police, driving the car from the scene of the accident to the hospital.

After Stacel had been arraigned before Alderman Mantz this morning and sent to jail, the other five young men were taken to the office of District Attorney J. Elder Bryan, where their statements with regard to the accident were taken. The report from the office of the district attorney is to the effect that the affair was in the nature of a drinking party. With the exception of the injured man, the other members of the party ranged in age from 17 to 24 years.

Traffic Accidents Reported To Police

Frank Conti, aged 7, 314 Home street, was knocked down and injured Tuesday afternoon, when he ran out in front of the automobile driven by Philip Siyufy, 715 Cunningham avenue, as it was being driven north on Mill street, near the Maxwell coal yards.

The boy was removed to the New Castle hospital, where it was found that he was injured about the head. His injuries were not, however, of a serious character, and he was able to leave the institution today.

William S. Spencer of 1210 Williams street, had his machine parked near the Potter meat market on East Washington street, yesterday, when the brakes failed to hold and it went down over the hill and was ditched.

C. L. Burnett of 818 West Washington street, reported Tuesday that he was going east on East Washington street, near Butler avenue, when a car bearing Ohio license 714-526 going in the same direction in front of him stopped suddenly and without warning and his machine ran into it. Some damage was done.

NEW CASTLE MAN NEAR BANK WHEN BOMB EXPLODES

scene of the bombing and here we found the wildest disorder. Injured people were working their way out through the crowd, men were yelling, women were screaming and police officers were endeavoring to control the crowd.

"While the reports place the estimate of the injured at 40, it seems to me that there must be many more than that. While we were there we could see many who were cut and bleeding, walking from the place. The 40 probably represents just those who were given medical attention in the hospitals and were listed."

Gage Kennedy, who is in charge of the defunct First State bank here was also near the Farmers bank when the bombing occurred. Like thousands of others he hurried over to the bank building and found it in a chaotic condition.

As far as is known, there were no New Castle people in the bank when the bombing occurred.

Meyer Levine, 1316 Highland avenue, was in Pittsburgh Tuesday afternoon and had just passed the Farmers Deposit Trust company and was possibly a block further up Fifth avenue when the explosion occurred that carried death and destruction with it. The concussion was terrific and turning, Mr. Levine saw people running in a frightened manner in every direction. He found it impossible to get near the scene of the explosion on account of the great crowds of people that gathered immediately after the explosion.

J. A. Altschuler, architect, was in Pittsburgh and about half a block away from the scene of the explosion when it occurred, being at the new Dan's Place store, which is being remodeled under his supervision.

He was outside at the time and thought that it must be an earthquake as the ground rocked and caused him to sway.

A St. James, Minn., special dispatch to the Journal says: "A hog on the Kroeker farm has established a record for fasting. Last fall Mr. Kroeker missed the 250-pound porker. A few days ago, while removing an old stray stack from a field, the hog was found still alive but too weak to move. Water and milk were given the animal and it now is as lively as any of the hogs on the place. The hog has been buried in the straw pile for eight months."—Sioux City Journal.

EVANGELIST OF EDUCATION

DEATH has just closed a remarkable career, a career which has neither parallel nor precedent in the United States. It is the career of Dr. Charles William Eliot, president emeritus and former president of Harvard University.

Doctor Eliot was born in Boston in 1834. He graduated from Harvard in 1853 at the age of 19 years. At the age of 24 he was teaching mathematics and chemistry to men as mature as himself in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. When only 35 years old he was made president of Harvard University, occupying that important administrative position for forty years until his retirement in 1909 because of his advanced years. From 1909 until his death at the age of 92 he was president emeritus of Harvard. This chronological biography of the man shows him remarkable in youth and no less remarkable in his old age.

If time fails to efface the name and works of Doctor Eliot it will not be because of any achievement in the realm of research, philosophy or thought. He was not a Pasteur, a Schopenhauser, a Plato, nor a Newton. He was to education in the United States what St. Paul was to Christianity, the evangelist, not the creator. He devoted his life to making the pursuit of knowledge fascinating to the English-speaking masses and his efforts were not without success.

Doctor Eliot's honor in his own country and throughout the world is the greater because he was never pedantic, always tolerant, ever sublimely democratic and never lacking in faith in humanity.

WAGES AND PRICES

IT seems unfortunate that the relation of wages to production can not be discussed without arousing antagonism from organized labor on the one hand or creating suspicion or opposition from employers. The tendency of prices to find a lower level involves changes in wages in order that activities may be given new life.

It is an economic fallacy to hold to the belief that prices of essential commodities may be lowered to meet the demands of consumers, and wages be maintained at the height reached as the result of inflated standards of value. Much of this inflation is the result of conditions created by the war, based on unusual demands for production in many lines.

Wage-earners demand that the cost of living be materially lowered before any suggestion is made regarding the lowering of wages, and manufacturers and other producers reply by stating that, as wages enter very largely into the cost of production, they cannot sell cheaper until they can produce cheaper. The two views create a situation that can only be met by compromise.

The merchant who is forced to sell his goods at a sacrifice in order to get the ready money to meet his bills is the victim of a condition that is just as artificial, and therefore unhealthy, as forcing prices to a level that is not warranted by the law of supply and demand. Severe losses are suffered and some failures result, but general conditions are slightly, if at all, improved.

In a few cases of the steel industry the scale of wages is based upon the selling price of the product during a certain period, and it is a plan that has been found to work well. It is a form of co-operation that would appear to be practical in many industries confronted with readjustments that will be difficult unless they are faced in the spirit of concession by both employers and and employes.

THE COMMUNITY'S HEALTH

THERE is not a person in this town, or the country either for that matter, who is not vitally concerned in the health of the community. It is important that the most rigid sanitary regulations should have force not only here but in every city throughout this country. For epidemics of disease can be kept to a minimum. They are the greatest wasters of life.

A pre-war estimate by a leading sanitarian places the average value of a human life as $3,600, and the average cost of medical attention and nursing care for each case of typhoid fever, for instance, as $200. On this basis in one small town epidemic 55 cases of typhoid cost $11,000 and in addition the loss of vital capital because of six deaths was $21,600.

That is a lot of money to be taken out of a community. Let us not consider it even from a humanitarian standpoint. It is really not good business policy to let such things happen. Public health is purchasable. Within natural limits every community can determine its own death rate.

Modern health methods include infant welfare, child welfare, prevention of communicable diseases and the sanitation of the community. Money invested in public health pays a dividend to every member of the community. A healthful community will not only have more money to spend on the necessities and luxuries of life, but it will attract trade from a wider territory. Health is a business proposition.

It is never safe to trust the man whose only motive for being honest is that it is the best policy.

If you cannot interest a man in a proposition to make money, he is probably not long for this world.

EVERY DAY YOU LIVE—

Can be bankrupted if you borrow trouble from tomorrow.
Begins life all over again if you start new with the morning.

Is filled wth just as many responsibilities as opportunities.
Will run smoother if you start it with a prayer.
You can find a hundred reasons for being happy if you look for them.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard for 40 years, is dead, in his 93rd year. Theodore Roosevelt said of him: "He is the only man I envy," which is surprising. President Taft said of Dr. Eliot: "He is as well preserved as though he had spent his years in the atmosphere of the supreme court."

Although head of a great university, Dr. Eliot was not an orthodox Christian. He said fear of hell "has not proved effective to deter men from wrongdoing." And of heaven he said: "It has never yet been described in terms very attractive to the average man or woman. Both heaven and hell are, indeed, unimaginable."

He even said that men and women would not be any more inclined to good or evil, "if heaven were burned or hell quenched. The prevailing Christian ideas of Heaven or hell have hardly any more influence with educated people in these days than Olympus and Hades have."

He attacked from the pulpit, but all that sounds mild enough now.

Dr. Crane's Editorial

THE VALUE OF FORENSICS

An earnest little book has fallen into my hands called "An Outline for Self-Education."

One of the points given most stress by the writer is the value of forensics for developing young men.

Most of America's self-made men, from Benjamin Franklin to Abraham Lincoln, have testified to the benefits they received from debating.

Ever since, and probably long before, Bacon wrote that "speaking maketh a ready man," the value of argument as a sharpener of the wits has been recognized.

Besides this, the study of debating does a number of other things.

It teaches where to find information. It drills in the important art of knowing where to seek. Its training in where to find facts you are looking for helps in everyday life later on.

It trains students to give attention to details. It demands a challenging of every accepted and seemingly guileless point that may harbor a fallacy. It requires an exact definition of terms and a clear understanding of what is included and what is left out.

It cultivates orderliness. It requires that weeds be kept out of the garden of the mind. It demands straight rows, solid foundations, consecutive links. Facts must be marshalled one, two, three.

It inculcates the invaluable lesson of seeing the other side of an argument. The surest man in a debate is always the one who knows the other side best.

Moreover, it gives training in seeing from another's point of view. In trying to get an idea across to a listener the speaker gets training in putting himself in the other's background and seeing the problem from his viewpoint.

It also gives exercise in expressing yourself, putting your ideas into words, and making your thoughts clear to others.

In a debate you have a test of your ability under conditions where weaknesses are made apparent and results are evident.

Earnest young people who are striving for self-development can do few better things than following this writer's advice to join a class in forensics at night school, extension work, or Y. M. C. A. classes.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

THE ITALIAN IMMIGRANT

The people of New Castle know the Italian as well as do any people of America. Of all the immigrants who have come to America and taken up their residence in Lawrence County, the Italian is by far the most numerous. They are now living in Lawrence County the members of the third generation of Italian immigrants. These people from the Mediterranean have prospered in the County; they have become landowners, and many of them have become very successful in the things which they have undertaken. They are known in Western Pennsylvania as a people of industry, intelligence, and integrity. Yet the framers of the Immigration Bill have seen fit to fix the quota of Italian immigrants very low. The Wiseacres who have figured upon the intelligence of the immigrants coming to the shores of America, have declared that the Italian occupies the sixteenth place in the order of intelligence. What right these men possess to be regarded as experts in the matter of intelligence of the Italian race, is unknown to the writer, but no observant citizen belonging to the Nordic race living in Lawrence County could possibly agree that these Wiseacres are right.

Sir Phillip Gibbs, a very able Englishman writing upon Mussolini and the work that has been accomplished in Italy since the War, calls attention to this ridiculous assumption on the part of the framers of the Immigration Laws of the United States. He seems to know his Italy very well. He asserts what is known here, that the Italian is a highly intelligent, industrious, honorable man, and worthy to join the citizenry of any Nation; and that if the plans of Mussolini for the regeneration of the Roman people shall be carried into effect for at least two generations, under whatsoever form of Government emerges from the present Dictatorship, that it is very possible "The Glory that Was Rome" will not be talked of so glibly as it is today.

A story of the industry of the Italian will not be amiss here. Two Italian bricklayers by the names of Antonio Iannello and Samuel Faticaco have been employed by a contractor building a Mount Vernon, N. Y. apartment house. They are master bricklayers, and believe it or not, they recently laid 10,000 bricks on a sixteen inch wall in seven hours' time. This is at the rate of 5712 bricks per man, for the regular eight hour day. There may be some bricklayers in New Castle who will say "It can't be done." The average bricklayer today lays about 1,000 bricks in eight hours, for which he is paid in the neighborhood of $13.00, but every contractor employing bricklayers knows that a bricklayer should lay at least 2500 bricks in that length of time, but walking delegates are often on the job in the interest of the slogan "Less work for more Wages."

Tony and Sam are Union bricklayers, however, but no effort on the part of the Union officials have ever been able to persuade them they should not do as much work every day as their capabilities permit. There are some walking delegates in Union organizations who glory in the capabilities of Union men. If there were more such, the Unions would not come in for as much criticism, but that is another story.

Tony and Sam belong to the Italian race; they are not a mixed breed. Their children, and their children's children will in all probability be of the highest type of American citizenship, and any Nation which deliberately excludes or reduces to an absurd minimum the immigration of the Italian people is and will be the loser thereby.

FAME IS NOT FOR WOMAN

"Fame is not for woman," Mary said.
Once wistful Mary said,
"'Tis hers to make the beds and bake
The daily loaf of bread.
'Tis hers to stitch the dreary seam
And sweep the dusty floor.
'Tis hers, however she may dream,
To wait beside the door.

"For man is all the glory,
For woman all the care.
'Tis hers to face the commonplace
And small reward is there.
'Tis hers to hear the kettle sing
And keep the oven hot,
But when she does some lovely thing
It quickly is forgot.

"Fame is not for woman,"
Once wistful Mary said,
"'Tis hers through life to play the wife
And put her babes to bed."
Yet Jesus was the son she bore,
And oh, so sweet His fame,
That all the world forever more
Will worship Mary's name!

POEMS I LOVE

BY CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

"Before Sleep," By Agnes Lee.

Agnes Lee (Mrs. Otto Freer) is a Chicago poet, far too little appreciated. She has published a striking volume under the title of "Faces and Open Doors," and in it I find this old favorite of mine. Mrs. Freer writes all too seldom, but when she gives us something it is of the highest quality, of the stuff of which poetry is made.

O child of struggle, here's the night!
Then rest, then rest.
Let peace come nestle on your brow.
Put out the light—

Nor back to the old battle hark!
Draw down the shades.
Put out the light. And in your soul
Put out the dark.

Big Movie Directors Mostly Young Men

(International News Service)

CULVER CITY, Cal., Aug. 25.—Youth is served as far as motion picture directors are concerned.

The famous directors at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios here are, for the most part, between the ages of thirty and forty.

Marcel de Sano, director of "Blarney," is the youngest. He is only 28. Hobart Henley and George Hill are both 31.

King Vidor, director of "The Big Parade" and a former noted actor, is 32.

Fred Niblo, director of "Ben Hur," and Tod Browning, director of "The Road to Mandalay," are now in their early forties.

Family Budget Big Factor In Married Life

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Adopt a family expense budget and you will do much to insure a successful marriage, Chase G. Woodhouse, of the U. S. bureau of home economics, advises home makers, in a bulletin just published.

Scores of letters from housewives from all parts of the country telling of family troubles and asking for information on planning home expenses have been received by the bureau. In response to these pleas the bureau issued the budget plan.

"In order to spend wisely," the bulletin stated, "you must know what you have to spend. The first step in making your budget is to estimate your income. Next list all the articles and services that your family is likely to need during the year. List every expenditure. Set aside something for the "rainy day" and take out insurance enough to care for the family.

"Now compare the totals of the two lists—your estimated income and your estimated expenditiures. For safety the expenditures should be somewhat under the income. Go over the expenditures until this margin appears. You may find some extravagances if you look for them, especially in your small expenditures."

The budget plan operates best on a monthly basis, it was advised. Apportion the income according to the budget. Write down each day just how much has been expended in order to be certain of the total at the end of the month. Give each member of the family an allowance for personal expenses.

The bulletin urges "do not make your recording of expenditures a family nuisance, the main subject of conversation at the evening meal.

"It is not necessary to account for every penny. It is not how much money you have to spend but how you spend it and what you get for it that is important. Knowing this you can spend more advantageously next month.

Wierd Ball Of Fire Seen Over Cemetery, Farmers Guessing

CLAREMORE, Okla., Aug. 25.—A weird light in the form of a red ball of fire which farmers declare has appeared for several consecutive nights over a country cemetery near here is causing northern Oklahoma residents to plan watch parties in an attempt to explain the phenomenon. Some are of the belief it is St. Elmo's fire.

Farmers living nearby say the light appears between 9 and 11 o'clock each night, glows brightly for several minutes and gradually fades out to appear again in another place. At no time, observers claim, has it appeared more than a half mile from the cemetery.

The light was first noticed by Roy Bryant, who lives with his parents on a nearby farm. Bryant and several neighbors claim to have investigated, but on approaching the "ball of fire" it disappeared. Its regular appearance near the cemetery which but a short distance from the deserted pioneer boom town of Ruby, is causing attempts to link it with events of early day life in the "ghost city" or with various superstitions.

Although the light resembles St. Elmo's fire, many believe it appears too regularly to be explained in that manner. St. Elmo's fire is described as of flame-like appearance, sometimes seen in storm weather at prominent points on ships and also on land on tops of trees or steeples. It is in the nature of a brush charge of electricity, reddish when positive and bluish when negative.

KANE, Pa., Aug. 25.—A car driven by W. E. Meagher, occupied by Mrs. W. E. Meagher and grandson, William Meagher, 14 years old, and Frances Burden, 19, plunged 75 feet over a hill at Trambine, 14 miles east of here and landed a wreck on the railroad tracks below. None of the occupants were injured seriously and were taken to their homes in St. Marys.

The slippery pavement is blamed for the accident. The party were on their way to visit a son of Mr. and Mrs. Meagher.

Brothers Drowned In Liquor; Illicit Distillery Revealed

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Aug. 25.—When Frank Dimaria, 27, and his brother, Sam Dimaria, 17, both drowned in a 75-barrel vat in a distillery plant on the northern boundary of Benton Harbor Tuesday morning, a bootlegging industry was uncovered. One brother gave his life for another in the illicit liquor-making drama. Sam went into the barn that hid the vat early yesterday morning. He did not come out. Later frantic cries for help were answered by his brother Frank.

Sees Parents Hurting Spirits Of Children

Ceaseless Pressure Blamed By Writer For Youth's Lack Of Initiative

The intense desire of human beings to see tehir offspring "do well" has brought about an epidemic of crippled spirits among American children, declares George Draper writing in the Forum.

"Two invisible and powerful dragons line in wait for every child he says. "One is the ceaseless pressure of parental interruption of the stream of psychic energy; the other is the system of education which grooms and lashes pupils for the it's too inexpensive.

trance examination boards. It is extraordinary that many parents who take great pains to respect a child's stomach are ruthlessly disrespectful toward the youthful personality and mind. The result is an epidemic of spirit paralysis.

"This universal tragedy of parenthood flows in part from the difficulty experienced by the mother in renouncing the joy of folding to the uttermost her fast growing child to the protecting bosom whereon once the infant lay or by the father to release the vigorously directing grasp of his hand from the little boy's shoulder. And so, between the two extremes of the orphan waif who unoppressed leaps onward to success and the pathetic adolescent still lashed to the parent leading string, may be found examples of every variety and degree of twisted and crippled child spirits."

Gossip of Staff Correspondents at World Centers of Population

By H. K. REYNOLDS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Aug. 25.—To make England safe from air attack in any future war is the object of a new scheme of national defense now approaching completion.

Experts from the Air Ministry, the Admiralty and the War Office have co-operated for five years in developing the defensive plans, which are designed to break up aerial bombardments as well as protect citizens of London and other large cities from gas attacks.

Units of the Royal Air Force concerned with engineering and maintainance are being moved further inland, so that ships and schools for training personnel would be less likely to be destroyed or damaged by enemy raiders, while squadrons of fighting airplanes are to be stationed at strategic points along the coasts, there to be in readiness to fly to the defense of London and the great centers of production. Land is being purchased by the Air Ministry to build new aerdromes with a view to establishing two unbroken rings of flying stations around London. These stations will be equipped with anti-aircraft guns, searchlights, sound-locaters and other devices to make it extremely difficult for any attacking squadron to steal down upon England from the Continent or from ships at sea.

The elaborate plans of the government for future protection against air raids are the natural outgrowth of the fears implanted in a large proportion of the English people by the German aerial bombardments during the World War. It is felt that in the next war the navigation of the air will be so perfected that it will be from that direction, rather than from the water, that England would be likely to receive the most serious blows.

Women members of the House of Commons, annoyed at the bad accommodation reserved for them in the private rooms of the legislative buildings, are considering the question of sending a petition to the speaker demanding more and better accommodation.

The return of Margaret Bondfield to the House has brought the matter to a head, declare the women M. P.'s. There are now six women in the Commons, and it is complained that the rooms which are now allotted to them are not only small, but have only one small mirror.

"The way in which we are treated is disgraceful," said Helen Wilkinson, the red-haired Laborite member for Middlesborough, describing the women's viewpoint.

The mosaic floor of an ancient Roman banqueting hall where St. Paul is said to have preached, and believed to be one of the finest Roman remains in the world, has been rediscovered at Woodchester, near Stroud, Gloucestershire, a district notable for its trace of the early Roman habitation of Britain.

First discovered 36 years ago by gravediggers digging in the local churchyard, the floor lay forgotten until an old-timer of the village suddenly remembered its existence and drew it to the attention of the local parson.

It was found at the time of its discovery to be part of a villa supposed to have been the home of a Roman general and governor of England. This supposition is borne out by the great beauty of the remains found, the elaborate arrangement of flues for heating and draining, and the magnificent baths.

Colonel Thomas Edward Lawrence, "mystery man of the war", scholar, archaeologist, strategist, tactician and anchorite, has again joined the British Air Force as a private. He wants quiet to write another book.

His last book, also written while a private in the Air Force, was surely the most expensive book ever written. With Arabia as its subject matter, he is issuing 150 copies only, at $160 each, and every purchaser must be known to the author and must sign a guarantee that he will not divulge the contents of the book.

In order to preserve the copyright in the United States, Lawrence will have to put one unabridged copy on the New York market, but he is pricing it at $25,000.

CHILDREN WORTH WHILE

Mrs. Ethel Clarke, who is making her home at the Colonial Hotel for a short time sends the News the following tribute to childhood.

CHILDREN

There are twenty little fingers and
twenty little toes,
That mother loves most dearly, yes,
more than anybody knows;
These four dear little ears, and two darling noses
And four little feet loved more than any one supposes.

There are two dear little mouths
that mother loves to kiss
One speaks quite plainly while the other slightly lisps;
There are two pair of bright eyes,
one blue, the other brown
Oft I've seen them dance with joy,
oft with teardrops twinkling
down.

The brown eyes belong to Billy, and the blue belong to Nan
Nan is my little baby and Bill is my little man.
Now what greater, sweeter blessing,
could God have sent to me,
Than these two darling children
I love so tenderly.

Why, life would seem so empty, not a thing would seem worth while
Without these two sweet faces to greet me with a smile;
Whatever would I plan or whatever would I do
If I had to travel life alone, no
special goal in view.

So to you who have companions,
wake up and busy get
Fill up your house with sunshine,
lest some day you'll regret;
Enjoy your home and babies, after all 'tis well worth while
To feel their little chubby arms and see your darlings smile.

Odd Masks Worn At Festivals For Dead

One of the queer and interesting customs of the Melanesians, dark-skinned inhabitants of the South Sea islands, is the festival in honor of their dead. At their festivals masks of grotesque appearance play an important part, says the Detroit News.

A collection of such masks has been made for the American Museum of Natural History. One of them resembles a crested helmet. Masks of this type, it is said, must be carved in secret and presented to the public view only during the funeral ceremonies. The crest of the mask represents an earlier custom of hairdress of the natives when they shaved their heads on such occasions, leaving only a single ridge of hair.

One particular type has long, wing-like processes. The face is carved from wood and the fibrous parts of plants are used in working out the other parts of the head. With such masks bark is used as a covering for the neck. Masks from the Gazelle peninsula, New Britain, are made from the facial bones of skulls. The flesh is removed and replaced by sticky lumps of earth.

NO CHANCE TO REPLY

Askit: "Why is it that Mrs. Nayber is so determined to have her husband shave himself every day instead of going to the barber?"

Tellit: "It's so she can have a few minutes to lay down the law to him when he doesn't dare talk back for fear of cutting himself."

Every reformer has his own pet method for making vice versa.

In LUCKY STRIKE cigarettes you get all that can be in any very fine cigarette—also the added pleasure produced by the extra process of toasting.

You get the choicest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and perfectly blended.

But here are three additional things:

LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos are toasted for 45 minutes in superheat. This (1) removes all "bite" and harshness. It (2) develops the hidden flavors of the world's finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. Then (3) sudden chilling seals the moist fragrance in, insuring freshness.

Missouri Drys In Stiff Fight On Referendum

Claims Of Wet Forces To Victory In Primaries Stirs New Contest

Gov. Baker And Three Ex-Governors Sign Attack On Vote In November

(International News Service)

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 25.—Following the claims of the "wet" forces in Missouri of having scored a great victory in nominating both Democratic and Republican candidates for the United States senate who were opposed by the "drys" the latter forces will concentrate their efforts in opposing the prohibition repeal referendum at the November election.

The first concerted move in the campaign of the "drys" has been announced in the calling of a meeting at Jefferson City for September 2 for the purpose of protesting against the state dry law proposal.

The call is made by a state-wide committee styled as being composed of members active in the prohibition movement and of others opposed to the proposed repeal. Accompanying the call was a statement in which it decried the move to "surrendering the state to moonshiners, bootleggers and their associates in crime."

Appended to the call is a list of 250 names which includes Governor Samuel A. Baker and three former governors of Missouri—Arthur M. Hyde, Elliott W. Major and A. M. Dockery.

The committee's statement attacks the repeal movement bitterly terming it an indirect attack on the constitution of the United States by withdrawal of the state's support from the enforcement of prohibition.

The meeting and statement is expected to draw the fire from the Association Opposed to the Prohibition Amendment which was active in the recent Missouri primary.

Black And Gray Awfully Smart Hollywood View

(International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—What is a smart combination for fall sports wear?

Black and gray, declares Joan Crawford, Metro-Goldwyn Mayer actress.

"I have just bought a street frock of black Elizabeth crepe, with a hip length bodice and skirt made entirely of panels.

"There is a wide berthe of the same material in gray. This is trimmed with silver buttons. The cuffs are also of the gray and the panels on the skirt are piped with the same color.

"Black is awfully smart," the actress concluded, "but it's often too harsh next to a youthful face. The gray has a wonderfully softening effect."

Letter Tells Of Missing Daughter

Father's Note Leads To Student Who Left Four Months Ago

FOLEY, Ala., Aug. 25.—While reticent concerning the latest possible clew to the whereabouts of his missing daughter, Herman Lawrenz was hopeful today that a message received from Pittsburgh may lead to finding the young woman who disappeared while a student at the University of Chicago four months ago.

Mr. Lawrenz did not say whether he had forwarded to Pittsburgh a sum of money asked in a message purported to have been from his daughter Margaret. The Pittsburgh address was not disclosed.

The father was inclined to believe the message genuine by reason of the small amount asked.

The Lawrenz family, well-to-do, has friends in Pittsburgh and it is believed an attempt to trace the latest clew through them will be made.

No reason was assigned for their daughter's disappearance. Her home life was said to have been happy, she was progressing in her school work and had no troubles of any character in so far as her family was informed.

Knowledge Of Self Helps Person In Life

Writer Tells How To Keep Free Of Clashes With Those Who Grate

Dr. Beatrice M. Hinkle has made a special study of the friction and misunderstanding that arise from conflicting temperaments. She tells how self-knowledge helps to smooth the rough corners of human contacts.

"To a greater or lesser degree we all live on the regard of others. One person feels that he will be thought less of if he reveals his real feelings and weaknesses to another person. Therefore concealment of real opinions and feelings is the habitual attitude of all people. Not only do we fear the risk of exposing our thoughts and feelings to others, we often conceal them from ourselves because they do not conform to our ego ideal. Thus we are so easily offended at a slight criticism or comment from others. We are always on the defensive, protecting our weaknesses from disclosure.

"A person may conceal his real thoughts and feelings because he is afraid of hurting another person. How often have you thought, 'Jane's tongue is sharp and biting', or 'John exaggerates so, you can believe only half he says.' But how often have you told Jane and John what you think or feel? You probably laugh at Jane's witticisms, and you probably listen attentively to John's stories. You may even be unaware of your distrust and disapproval. Under such conditions your real, unexpressed opinions and emotions accumulate and are stored in your unconscious mind.

"Now it is this unrecognized part of ourselves which in one form or another breaks through and influences our conduct and reactions. All the unexpressed ill feelings in a relationship accumulate and manifest themselves in a resistance to the other person. For instance, your disapproval of Jane's biting tongue is there—in your unconscious, even if you ignore it in your consciousness—a wall barring frank interchange of opinions between you and Jane, with the result that all unknown to your conscious mind deception creeps into the friendship.

"Our great tendency is to project the cause of our dissatisfaction on to an external object, sometimes on to circumstances, but more often on to the other person.—From Everybody's Magazine.

American Railroads Are Saving Timber

Chemical Treatment Is Now Used, Generally, To Protect Ties Against Decay

Timber sufficient to build 100,000 six-room houses of average design, or enough to provide homes for a city of a half million people, such as San Francisco, is being saved by the railways of this country annually by their rapidly growing practice of treating the ties in their tracks with preservatives to protect them against decay, says Railway Age. The railways may well point with pride to this record, for it is not even approached by any other large wood-using industry.

The railways consume approximately one-seventh of all of the timber produced now. It has long been known that the injection of certain chemicals, principally creosote and zinc chloride, into wood will sterilize it against the agencies of decay. As early as 1875 the Louisville & Nashville began to treat its ties and other timbers with creosote.

Another pioneer in the treatment of timber has been the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, which has been thus protecting its cross ties since 1885. This practice has spread rapidly to other roads in recent years until 62,623,710 ties were treated in 1924, or more than 60 per cent of all of the ties inserted in tracks in that year.

It has been demonstrated that treatment properly administered will more than double the life of ties, increasing their service in track of from 5 to 8 years when untreated to from 12 to 15 or even 20 years when treated. This is shown by statistics of the tie requirements of the Santa Fe on which during the last five years the average renewals have declined to 131 per mile of track per year, and in 1925 to 107, as compared with normal requirements of 250 to 300 untreated ties. Likewise, on the Northern Pacific, which has resorted to treatment more recently, the renewals have declined from 292 per mile of track before treatment to 166 at present.

The effect on the timber supply is shown by the fact that whereas 3,758,984 ties were required for the maintenance of 13,379 miles of tracks on the Santa Fe in 1910, only 1,936,497 were required for 18,054 miles of track in 1925. In other words, the ties required declined 48 per cent in these 15 years in spite of an increase of 35 per cent in the road's mileage.

Milk Bottle Inventor Dies Known To Few

Dr. Harvey D. Thatcher's Model Has Gone Unchanged Since 1886

A comparatively unknown man died in Potsdam, N. Y., not long ago without inspiring an "extra" or even being headlined. He had merely invented the milk bottle back in 1886, says the Los Angeles Times.

However, he vied with Pasteur in saving the babies by protecting the milk of the great cities from dust and germs. That the institution has not changed in design in 40 years shows his wisdom.

Every morning a grateful people pours its cream into its coffee and floods its breakfast food with milk and the aroma thereof rises as a sweet incense to the memory of Dr. Harvey D. Thatcher, druggist and philanthropist.

Pasteur cooked his milk and exterminated the vast brood of bacilli that infested all edibles. Thatcher just prevented the germ in its rampages and made the milk germproof in bottles.

Pasteurization is frequently strong and repellent to the palate. Even then the process is dependent upon Thatcher to keep it that way. The bottle blower largely took away the necessity of sterilization.

Thatcher also tried his hand at a baking powder and an orange butter coloring matter; but his name and fame are largely secure by virtue of his bottle.

While no genius may be able to produce much poetry out of a bottle and no "Iliad" or "Odyssey" will ever be inspired by his heroism, and while he never rushed in spectacularly in a crisis and saved from disaster, yet he did make milk safe for democracy.

By so serving he has saved millions without fanfare or fuss. He needs no bust with name engraved thereon to preserve his name. While he may never be admitted to the Hall of Fame, yet the little white bottle standing on the front stoop and ever renewed each morning will be an endearing monument to Harvey D. Thatcher.

State Is Keeping Close Watch On Its Wild Life

Pennsylvania keeps a close watch on its wild life. Besides issuing hunting licenses the game commission required curators and collectors for museums, taxidermists, ferret breeders, ferret users and fur dealers to have licenses and file annual reports.

Three Types

Last year 20 curators and collectors availed themselves of the opportunity to obtain permits for the collection of game and birds. They are classified in three types—scientists in ornithology or mammalogy, agents of public museums and teachers of ornithology. The former may take an unlimited number of game and protected birds and their nests and eggs as well as an unlimited number of game and fur-bearing animals. The collectors may take eight specimens of each species of protected bird and two nests and eggs of each; four specimens of each variety of game birds and two nests and eggs and five specimens of each species of game and fur-bearing animals. Teachers of ornithology are limited to four specimens of each species of protected bird and to one nest and egg.

Must Have Permits

In 1925 the commission issued 433 licenses to taxidermists. In 1913 there were 105 of these licenses issued. Eighty owners of ferrets took out licenses. These animals, the commission said, are used largely for catching rats as it is unlawful to use them in the pursuit of game. One ferret breeder operated last year, but the commission has been notified that he will not renew his license, the demand for ferrets becoming so limited that their breeding has ceased to be profitable.

Many Licenses

There were almost 100 licenses issued for authority to propagate game. Operators of fur farms are not required to be licensed but fur dealers are and as a consequence approximately 1,100 licenses were issued last year.

4 Bound Over As Chicken Thieves

AKRON, O., Aug. 25.—Two men and two women, charged with burglary in connection with their alleged presence in a Greensburg farmer's chicken coop, were held to the grand jury under bonds of $1,000 each today by Municipal Judge Carl Hoyt.

They are Cecil Westfall, 33, of 589 S. Arlington street; L. W. Bevans, 27, and Florence Bevans, 23, of 80 W. Buchtel avenue and Helen Rodenbach, 35.

They are said to have been discovered in the chicken coop after a burglar alarm had sounded.

Convicted of operating an automobile while intoxicated, Eugene Hill, 33, of 38 McCoy street, was fined $25 and sentenced to the county jail for thirty days. Judge Hoyt also revoked his driving license for six months.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. — Another barrier has gone down before the onslaught of modern women. The "no smoking" sign, applying to women passengers only, has vanished from the smoking rooms of the White Star liners.

The liner Homeric was the first vessel to observe the new ruling. Women Passengers discovered the new regulation when the ship sailed out of New York for Europe recently. No time was lost in taking advantage of the liberty granted.

Nude Girl Turned Over To Parents

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 25.—Clara Brick, 16, of Etna, arrested by Millvale police after residents complained that a girl, entirely nude save for a thin cloth around her hips, was seen in the neighborhood, was turned over to her mother today by county detectives.

Harry Cochran, assistant chief of county detectives, said the girl refused to discuss the charge she is said to have made to Millvale police that a group of men attacked her.

Her mother said that Clara left home alone several days ago.

Believe Maniac Responsible For Bombing Of Bank

INJURED PERSONS ARE RECOVERING

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—Working on the theory that it was a maniac who bombed the Farmers Deposit National bank here yesterday when his demand for $2,000 was refused, police this afternoon enlisted Mayview hospital authorities in endeavoring to identify the bandit.

Several inmates of the hospital, where mental cases are treated, escaped recently and detectives are considering the possibility that one of them was the bomber.

Reports that the description of John Collins, former engineer in the bureau of city parks, corresponds to that of the dead man were denied by morgue attaches, who said they are positive Collins was not the man.

Collins recently disappeared from the Mayview institution with four other patients. A sister of Collins, after viewing the body, also said it was not her brother.

James W. Barley, an employe of the Philadelphia company, was put in an embarrassing position when the report gained circulation immediately after the blast that a card bearing his name was found on the dead bandit.

This was explained by bank officials who said the tellers were making out the Philadelphia company's payroll when the blast occurred. Barley's pay card was blown from a bank cage to a spot near where the remnants of the bandit's body were found.

All but seven of the blast victims have been released from hospitals. Of the remaining seven, A. C. Anderson, special bank policeman who was rushing to the aid of George Ortmann, bank policeman killed in the blast, was the only one in a critical condition.

Anderson was severely burned and it is feared he may lose the sight of both eyes.

Woman Wins Order For 50 Million Tees

Tiny Golf Ball Rests Will Be Made At Norway, Maine, Plant

A woodwoking concern in Norway, Me., is making a large number of tiny golf tees—a tiny little wooden peg-like thing to stick into the ground and form a rest for the golf ball. The order for golf tees is fifty—not fifty hundred, not fifty thousand, but for fifty million! Since a million is a thousand thousand according to schoolboy arithmetic, it is easy to figure the magnitude of this single order, says the Boston Globe.

The tees, which are 1 15-16 inches high, are turned in automatic lathes, one operator handling two lathes at a time. Turning 30,000 tees a day is considered a fair day's work for one man.

The tees are placed in great barrels, in which they are churned about in the sand and polished after they come from the lathes; then they are stained, some red, some yellow, in other large barrel-shaped contrivances for coloring and polishing.

The finished tees are then counted by automatic counting or weighing scales and are packed 230,000 tees to a specially made packing case for shipment.

Two hundred and fifty thousand feet, or some 400 cords, of birch squares will be fed into the lathes before the order is completed. The factory is owned and operated by a woman, Mrs. Iona Moore, of Norway, Me.

Eating Of Muskrats Not News To Editor

Might Have Been Scoop 300 Years Ago, However, New Yorker Admits

We are indeed pained at the announcement made by Dr. Charles E. Johnson of Syracuse University to the effect that the muskrat makes good eating, and we are even more pained that the newspapers have published this announcement, apparently under the impression that it is news.

We do not deny that it would have been news 300 years ago, if published in a London Journal under the caption "Intelligence From the New World;" but that it is news now we stoutly deny, and we shall defend our position if necessary with quotations from the authorities.

Yes, muskrat is good eating. The meat is like squirrel meat, but has, to our thinking, a better flavor. We take issue with Dr. Johnson when he says it should be dipped in a batter of flour and meal, then fried in lard. Evidently he is under the impression that a muskrat is first cousin to a rabbit.

SHARON, Aug. 25.—Mystery surrounds the suicide of a woman supposed to be Mary Lesco, aged 30, whose body was found hanging in a barn on the farm of John Jerko, Brockfield township. She had used her apron strings as a noose, and before hanging herself had slashed her wrists. A note, written in Hungarian was found but has not yet been translated. Coroner J. C. Henshaw is conducting an investigation. Little is known of the woman. She appeared at the Jerko home Sunday and was given employment. A letter of recommendation, made out to Mary Lesco, showed she had been employed at a sanitarium in Stamford, Conn., about a year ago. She is said to have mentioned a son who resides in Youngstown, O., and search for him is being made this afternoon.

Massachusetts Youth Dodges Death In Leap

Jumps From Locomotive Tender, Escaping With Scratches

ELKTON, Aug. 25.—With the Federal Express making 35 miles an hour in crossing the Susquehanna river bridge, Charles Ford, 19 years old, of Braintree, Mass., leaped from the tender of the engine and escaped with only a few scratches and bruises.

Ford, who had left his home several weeks ago, ran out of funds while in Baltimore, and, wishing to get back home, "hopped" aboard the engine and found a comfortable seat amid the coal. All went well until Havre de Grace was reached, when the fireman started to shovel down coal. Ford, seeing the fireman with shovel in hand, and fearing he was about to be attacked, made a leap from the tender, landing on the platform between the two main tracks.

The fireman, believing the youth had been killed, had the train stopped, and the train crew, walking back to the platform, was surprised to find Ford walking toward the Perrysville side of the bridge. An officer placed him under arrest for trespassing and a sentence of ten days in Elkton jail was imposed on him.

The boy's parents were notified and money was soon wired to the sheriff to purchase a railroaod ticket and send the youth home.

Lassen Peak Volcanic Eruption Is Forecast

REDDING, Cal., Aug. 25.—A large vent has been discovered on the southeast side of Lassen Peak, and experts believe that the next big volcanic outbreak will occur there.

As a result of the discovery, Thomas A. Jagger, in charge of observations on the volcanic peak, said that the observation station which was to have been located at Mineral probably will be estabiished at King Meadows instead. The latter point is nearer the vent. Mount Lassen is the only active volcano in continental United States.

Relics Of Bronze Age Unearthed In England

On a long slope of seemingly virgin turf between the famous hills of Cisbury and Chanctonbury, Sussex, England, archaeologists have unearthed a site, abounding in evidences of occupation, of what is known as a late Bronze age village. Everywhere are the signs of a peaceful, cultured homestead, pastoral, yet with many of the luxuries of life brought about by 400 years of Roman civilization, and with every sign of this is a sign of the destruction wrought by the Saxon invader. The ground is littered with the Roman tiles, the Roman tile nails, fragments of walls that were once covered in the Roman manner with colored distemper. Here, in what was obviously the rubbish pit, fragments put together make up a perfect specimen of a wine cup of the classic red Samian ware, delicately ornamented with a pattern that originally came from classic Greece. Here are fragments of the great amphorae used by Romans for importing wine. It should be noted that pots made by these vanished Bronze age people and the earliest of the Celts would not stand fire, so to cook their food they heated flint stones and threw them into the water until it boiled. It is a trick of savages to this day. Once the turf is removed the soil of the downs about these villages is strewn all over with millions of flint stones bearing unmistakable signs of having been made red hot and then plunged into water.

Ancient Greeks Used Coal As Did Romans

Coal probably was burned for the production of superheat used in the fabrication of metals during the iron age, as early as B. C. 1,000, but the first authentic use of this fuel is traced to Greece, where it was burned in B. C. 300. These and other facts relating to the common bituminous and rarer anthracite coal of today are presented by Malcolm MacFarlane, general fuel inspector of the New York Central, in an article in the latest number of the railroad's magazine.

"It seems reasonable," the writer says, "to believe that coal came into limited use with the discovery of metals because of the more intense heat required to work these. On this assumption coal may have been used as early as B. C. 1,000. Reports indicate that coal was mined quite extensively in England during the Roman invasion, but the earliest reliable record of its use there is in A. D. 852."

After tramping unconsciously over the enormous beds of coal in the Alleghenies, pioneers of America discovered the first bed of coal on the Illinois river at Ottawa in 1679. But nearly another century passed, says Mr. MacFarlane, before actual mining began, and then it was in Virginia, at a point 12 miles above Richmond, on the James river. This was in 1750. During the next 25 years it came into general use in that region and made possible the manufacture of cannon for Washington's army.

Grasshoppers Eat Up Peach Crop

According to reports from people residing on the Harlansburg road east of the city, considerable damage has been done in the past week or ten days by a vast swarm of grasshoppers numbering millions, which settled down in that section.

In one instance, a farmer of that district reported that they were destroying his very bounteous peach crop, apparently eating the peaches and foliage of the trees, with great relish.

Coolidge fixed a fence and pruned an apple tree. He can fix his political fence by pruning some plum trees.

Natives Of World's Northernmost Town Show Contentment

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, Aug. 25.—Hardy residents of these islands only 800 miles from the North Pole laugh when strangers speak of Spitzbergen as the rim of the earth. To them the real "old north" is many miles further on, among the nameless settlements near Point Morris Jessup, Greenland. There people among the strangest in the world live in primitive conditions known nowhere else.

Commander Byrd before his flight to the pole planned to establish his base among these Eskimos who number two or three hundred. He may go there in the summer of 1927. If so he will find them as Peary left them years ago—dirty, hospitable and profoundly content.

Peary was the first man really to become acquainted with them and live to bring back the story. His ship wintered several times at Point Morris Jessup and some of the natives accompanied him to the United States.

Mrs. Peary also took along a girl Ekrarisuark who was called "Bill" and exposed for a while to all the advantages of civilization.

The Peary Eskimos pined for their igloos and frozen warlus meat and went home. Two of them became prominent in the tribe merly by reason of the tall stories they told. They were eclipsed by one Samik however who became a plutocrat when Peary gave him a woden rowboat in which to fish.

Through his wealth Samik won the hand of "Bill" who after her study abroad was regarded as the tribe's choicest peach.

As the stories here go Mrs. Samik proved a good wife unspoiled by her sojourn in the southlands. The last traveler to see her said she had forgotten all her civilized ways and was no more squeamish about what went into the stew than any of her sisters who had not had the advantages of a finishing trip abroad.

Nowadays the only knowledge tribe has of the outside world is when a chance explorer or Scottish whaler happens to come near enough for a kajak-man to row out and trade some blue fox skins or when a very infrequent Danish trading agent comes.

They drink nothing stronger than ice water. Their sense of humor is pronounced though few of their stories are fit for print. Discomfited travelers who have overbalanced a kajak and got thoroughly feily wet have found that a whole camp would roll over with laughter instead of coming to fish them out.

Champion Hog-Caller Makes Challenge

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 25.—Fred Patzel, Madison, Neb., winner of several Nebraska contests, wherein hog-calling was the test, has issued a challenge to all comers. He said he preferred a contest based on accomplisment rather than on appearance, charm, volume and clarity.

Patzel limbered up his voice at the hog yards here recently. The minute his lyrical cadences began, a quiet hog yard scene was transform into intense activity of porkers speeding in answer to his sibilant invitation.

Dangerous age is when they are old enough to know better.

Much Wealth Back Of Great Minstrels

Money Seems No Object to Company Which Operates Seventy-two Big Shows Like One That Is Giving Free Performances Here.

Money seems no object to this company, for there seems to be no end of it as far as the great World's Minstrels are concerned, for they spend it like water.

One item of expense alone, that of the gorgeous costumes worn by its performers, represents a small fortune. And when it is considered that the company changes its entire program nightly, which necessitates carrying several different sets of costumes for each performer, the cost is staggering.

It is indeed refreshing to see the management of a show like this take a lively interest in our town, as Mr. Ross Dyar, manager of the World's Minstrels, has done. He is a most enthusiastic booster of everything and everybody in New Castle and he unhesitatingly tells his audiences that he wants to see no one at his show who is neglecting church or lodge meeting to do so. He urges every one to patronize home industries, points out the progressiveness of our local merchants, the splendid reputation of our local physicians and even generously recommends our movie shows, theatres, in spite of the fact that they are in a way competitive enterprises.

Another commendable thing about this show is the gentlemanly manner in which all the performers conduct themselves. There is none of the rowdyism and none of the tough characters that are so often observed around traveling troupes.

The show itself is a scream. The singing is exceptionally good; the comedy is clean and bright, and at the same time sparkling with wit and real fun.

The World's Minstrels will be here three weeks, giving a big free performance every night and a complete change of program each night at the B. & O. Grounds on South Mill street. Show starts at 8:00 p. m.

A blue horsehair hat completes the outfit worn by Helene Costello, screen actress.

Offutt Employes Enjoying Picnic

Employes of the W. J. Offutt Company stores, both in New Castle and Butler, numbering over one hundred, are enjoying a holiday today with a picnic as the big event at Etna Springs on the Slippery Rock Creek. The picnic is an annual affair.

At 1 o'clock today the combined employes of both stores gathered at the Springs and enjoyed a delicious picnic dinner, the menu being headed by fried spring chicken and corn-on-the-cob. The officials of the two stores furnished the menu free of charge.

The program for the remainder of the day consisted of swimming, boating and other forms of picnic sports. The day was selected due to the fact that the employes will be rushed Thursday by the Dollar Day bargains.

Weather is a good subject for conversation because everybody knows something about it.

Ben Franklin Wanted Maxims Put On Coins

He Believed Solomon's Wisdom Would Help Instill Thrift In All

The first third of the 19th century was the heyday of Staffordshire ware decorated with pictures. And not the least interesting of this china was the series picturing maxims, proverbs and morals.

Of this didactic china many pieces carried reproductions of "Poor Richard's' sayings, which our great American, Benjamin Franklin industriously circulated through his Poor Richard's almanack for 25 years.

The Poor Richard maxims were very near to Franklin's heart and he let no chance slip to get them into greater circulation. One of his projects—which however, was not carried out—was to imprint on one side of the copper coins of the new American republic some proverbs of Solomon and other sayings encouraging thrift.

"Diligence is the mother of good luck" and "Plow deep while sluggards sleep" were among those he suggested. His practical and benevolent mind pictured how many a family would read and ponder his precepts as they gathered round the hearth.—The Antiquarian.

Rich Indian Held In Marriage Quiz

"World's Wealthiest" Red Man Taken To Oklahoma To Face Contempt Charge

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Aug. 25.—Indicating a preference for tribal atmosphere rather than the white man's luxuries, Jackson Barnett, 76-year-old wealthy Creek Indian, returned from Los Angeles Sunday night in custody of a deputy United States marshal to answer a charge of contempt of court. Barnett had failed to appear in federal court here in connection with an investigation of his marriage in 1921 to a white woman.

"I am glad to be back and I want to stay," Barnett said as he left the train with Deputy Robert Bailey. "I want my horses brought back from California and will stay here."

Barnett, known as the "world's wealthiest Indian," obtained a large sum of money from oil royalties on his Oklahoma farm. He married Anna Laura Lowe of Tulsa at Coffeyville, Kan., in 1921, after unsuccessful attempts to have the ceremony performed in Oklahoma. Numerous suits are now pending in various state and federal courts relative to the status of a $550,000 gift to his white wife, as well as the donation of an equal amount to a college here.

Inaddition to questioning the legality of the gifts, the government charges Mrs. Barnett kidnaped the aged Creek from his home near Henrietta, Okla. Mrs. Barnett is understood to be enroute here from Los Angeles, where she objected to her husband's arrest Friday, declaring ill health would not permit a long overland trip.

Authorities indicated Barnett would not be held in jail pending his hearing August 27.

To settle the bet—the most beautiful women in the world are the brunettes and blonds.

It is suspected that the devil gets some of his ideas from human beings.

From Governor To Sheriff They Take Men's Places In Government.

Federal Roster Shows Several Feminine Incumbents In High Places.

This is a fact story, concerned with the principal experiment of women in office, an experiment that is working all over the United States. And the facts, gleaned from an individual survey, not complete but representative to an accurate degree of conditions in municipalities, counties, States and nations, as left by the last election, are as follows, says the Kansas City Star.

In the roll call of the State Legislature women answered in the lower houses in the last legislative sessions of Alabama, 1; Arkansas, 3; California, 4; Colorado, 4; Connecticut, 15; Delaware, 1; Georgia, 2; Illinois, 3; Indiana, 2; Kansas, 1; Maine, 1; Maryland, 2; Massachusetts, 2; Michigan, 1; Minnesota, 1; Mississippi, 2; Missouri, 1; Montana, 1; Nebraska, 3; Nevada, 4; New Hampshire, 13; New Jersey, 5; New Mexico, 3; New York, 1; North Carolina, 1; North Dakota, 2; Ohio, 8; Oklahoma, 3; Pennsylvania, 8; Rhode Island, 1; South Dakota, 4; Tennessee, 2; Utah, 4; Vermont, 11; Virginia, 2; Washington, 3; West Virginia, 2; and Wisconsin, 2.

There was a woman in the Senate of Connecticut and Mississippi. There were two women in the Ohio Senate, one in the Pennsylvania Senate, one in Illinois, one in New Mexico, one in Washington and one in Oregon. One hunrded and forty women in all.

It was twelve years ago that Helen Ring Robinson, of Colorado, was one of the seven wonders of the world as the only woman State Senator in captive, and at that date women had been elected in the lower house in only three other Western States—Washington, Wyoming and Utah.

Everybody knows that two of the forty-eight States have elected women as Governors. It is so generally known that in five of the forty-eight women are the Secretaries of State? In Texas, Mrs. Emma Grigsby Meharg; in New York, Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp; in Kentucky, Mrs. Emma Guy Cromwell; in Delaware, Miss Fannie Herington; in New Mexico, Mrs. Soledad C. Chacon. In South Dakota, the Assistant Secretary of State is Miss Gladys Pyle. No women are State Treasurers, but in both Washington and Idaho the Deputy States Treasures are women, and in Iowa the Deputy State Auditor is a woman.

Most people know that one of Ohio's six Supreme Court Judges is Miss Florence E. Allen, and that one of the twenty Circuit Judges of Illinois is Miss Mary Bartelme. Do they know also, that the chief clerk of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island is a woman? So is the clerk of the Supreme Court of Minnesota. So is the State Industrial Commissioner of Missouri, the secretary of Public Welfare of Pennsylvania, and the president of the State Board of Health in North Dakota. Women fill the office of State Superintendent of Instruction in eight States—Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Montana, North Dakota, New Mexico, Washington and Wyoming. Women are State regents, on State boards of control, on other boards and commissions in every State in the Union.

Hold Many State Offices

The range is wide in State experiment. Precedents are being established on every hand, but the actual percentage of women holding any State office is very low. Not until you come to the organization of the States by counties do you find something like size in the figures. You find that women are filthe office of the counties of one state, county treasurer in 60 per cent of another State's counties, the office of recorder in 80 per cent. of the counties of still a third State.

Today in Iowa more than half of the county superintendents of schools, 56½ per cent. are women. In Colorado, where they are sixty-three superintendents, fifty-two are women. In 64 per cent of North Dakota's counties and in 44 per cent. of Oregon's counties women have been elected to this office. Of Minnesota's eight-seven counties forty-three have women as superintendents. In Montana fifty of the fifty-six superintendents are women. In Wyoming nineteen of twenty-three. In Idaho thirty-six of forty-four. In Washington State twenty-one of thirty-six. In Wisconsin twenty-nine of seventy-one. In New Mexico 58 per cent. of the superintendents are women. Illinois employs fifteen women as county superintendents. It is noteworthy, as a matter of precedent, that Southern States like North Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee are inducting women into this county office. North Carolina has women superintendents of instruction in eighteen of its counties. Tennessee has seven, South Carolina three, Alabama one.

Eighty per cent, of the counties of Utah have elected women to the office of county recorder. In Iowa 56½ per cent, of the county recorders are women. More than one-fourth of Ohio's counties have women recorders. Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Montana employ women as recorders. In some States the register of deeds takes the place of the county recorder.

Columbia's Ice Field Feeds Three Oceans

Oregon's Mighty Stream Has Origin High In Rockies Of Canada

Far away, upon the roof of the continent, in the heart of Canada, rockies, the Columbia river has one of its beginnings, says the Portland Oregonian.

The Columbia ice field, named for the river, has an expanse of more than 150 square miles and from its melting glaciers spring the streams that form Bush river, one of the early confluents of the noble stream that defines Oregon's northern boundary for hundreds of miles.

It is one of the greatest ice fields in the western hemisphere, outside of the Arctic regions, north and south. Great peaks, white with snow, surround it, rising into the sky from 10,000 to more than 13,000 feet.

It is a region formidable and inaccessible except to hardy mountaineers. Much of it has never been trodden by man. In the midst of its lonely grandeur rises Mount Columbia, monarch of its section of the Rockies, second only to Mount Robson in the Canadian system of peaks.

The great ice field feeds streams that empty into three oceans, perhaps the only place in the world that there is such a diversion of water from a common source.

Where drainage from the ice is westerly the water runs to the Wood and Bush rivers and thence to the Columbia. On the north the melting ice feeds the branches of Athabasca, that runs to Great Slave lake and down the Mackenzie to the Arctic ocean.

Gorillas First Found By Hanno In 500 B. C.

Admiral Who Took Them To Carthage Thought They Were Wild People

As long ago as 500 B. C. gorillas were found by Hanno, the Carthaginian admiral when he, with about 30,000 others, sailed from Carthage round the coast of Africa to the west. They captured two or three of these hair-covered, massive, wild people, as he supposed them to be, but even in chains they proved so unmanageable that they had to be killed, says Alyse Cunningham, who brought back from Africa John Daniel I and John Daniel II. Writing in the London Mail, she continues:

"Somewhere about 1860, Paul Du Chaillu also discovered gorillas, although at that time he was not credited, especially when he wrote about them beating their chests. He did make a slight error when he observed they beat their chests in rage. We have found they always do it when they are very happy and excited.

"Many hair-raising, blood-curdling descriptions have been written about these animals. After exhaustive personal inquiries among natives and well known gorilla hunters, and personal experience, I fail to see why these animals should be any worse to handle than any other vegetarian animal.

"Certainly I have found my three of absorbing interest, for besides growing at roughly the same rate as man they show an enormous brain development which at times is quite uncanny."

Paris Tree Classed "Historic Monument"

PARIS, Aug. 25.—The latest object to be classified as a "historic monument" is a magnificent cedar tree near Rouen. It was planted in King Henry IV's time, three and a quarter centuries ago. Thus it is preserved from sale except with government permission.

An effort is being made to have the banks of the Seine, within the limits of Paris, so protected as buildings to be built near the Louvre may spoil the beauty of the view.

(International News Service)

RENOVO, Aug. 25.—William C. A train stopped within a few feet of the wreckage. The injured were taken to Renovo hospital.

Chiefs Of Police Gather In Erie

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Mayor Jos. C. Williams and Sheriff Thomas G. Sterrett yesterday welcomed the police chiefs of Pennsylvania to this city. The chiefs convened here for their thirteenth annual convention with about 250 officials in attendance.

The meeting was called to order by C. E. Briney, of Johnstown, president of the association. He responded to the addresses of welcome given by the Erie mayor and Sheriff Sterrett.

J. N. Tillard, of Altoona, secretary-treasurer of the association, presented his annual report at yesterday's session.

Lieut. Col. B. C. Goss, of Cleveland, regarded as an expert on the use of gas and chemicals in the combatting of crime, gave a talk accompanied by practical demonstrations of gasses and chemicals as applied particularly to protecting banks against banditry and in their use against criminals.

Long before the English channel was crossed for the first time by a swimmer—Captain Webb, in 1875—champions of many lands had pitted their skill and powers of endurance against the channel gods. So many failures had been recorded in fact that the feat was generally considered to be beyond human strength and stamina.

Rears 17 Beside Her Own Family

One Of Sioux City Woman's Adopted Brood Rise To U. S. Senatorship

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Aug. 24.—Mother Goose methods of raising a family won't do in these hectic times.

The "old woman who lived in a shoe" must have been of a very nervous temperament if she knew of nothing better to do with her brood send them to bed."

At least, so says Mrs. Eliza B. Roberts of Sioux City. And Mrs. Robert certainly should know whereof she speaks.

Most women consider they have done their duty to posterity when they have reared a family of three children. Not so, however, Mrs. Roberts. In addition to caring for three children of her own, this soft-spoken, sweet-faced Sioux City mother has adopted and reared seventeen others.

With all of the twenty children grown to manhood and womanhood, Mrs. Roberts proudly claims the mothering championship of the States of Iowa and South Dakota, and none has appeared to dispute her claim.

Most of the children have married and now have children of their own. Some have achieved prominence in business and the professions.

One of the boys, who for four years was under the guiding care and protection of Mrs. Roberts and of her husband, who died several years ago, is Peter Norbeck, Governor of South Dakota from 1917 to 1921, and now United States Senator from that State. Although never legally adopted, he was for four years a member of Mrs. Roberts' family.

Another of her children is an officer of a large bank in Kansas City, Mo. Others are farmers and merchants, doctors and lawyers. But proud as she is of the material success achieved by her children, Mrs. Roberts finds even greater satisfaction in the fact that her boys and girls have become "good Christian men and women," she asserts.

And, despite her eighty-two years, Mrs. Roberts practices her creed of industry by helping with the housework at the home of one of her daughters in Morningside, Sioux City suburb, with whom she now makes her home.

From Lydia E. Pinkham To Her Great Granddaughter

Have you ever heard a grandmother say, "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? Why, my mother and I took that fifty years ago." In some families the fourth generation is learning the merit of this dependable medicine.

From the days of the polanaise to the days of the radio, mothers have given this famous remedy to their daughters. The happy schoolgirl of today, like the demure maiden of the 1870's, knows she can rely on Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

TIMELY VIEWS on WORLD TOPICS

MEXICAN INDIAN IS STRIKING OUT AGAINST SPAIN

By H. C. HERRING

Secretary of the Social Relations Commission of the Congregational Churches of the U. S., in statement on recent return from Mexico.

Insofar as Mexico is revolting against the church, it is far more of an Indian revolt against Spain than it is a religious revolt. President Calles said to me: "We have no quarrel with any religion. Our quarrel is with the foreign imposed heirarchy."

I am convinced the present Mexican government is not hostile to the Roman church. Whatever hostility there may be is directed against any hint of foreign intervention. They resent the appeal of the Mexican church to America.

The Roman church has strong leadership. I met many priests and leaders. They are men of fine intellects and genuine concern for the welfare of Mexico. They are convinced that the country is being ruined by the Calles administration, and they do as they think right in bitterly opposing it.

I doubt whether you can say that the struggle in Mexico is primarily religious. It is a war between two social philosophies. The present government of Mexico is liberal in cast. The Roman church is traditionally allied with the conservatives. That furnishes enough powder for the fireworks. Add religion to the conflagration and you have a pretty mess.

The Roman church came over with the conquest, the cross was associated with the sword. Rome and Spain were one. Now at last the Mexican Indian is aroused. He is striking out at Spain and all that Spain brought to Mexico. In this the Mexican is undoubtedly unfair to the church. The church is accused of being responsible for all the ills to which Mexico is heir. The church is loaded up with the blame for everything Spain ever did.

But I am optimistic about Mexico and her church. There are brains enough down there to find a way out. The government means business and will probably have its way, but there is no reason why that way should prevent the church exercising all reasonable functions.

Mexico is incurably religious and the Roman church possesses the love of the people. Of course, the church has made mistakes, but I have no patience with those who would load all the sins in the calendar upon the church. It is grossly unfair. As a Protestant, I hope that this conflict will be speedily settled and that the Roman church and the Mexican government will find some amicable basis for living together. Mexico is a Catholic country, and the Catholic church has a great deal to offer.

Two Are Killed, Eight Injured In Bomb Blast

Bank In Heart Of Downtown Section In Pittsburgh Bombed Yesterday

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—Two persons were killed and eight seriously injured here yesterday afternoon when a bomb was exploded in the Farmers Deposit National Bank building in the heart of the downtown district here.

The bomb exploded, according to police, when bank police and several patrons attempted to capture an unidentified man who had threatened to "blow up the bank" if he was not given $2,000 which he demanded of a teller.

Mellett's Wife Enters Damage Suit In Court

By DAVID SENTNER,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CANTON, O., Aug. 25.—Throwing the evidence into federal jurisdiction of the Don R. Mellett murder, Mrs. Florence Mellett, widow of the slain Canton newspaper editor, will file a $100,000 damage suit in Cleveland federal court this afternoon against Louis Mazer, "Pat" McDermott and a resident of Massillon, Ohio, alleged conspirators in the killing of her husband, it was learned exclusively Tuesday by International News Service.

Mrs. Mellett alleges through the murder plot she and her children were deprived of support and comfort. The plaintiff is now a resident of Indianapolis.

Mazer is now under arrest in Cleveland charged with the murder. McDermott is being sought as the missing "trigger man." The Massillon man has been questioned in connection with the case, but no charges have been brought against him to date.

Officials Probe Death Of Girl

(International News Service)

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 15.—Authorities Tuesday renewed their probe into circumstances surrounding the mysterious death of Dorothy Kirk, 21, who died in a hospital here shortly after having been brought there by a young man whom police are questioning.

Although no charges have been placed against the youth, said to be a medical student and a native of France, police stated they were working on the theory that the girl had been given medicine which might have been a contributing cause in her death.

Friends and relatives of the girl, police said, have told them she had been taking medicine for some time for an ailment and that the young man had occasionally prescribed for her.

Coroner A. P. Hammond continued his investigation today while chemists analyzed pills found in the girl's room. Police said a quantity of pills also were found in the boy's home.

Queer Shapes Of N. Y. Structures

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Some of the most curiously shaped buildings in the world are located in New York without one of them being planned as a freak.

This condition arises from their having been planned according to streets, which originally were laid along twisting roads or Indian trails.

The Flatiron building is the best known, with its knife like edge facing north while the southern exposure is widened in the space between converging streets. Broadway has a similar shaped building every few blocks up to Times Square.

Broadway bisects Manhattan Island from the southeast corner to the northwest. The remainder of the main streets are laid out in rectangular squares, which causes the odd shaped lots to appear at each intersection.

Times Square itself is formed by a junction of this sort, and is anything but square, being rather more the shape of a diamond, as Broadway crosses Seventh avenue there from the east and then turns north.

An apartment house located at Riverside Drive and 116th street is built inside of a long curve of the latter street which makes the building a triangle with one side "ballooned" outward. The building across 116th street, a companion to this one, is built with the curve inward. If the street could be removed and the two buildings joined they would dovetail.

Five Hurt In Machine Wreck

(International News Service)

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Aug. 25.—Charles Kennelley, 23, of Lock Haven, sustained a fractured skull, his wife, 21, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. William Kennelly, escaped with severe lacerations, and the driver, William Kennelly, of Hughesville, was seriously shocked and injured when the car in which they were coming from Erie to Lock Haven crashed into a car driven by Eugene Huber, of Ludlow, near the Warren county line Tuesday. They were taken to the Warren General hospital. Charles Kennelly's condition is serious. The car struck a rock by the side of the road with such force it was thrown into the Huber car.

Only a few more weeks left in which to get all washed up for the long cold spell.

Son And Daughter Of Stricken Lonaconing Family Sent To Hospital

LONACONING, Aug. 25.—Two more victims of the disease diagnosed as bacillary dysentery, which has caused seven deaths in the family of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Green, farmers, of Beechwood, near here, since Tuesday, Aug. 3, were added to the list of sufferers today when Thomas, aged 19, and his sister, 10, were admitted to the Miners hospital at Frostburg, for treatment.

They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Sampson Green, also of Beechwood, and are believed to have contracted the disease from the use of cistern water found to be polluted with germs of dysentery on the Green farm while on a visit there. Mrs. Charles Whitman, 20, their sister, who died Saturday, is believed to have been another victim of the disease which has almost wiped out the family of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Green, who, with four other members of their family are in the hospital suffering from the effects of drinking the polluted water.

Investigation has shown the cistern on the Green farm has no outlet for drainage and the water is not filtered. It held only rain water that ran from the gable roof of the farm house. Volunteers from here and Beechwood plan to clean out the well, many persons believing poison weeds or some other objects may have been thrown into the cistern, causing the water to become poisonous. It is said the cistern has not been cleaned for seven years, since the Green family moved to the farm.

Beside Mr. and Mrs. Green the other members of his family now in the hospital under treatment for bacillary dysentery are Florence, Alfred and Mary Green. They are in a serious condition although each has been inoculated by Dr. E. D. Taylor, who is treating the stricken family.

The disease has the effects of causing the victim to practically waste away, they have no appetite for food and nourishment accepted is practically forced upon them. Twins of Mr. and Mrs. Green, born two weeks ago, are the only members of their immediate family not afflicted with the disease. They are being cared for by nurses at the hospital.

Quota Restriction Machinery Working More Efficiently

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. — Immigration during the fiscal year 1925-26, the second year under the two percent quota act, showed a slight increase over that of the previous year, amounting to four percent, but partly owing to declining emigration of aliens from the United States, our net gain in population through immigration was 13 percent greater than the year before, according to an analysis made by the National Industrial Conference Board, 247 Park avenue, New York.

Total immigration of aliens during the past fiscal year amounted to 304,488, as against 294,314 in the previous year. Only 76,992 aliens, 17 per cent less than in 1924-25, left the United States, leaving a net gain in population of 227,496, which is 64 percent less than the net immigration during the fiscal year 1923-24, the last before the new restriction act went into effect.

AGED MAN DIES AT AUTO WHEEL

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Seized with an attack of acute dilation of the heart while he was driving alone on the Wood road, northeast of Mill Village, James Dowler, 70, of Norwalk, O., dropped over dead at the wheel of his machine.

Dowler, according to Coroner D. S. Hanley, who made an investigation, had just left the home of his brother, Oscar Dowler, on the Wood road. He was returning to Norwalk when Mrs. Goldie Murphy, who lives near Mill Village, saw him pull up to the side of the road, stop his machine and fall over on the steering wheel. She ran to his assistance, but he was dead when a doctor arrived.

At any rate, a debt settlement gives a new and unique definition of the word "settlement".

Jack White Wins Medal For Riding At Culver School

Jack White, son of City Solicitor and Mrs. Robert M. White of Hazlecroft avenue, returned from Culver Military academy at Culver, Ind., yesterday wearing a medal which he received for being the best new trooper of the Culver Black Horse Troop. This is quite an honor considering the fact that before going to the academy a short time ago Jack had no experience except for having ridden a pony.

The Culver Black Horse Troop does all kinds of bareback and fancy riding such as is usually seen in a wild west show. Jack, whose parents sent him to Culver because he was a little under weight came back over weight and the very picture of health and strength.

Brother Asks That Valentino Funeral Be Delayed Awhile

(International News Service)

PARIS, Aug. 25.—A request that the funeral services for Rudolph Valentino be delayed until he can reach New York was made by radio today by Alberto Guglielmo, brother of the dead screen star. Alberto caught the boat train to connect with the White Star liner Homeric at Havre.

"I was surprised to learn of the plans to hold my brother's funeral on Monday," Alberto said just before boarding the train. "Since it is planned to delay the services that long, I sent a wireless message asking for a delay of two more days, which would permit me to attend the services."

Society Girls Must Pay For Street Shimmy

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 25.—"No sir, society girls from New York cannot visit Honesdale, Pa., do the shimmy on the main street and get away with it. Justice of the Peace Cory, of Honesdale, today fined a young woman for just that.

The dancer visited Honesdale along with ten other young women, all coming from a summer camp which New York society girls are attending.

In court today the justice ordered the fair prisoner to strut her stuff. After she complied the justice declared "your conduct was shocking, $20 fine."

She paid.

Rev. H. W. Lambert At Missionary Meeting At Beulah Beach, O.

Rev. H. W. Lambert, pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, on Pearson street, and his wife left this morning for Beulah Beach at Vermilion, O., where they will attend a missionary convention held at that place.

Among the out-standing speakers who will be present are Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Trumbull of New York, the former being the vice president of the organization, Rev. E. J. Richards and Rev. W. T. McArthur.

Rev. and Mrs. Lambert expect to return home Saturday evening.

Judge Prather To Run Third Time

MEADVILLE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Friends of Judge Thomas J. Prather of the Crawford county courts have been informed that he will seek a third term of that office at the coming election. Judge Prather previously served two terms of ten years each. Even though the general election is 15 months away, many of the aspirants are beginning to line up their organizations. It is understood that two other attorneys, O. Clare Kent and Captain Wesley B. Best, have stated they will also run for the office.

IT MADE MY WIFE FEEL TWENTY YEARS YOUNGER

"Yes Sir, Plant Juice Saved Me Hundreds of Dollars a Year and Brought Happiness to Our Home," Says Altoona Man.

"Since this Dillingham's Plant Juice has done her so much good, my wife says she actually feels 20 years younger", declared John Schmid, 2017 Twelfth Ave., Altoona, Pa.

"She has been confined to her bed practically all the time during the past two years suffering from high blood pressure, nervousness and dizziness and was subject to frequent vomiting spells. She tried all sorts of medicines but nothing did her a particle of good until she began taking this Plant Juice.

"Now she sleeps the whole night through and awakes in the morning feeling perfectly refreshed and able to go out and enjoy herself, something she wasn't able to do for a long time until she got this wonderful medicine. She can eat a hearty meal now and life is so much brighter to her that she is perfectly happy again.

"It just seems marvelous that she can get a good night's rest now, because before she tried Plant Juice, she would simply roll and toss in bed and when morning came she was practically exhausted. She'd be hungry too, but just couldn't eat and certainly was in a bad condition but Plant Juice just made her troubles disappear.

"Both my wife and I have recommended Plant Juice to some of our friends and they are just as pleased with it as we are. This medicine has not only saved me hundreds of dollars a year but has brought happiness to our entire household".

Plant Juice is sold in New Castle by Eckerd's of New Castle, Inc., and is sold by all leading druggists everywhere.

Air's Vapor Traced To Trees, Not Seas

Forester Tells Scientists Acre Of Woods Gives 2,000,000 Pounds Of Moisture A Year

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Forests contribute more water vapor to the air than lakes and streams and consequently are the actual rain-producing sections of the continent Raphael Zon of the United States Forest Service, St. Paul, Minn., told the forestry section of the International Congress of Plant Sciences here.

Modern studies of the circulation of water in the atmosphere have tended to upset the old theory that wind carried vapor from the oceans over the continent where it condensed in the form of rain or snow Mr. Zon declared. It is now believed he added that the oceans contribute only two-ninths of the precipitation and that the remaining seven ninths is delivered from evaporation.

Measurement of evaporation he plained has shown that lakes and streams contribute less vapor to the air than bare moist soils; that bare moist soils contribute less than land covered with grass crops and that of all vegetative coverings a dense forest contributes most.

In order to produce one pound of dry wood substance from 500 to 1000 pounds of water must pass through the body of a tree he said and an acre of forest must give off into the air from two and one half to four million pounds of moisture per year or enough to cover an acre of land 12 inches deep.

H. K. Hayes of the University of Minnesota told the section on agronomy that the growing of varieties of crop plants resistant to specific diseases is the cheapest method of controlling the disease.

Dieting Bad For Disposition, Says Lucretia Bori

There are other ways to health than by dieting, and in the September issue. Lucrezia Bori, the famous lyric soprano of the Metropolitan, tells the readers of McCall's some of the things she thinks important as aids to retaining of youth and beauty.

"One of the very first things I had to learn was that a singercannot do what you American's call 'slump.' The voice is an instrument so delicate that it is sensitive to one's physical condition. Only the buoyant health that comes from sane living can keep this instrument in perfect singing trim.

"I am afraid I have no fine-sounding 'beauty secrets' to give. I have only a few simple little rules for myself that I try to follow faithfully. First of all, my exercise. Every morning I walk briskly in the open air. And if it is wet underfoot so that I cannot go out, I can tell you that I feel the loss the next day. In the long New York winters, I find I put on a little extra weight because I miss some of my exercise. Of course, there are excellent indoor exercises, which one must do with the windows open, but it is never quite the same, I can assure you, though that I would rather take indoor exercise than have to diet.

"Another rule that I have," she went on, "is never to say out loud that I am tired. Of course, I am often tired. In addition to appearing in a performance at least twice a week, I must go to rehearsals, plan and try on costumes. And my own wardrobe takes much time for I love clothes so passionately that I can hardly wait till summer comes when I go to Paris and revel in the smart, new styles. Then, too, there are photographers and reporters, charity concerts and singing for the phonograph records.

"No matter what happens, however, do not let those fatal words, 'I am so tired,' cross my lips. Perhaps it is a superstition with me. But is it not a fact with many women let themselves get into the habit of saying, ten times a day, that they are 'just too tired' to do this or that? If they say it enough, they can make themselves believe it.

DENVER, Aug. 25.—Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., is to come in possession of one of the two remaining original Wells-Fargo coaches, vehicles that in the '50s and early '60s formed the chief means of transportation for passengers and valuables across the plains and mountainous country of the frontier west.

When President Kerr D. MacMillan, of Wells College, recently expressed the wish to have one of the coaches for Wells College museum, W. L. Petrikin, president of the Great Western Sugar company, father of a student at Wells, instituted a search for one of the relics. After many weeks it was learned that one of the two original "jack" coaches used on the stage line from St. Joseph, Mo., through Denver and to the Pacific coast, was owned by an aged ranchman living near Saratoga, Wyo. The other coach is on exhibition in the Wells-Fargo offices in San Francisco.

Negotiations were opened with the Saratoga ranchman, named Swanson, who was reluctant to depart with the relic until he learned it was to be used as an object of "art" in Wells College museum.

The Swanson "jack" coach was built in Concord, Maine, nearly 70 years ago, especially for the Wells-Fargo service. It was found to be in a splendid state of preservation, its timber staunch and sound, and the leather rockers upon which body was swung as solid as the day it was built—a tribute to the old time leather tanners.

Shortly after its acquisition by Petrikin, the coach was paraded through the streets of Denver behind a six horse team, and was then crated for shipment to Wells College.

Invention Eliminates Noise In Iron Working

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. — The prospect of "noiseless" building construction has brightened as a result of tests just completed by the Bureau of Standards.

With an electric welding process substituted for the nerve-wracking clatter of the riveting machines, two plates of a big steel girder were joined together so solidly that the bureau's crushing machine failed to break them apart. The machine has a 5000-ton force, and as increasing power was applied the girder itself buckled while the joint held fast. The tests were conducted in co-operation with the American Bridge company, which is planning to erect a rivetless building. A statement today by the bureau said the "gratifying success of the process promises to eliminate much of the cannonading of the pneumatic hammer usually associated with riveting construction."

Illinois Roads Aid Business Of Busses

(International News Service)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 25.—Operating fleets of 872 busses, with an organization with nearly $10,000,000 invested, 78 motor bus lines now blanket the state of Illinois, aided ably by the state's system of hard roads, perhaps the best in the union.

These busses last year operated 25,280,129 miles and carried 76,738,739 passengers.

These figures are taken from a report made by Chester G. Moore, executive vice president of the Illinois Motor Transport association, for an interstate commerce commission hearing.

Of these 78 companies, 63 operate inter-city busses only while 17 have interstate operations. Of the 872 busses, 328 ply between the cities of Illinois, the rest operating within the limits of the cities of Illinois.

How the bus lines compare with the steam lines is shown by the fact that in Illinois during the year 1925 the railroads carried 83,553,564 fare paying passengers at the average fare of 78 3-10 cents per passenger while the inter-city busses carried 8,153,021 fare paying passengers at an average fare of 22 6-10 cents per passenger. As the city busses operating in cities only carried additional 68,585,748 passengers, it is shown, the report states, that 47 8-10 per cent of the passengers carried by the steam railroads and the busses combined were handled on busses and 52 2-10 per cent on the steam railroads.

Banker's Money Didn't Help Him

"Have spent a fortune in doctoring. Twelve years ago I became afflicted with stomach trouble which steadily became worse. I frequently became prostrated with colic attacks and bloating. My doctors wanted to operate for gall stones. I wished to avoid an operation and on advice of a friend tried MAYR'S with excellent results as since taking it about 2 years ago my trouble has entirely disappeared". It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Lady Astor Tells Maine Folks How To Raise Families

(International News Service)

ISLEBORO, Me., Aug. 25.—Telling of her work for the betterment of children, Lady Nancy Astor, M. P., made what she called her only platform speech before 300 permanent residents here. Summer residents were politely excluded from the town hall where the distinguished visitor delivered her address.

Lady Astor appeared at he invitation of the Isleboro Board of Trade. She urged the uplifting and upbuilding of character in the rising generation and explained why she had entered politics. At the conclusion of her talk she stationed herself at the door and shook hands with every one as they left.

Lady Astor's opening was an inquiry regarding reporters and she was assured only one was present and he got in by accident anyhow.

After telling of her work for the children Lady Astor told of her aid to her husband when he was an M. P. and of her decision to seek the vacant seat when he went into the Lords.

She said she did not wonder that at first the presence of a woman was distasteful to the 600 other members of the House of Commons and adding that the presence of a man would be distasteful to a gathering of 600 women. She said she intended to stand for parliament as long as the people wanted her.

Lady Astor declined to comment on Maine politics. She said she knew nothing about them but she did say she understood Maine had a very nice governor.

Child Fatalities Alarming St. Louis

(International News Service)

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 25.—As part of the campaign to check the amazing increase in the number of fatalities of children in street accidents, 28 drivers whose motor cars killed children were brought before a special committee of the St. Louis Safety Council.

This plan was decided upon when at a meeting here it was brought out that seven children had been killed in the first nine days of August by automobiles.

To get at the other apparent cause for the number of accidents, speakers will appear before mothers' clubs at the public schools and meetings of the parent'teachers' association and talk to mothers on warning children of the dangers of playing in the streets. The council believes that the two-fold education will cut down the automobile mortality rate.

WASHED THROUGH MILES OF SEWER RING IS FOUND

(International News Service)

COVINGTON, Ky., Aug. 25. — Service is the motto of William E. Blackburn, public works commissioner here. When there is anything to be done "Bill" finds a way to do it or knows the reason why.

So the other day when Mrs. Elmer Wadsworth dropped her $500 diamond ring into the drainpipe of a lavatory—she called Bill.

Blackburn blocked off a section of sewers and stationed a man with a fine mesh screen at the outfall of the line. He then had a fire hose laid from a plug to the drain trap in the Wadsworth basement and began pouring a four-inch stream of water through the system. A few minutes later the man with the screen caught the ring several miles from the Wadsworth home.

It's easy to pick out the asses, even if they havn't funny signs on the back of their ears.

Workman Falls From Scaffold At Courthouse

MERCER, Pa., Aug. 25.—Porter B. Smith, well known Sharon carpenter, employed with William McIntyre Sons' Company, of Sharon, Mercer county court house, was seriously injured when the scaffold on which he was working on the south side of the building broke and precipitating to the concrete floor of the portico, a distance of 38 feet.

The accident was witnessed by "trusties" from the jail, who were working on the lawn on the south side of the park under the direction of Custodian George S. McElheny. They hurried to his assistance and when they reached him they found him laying unconscious in a pool of blood.

He was removed to the north portico of the court house, placed on a bench, and Miller's ambulance summoned. First aid was rendered by Dr. R. M. Hope, who was joined in a few minutes by Dr. M. G. Yeager. As soon as the ambulance arrived he was taken to the Mercer Cottage hospital and placed on the operating table, where he remained for several hours.

Smith was working in repairing the windows on the third story on the south side of the court house beneath the ceiling of the south portico. A scaffold had been fastened to the window casing and to reach the top of the window frames the unfortunate man was working from the top of a step ladder. A workman engaged in cleaning the dome in coming down the stairs in the inside of the building noticed the slanting position of the step ladder, who thought it was slipping and called out to Smith. The next he heard was the crash of the falling scaffold.

A 2x4 used as a brace had snapped in two beneath the weight of the workman and one-half of the scaffolding was torn from the window casing. The breaking of the 2x4 was without warning and Smith had no opportunity to save himself, if such had been possible.

Evidently in falling he had attempted to save his face and head, as his right arm was beneath his face when picked up, looking as though he had placed it there as a protection as he was being hurled to the floor of the portico.

WHO'S WHO IN THE DAYS NEWS

PRESIDENT CALLES

The present religious troubles in Mexico have brought into international prominence President Plutarco Elias Calles, the Sonoran who directs the nation's affairs from the great palace of Chapultepec—the White House of Mexico. There is no question that the president is determined to enforce the fundamental religious law and the regulations promulgated for their enforcement. One has but to talk with him five minutes in order to understand that Calles (to use an American expression) is in the fight to the finish, and those who know him say there will be no compromise and that his intention is that the laws will be carried into effect to the letter, regardless of protests of the church or its supporters and sympathizers in this or other countries.

The Mexican president is in the prime of life and physically trained to the minute. He is usually up with the dawn, and no matter how pressing the duties of state, may be he finds time for his horseback ride or his swim in one of the beautiful natatoriums of Chapultepec. The president, who is about 50 years of age, like most of the men who are occupying high position in Mexico today, sprang from the middle classes. His career has been entirely identified with what is known as the revolutionary movement — the movement that started with Madero and has remained in control since the time in 1911 when that unfortunate president drove Porfirio Diaz out of Mexico to await death in a foreign land.

Nearly six feet high, without a pound of fat, as straight as a Sioux Indian, with black hair in which the silver has begun to appear and a closely cropped mustache. President Calles is known to all Mexico City as the man whose brain is the controlling factor in the government of the country. It is said that his blood is partly European, which may account for the fact that, unlike so many other leading Mexicans of today, there is only a slight indication of the Indian blood in his features.

As a boy in his teens Calles labored in a Sonora flour mill, at the same time acquiring an education that made possible his later occupation as a school teacher. While he was still very young the uprising against the dictatorship of Diaz got under way and from the first Calles was a sympathizer with those whose cause was directed against old Don Porfirio. So he joined the revolution and bore an active part in the campaigns directed against Pancho Villa by the late General Benjamin Hill, the Mexican of American blood, one of the principal cogs in Mexico's revolutionary machine when Carranza started his successful fight against Victoriano Huerta, the usurper. America held Huerta partly responsible for the killing of Madero.

The Sonoran was on the side of Carranza and later when Carranza was himself deposed and assassinated Calles sided with his friend Obregon. The latter, becoming president, made Calles, then governor of Sonora, his Minister of War and Marine. Obregon, whom Calles succeeded, remains the firm friend of the president, a friendship the importance of which no person in Mexico minimizes.

SHORT ROMANCES OF EVERYDAY LIFE

The Joy of Service.

By Claire Wesson

HELEN FREELAND stood in the parlor of Meade Hall. She was the center of a group of girls who were none the less bright for the sweet gravity which had rested on them for the last few minutes.

"Girls," Helen was saying. "I wish I could help you to understand, help you to feel the joy of a life of service. Most of you are pledged to the performance of duty and have, I think, a worthy purpose in life. But, dear girls, this is not enough. It is only when we gloriously forget ourselves that we really begin to live. As we go on we shall find happiness in giving, not getting. It is my dearest hope for each one of you that she may know the joy of a life of service."

Helen's voice shook with her earnestness. The girls, some of them moved to tears, sang a stanza and gathered around her to say good night. Doris Kemp pressed her right arm lovingly.

"I am beginning to understand, Miss Freeland.

"And I am beginning to feel, Miss Freeland."

"And I." "and I," echoed several of the others.

Plain little Eunice Borden lifted her grave eyes.

"I can't understand it," she said wistfully. "There is just a plain duty for me."

"Oh! but Eunice, you will, you must!" Doris and Amy placed each an arm about her as they went out together.

Seated in happy reverie at her own pretty desk, Helen drew her portfolio to her.

"I must write to Inez before I slip."

Inez was a classmate whom Helen called her alter ego.

Her pen flew over the sheets. "It is bedtime," she wrote, "and the hour finds me spent and weary, which is not unusual. But I feel as Paul did when he wanted to spend and be spent. Dear Inez, I could write this to no one else. I say it in all reverence and humility, and you will understand. Yesterday I met Katherine Bird. I had not seen her since our graduation. She has changed. Her life seems to be one continuous round of pleasure-seeking and—you will hardly doubt me—she does not look happy.

"I gather my special group of girls around me often for a little talk. It is my constant endeavor to make the dear carefree creatures realize that their only real happiness can be in a life of service, and tonight I could see that they are beginning to respond. I am very happy, Inez."

A little noise in the corridor made Helen glance up. Her eye fell upon an unopened letter.

"I hadn't noticed this. It must have been brought when I was in the class-room. One of Bob's scrawls."

She opened it and read:

"Dear Helen: I hope this finds you well. Dad wanted me to write and tell you how we are. He said mother has been sick with newmonear, and it has left her with a complerkation. She isn't able to do anything but she goes all 'round the house telling everybody everything is rong. Myrtle gets mad. She is rather yung to manage a house. She can stue proons, but the bread is rather dowey.

"Dad wanted to send for you, but mother said she'd as soon send for the queen of Sheebar if she was living at this eera. Doctor Burt says time will work wunders for her. I wish old time would begin those stunts right away. Harold and Davy are fearce—just scrap, scrap, scrap all the time.

"I go to school, at least I start with a book-strap, but I don't always arive. I'm in Jack Doane's bunch now, and there's something doing most all the time.

"Thare's a Mister Toomy holding revivle meatings, but he hasn't convurted any of our bunch. You can bet your sweet life on that. We don't give him a chanst.

"Well, I've got a date with Jack. No more at present, and I remane your brother.

"ROBERT W. FREELAND."

"Say, sis, can you lend me five dollars? I think I can pay you back soon. Send it under cover to Jack Doane. Honest, Helen, I nead it awful bad.

BOB."

Helen's brows had knitted as she read. She rose and opened the door to glance across the corridor. There was still a light in Miss Armington's room.

"I'm so glad you're up," Helen said as she entered. "Here is my brother Bob's latest missive. It may give you a laugh," she added nervously.

But Miss Armington did not laugh. Her eyes were full of sympathy.

"Poor children! How much they need you! I think you must go, Helen, dear."

Helen had been a favorite with Miss Armington ever since her early student days. Helen paled at this.

"Oh, Miss Armington! You don't know what I'll be up against. My stepmother and I are never congenial at her best, and now—! Myrtle, too, is rather difficult—moody and morbid at times. Bob is good-hearted, but, as you can imagine, he cares chiefly for mischief. My little half-brothers are noisy and hard to control. Father will be depressed and a little irritable; and the housekeeping is hard, too. We haven't any of the up-to-date appliances in our home."

Miss Armington stroked her hand gently.

"I know, dear. It must be hard. This is one of the times when service means sacrifice. It will tax all your resources, too; but I think you will win out, and this is really a great opportunity for service, Helen."

"I thought," Helen faltered, "that perhaps I could not be spared just at this time."

Miss Armington reflected. "My cousin, Laura Chapin, who has been too ill to teach, is much better. I think she could finish out the term. I could wire her in the morning. But it is for you to decide, my dear."

Helen had grown paler still.

Miss Armington smiled kindly.

"We shall count on having you back. You are doing splendid work here. Your personal influence with the girls is worth as much as your success in the curriculum. It will be only for a time, my dear."

Only for a time! To Helen's impetuosity Miss Armington might have said, "it is only for eternity my dear!"

"I'll let you know in the morning," she said at last.

"That's right. Sleep over it."

"Sleep!" Helen echoed the word bitterly in her own room. She caught up the letter she had written to Inez, tore it fiercely into strips and tossed them into her waste-basket.

"Helen Freeland! You are a fraud. You've just been happy here in this congenial atmosphere, with these charming girls adoring you. How you have been preaching to them and posing for them as a model of unselfishness! And now at the first test you fall down. The joy of service! You had better be learning of dear, sober little Eunice to do your plain duty when you hate it."

She bowed her head upon her desk and sobbed miserably. "Tried in the balances and found wanting. Oh, I can't, I can't!"

But the next morning Helen and her trunk were on the 10:37 northbound train.

"I've come," said the woman politician, "to ask you to support me."

"I'm sorry, Miss," replied the man, "but you're too late. I've been married for years."

"Can you propose any remedy to this deadlock?"

"Yes; why not use a skeleton key?"

The Green-Eyed Monster

By Margaret Taylor

AUNT FANNIE had come to make a visit with her favorite niece, who had been married a year. As is characteristic of young folk who have always depended on the sage counsel of their elders, Eda began unloading her troubles on Aunt Fannie.

"To tell the truth, Aunt Fannie, I am the most wretched creature you ever saw. If a girl could only see her future husband as he will later turn out to be! I thought Stanley would be the easiest person to live with, but he is everything I detest. He is unambitious, stingy, selfish and thriftless—content to eat, sleep and read his daily paper.

"Now, if he were like Ula's husband. He has some pep to him. He has bought a lovely home, with beautiful grounds, has a big car and a radio, and dresses Ula in all the latest styles. And he himself always looks as though everything he has on is new."

Eda paused for breath and searched Aunt Fannie's face for judgment of her information.

Aunt Fannie's countenance, however, was as innocent of criticism as the sleeping cat's. Carefully binding off the heel of a stocking, she casually remarked:

"I think Stanley has got on your nerves. Anyone is apt to if you shut yourself up with him and think of nothing else. Why not invite Ula and her husband for a visit of a week or two? Probably they would be glad to spend part of their vacation, at least, with you. I shall be here to help with the work, so you can be free most of the time to enjoy yourself. Of course, you will have the benefit of Ula's car while they are here and they will plan some trip about every day."

Ula and George accepted the invitation with evident pleasure, quite overwhelming, in fact. Moreover, they generously informed Stanley and Eda that they had made other visits during the year where they had driven the people all over the country, and had had no recompense except the cost of gasoline and the paying of the few hotel bills.

Aunt Fannie listened to all Ula's remarks with absorbing interest. She told Stanley and Eda to go to it while the going was good. They did. And Eda watched George with envy as, in his natty sport clothes, he skilfully steered the car. She gazed with something much like disdain upon the useless Stanley by her side and almost wished she had the right to the front seat occupied by Ula.

The next morning was the third day of the month. Their guests were in bed when the mail arrived—a big bunch of it, mostly forwarded for their visitors. Stanley handed the forwarded mail to Eda.

"Nice lot of bills, aren't there? From the auto company, the radio company, department stores, tailors, butchers, grocers, magazines, newspapers, florists, candy shops, and lots more—dealers' names printed so big you can't help but read them. No wonder they needed help on their vacation."

Eda made no reply, but took the mail up to the guest room and thrust it through the door. "I'd be ashamed to put it right into their hands," she thought.

But the guests had not so much pride in their privacy as had Eda, for she soon heard them quarreling over the bills, each denouncing the other as being mostly responsible for a crisis.

Aunt Fannie informed Stanley and Eda that she had heard George exclaim that "that car has to be back by tomorrow night or there will be an arrest!"

But while they were all eating breakfast, George exclaimed, with exaggerated regret, that they had a letter telling of the illness of a member of the firm he worked for and that he and Ula must go home immediately. "Such a shame to lose our trip to Montreal," he sighed.

When they were gone and Stanley had started to pull the neglected weeds in the garden, Aunt Fannie quizzed Eda mischievously:

"How would you like to swap husbands now with Ula?"

Eda blushed with chagrin. "It's nice to find out one is a fool in person," she said, then, with sudden intuition, "You had me invite George and Ula for me to find out their wretched way of managing and compare it with Stanley's good judgment!"

Aunt Fannie merely grinned.

High Finance

By Joella Johnson

BENJIE was experiencing the misery of an empty pocket. On the opposite sidewalk paraded his small sweetheart, Dottie Hill, in a white ruffled dress and pink bow. Probably she wanted an ice cream cone. She wouldn't get it, Benjie decided, grimly. He hated Dottie's brother George, who had won Benjie's big sister, Priscilla, from Gordon Lake. Why, Gordon used to keep Benjie's pockets overflowing with bribes, and a fellow couldn't wring a quarter out of George.

Benjie's gloom deepened. He watched Gordon step out of a big gray car, and sighed to think of the tips he had missed. If only he could make Pris "mad" on George, maybe Gordon would come back.

Oh, gee! Here was Pris driving up in her runabout now. Going to the postoffice.

She stopped as Benjie placed himself in her way.

"Oh, Pris! I've got something to tell you. It's about George. Of course, if you don't want to hear it—"

"Well, don't tell the whole town. What is it?" Benjie put his hands in his pocket and traced a pattern on the sidewalk with his heel.

"Oh, nuthin'," shortly. A pause, then, "I saw George out riding with Doris last night."

"Are you sure?" He could tell by her voice that she was mad.

"Oh, sure. He was just bringin' her home, and—"

"That's enough." She was mad all through now. She gave Benjie a nickel, and he eased his conscience over a solitary ice cream cone.

Priscilla walked straight into the postoffice and met—Gordon Lake.

"Hello," she said, more eagerly than she had done for several months. "How are you? Won't you come up tonight?" Her eyes looked the invitation so plainly that Gordon felt himself glow with hope.

"But George?" he objected, remembering.

"George works in the bank tonight." It was true, too, but now Priscilla saw a different interpretation for those nights he excused himself with the plea of work.

That evening Benjie planted himself in a corner of the parlor sofa, and wild horses could not have dragged him from a book entitled, "Great Heroes." Priscilla came in and tried to shake him.

"Hey," the reader said, in an aggrieved voice, his eyes fastened doggedly on the book.

"Mo-other, can't you make Benjie—" the rest of the wail was drowned in the ringing of the doorbell.

In came Gordon, and sill Benjie read on. Not a word of the conversation escaped his eager ears. When a pause ensued, Benjie was not surprised to feel a brotherly slap on his shoulder.

Gordon held up a dollar bill.

"How does that look to you? To go to parts unknown," he added, with a laugh intended for Priscilla.

Benjie took the bill, carefully looked at the page, and walked nonchalantly out of the room. Once behind the closed door, he threw down the book, and examined his gift. An ecstatic expression overspread his face.

As luck dictated it, another visitor made his apearance that evening. Benjie, omnipresent, and ever pursuing mercenary ends, ushered him into the parlor. It was George, and he stood still enough on the threshold at the scene before him. He got red, which Benjie gladly understood to be an indication of rising anger.

Priscilla said quite coldly, "I thought you were working tonight—or with Doris," he could not help adding maliciously.

"So I'm not wanted?" George looked the way any man would under the circumstances, and strode out, raging inside.

Benjie let him out of the front door carefully, and George, touched at the little fellow's solicitude, gave him a dime.

Days followed in which George did go with Doris, out of pique, and Priscilla rode haughtily in Gordon's big car.

Earth was a pardise of quarters, 50-cent pieces, and an occasional dollar for Benjie. It was shared by one Dottie Hill, who gratefully received the sodas, ice cream cones and sticky candy that Benjie showered upon her. All small boys of Benjie's age in the vicinity sullenly withdrew from the competition. He was accepted as her hero.

They were sauntering along the street. His chosen one was eating an ice cream cone.

"Benjie," she inquired, still eating, "why doesn't your sister like my brother?"

"She does," Benjie replied, absorbed in missing all the cracks in the sidewalk.

"My mother says she doesn't."

"Your mother doesn't know. Pris doesn't go with him—because," Benjie stopped to explain elaborately. "You brother's poor, and Gordon Lake," he told her finally, with pride in his voice, "has lots of money, and gives me a lot of it to keep out of the parlor." He showed her triumphantly a half dollar received the previous night.

Dottie listened, wide-eyed. He was still her hero, but she did not exactly approve of his lie about George. Although only 8, Dottie had enough woman in her to tell her mother immediately on going home.

Again Benjie sat on the parlor sofa. He had almost finished "Great Heroes." The bell rang, and Benjie noticed with some concern that George's flivver stood outside.

George's voice and his mother's rose and fell. Pretty soon George went into the parlor, and mother upstairs. After that, Priscilla herself came down, slowly.

Benjie was uncomfortable. They were probably kissing each other. There was no resisting a peep through the door. And Priscilla caught him at it.

Benjie hung his head sullenly.

"Was it a lie about Doris?" Pris asked.

The guilty one dug his toe into the rug.

"Here's a quarter, young man, for telling my sister."

A gleam came into Benjie's eye. A quarter!

"He doesn't deserve it," Pris said, giving George back two dimes, and Benjie a nickel.

"Aw, Gee!"

Benjie was disgusted.

"Pa, why do they joke so much about wives roasting their husbands?" asked Clarence.

"Because the old fools pull off so much raw stuff."

"You look good enough to eat," gushed the enraptured youth.

"Well, I am hungry enough to," replied the girl, insinuatingly.

Juliana's Aunt Marie

By Clyde Weldon

LOOKING like a figure out of a rare old painting in her pansy-trimmed bonnet and Paisley shawl, Aunt Marie slipped gleefully out of the front door. She had waited until Juliana, her grandniece, had gone out and until Juliana's mother was busy with a caller on the side porch. Then, with fingers that trembled nervously, she had hurried into her best clothes and made her escape.

She hadn't felt free for some time. Not since that last bad heart attack when the silly old specialist had told Jim and Mary, his nephew and his wife, that she ought not to be left by herself. She had overheard them talking about it.

"It's risky, anyhow, for a woman of 78 to travel about alone."

"Fiddlesticks! It would likely be years before she had another heart spell. Maybe she never would."

And now the whole afternoon lay ahead of her to spend as she pleased. There was little chance of being found by any member of the family who might decide to hunt her up, for the Empire Picture Palace was the last place she would be suspected of visiting. Yet that was her destination.

Today she would see for herself just how bad "The Gambler's Mate" was. She had overheard Jim deploring Juliana's intention of going to see it with Jerry Dixon and she had gathered that it was a lurid affair of cabarets and opium dens and a why-did-you-come-into-my-life? motif. No, they might look for her at her cousin's across town or at the meeting of the Relief Corps, but hardly at the movies.

She stopped for a moment at the corner ice cream parlor, then hurried to the theater. She waived aside the girl usher and, finding a seat just where she wanted it, sat down, removed her hat, fussed a moment with her soft white hair, and gave herself up to the untrammelled enjoyment.

Aunt Marie fumbled in her bead purse for the little paper bag of candy. Then she sat back weakly, her eyes focussed sharply in the darkness on the couple sitting in front of her. Unmistakably they were her niece Juliana and Jerry Dixon, the young man so patently in love and so patently being coquetted with by his girl companion.

All her joy vanished like air out of a pricked balloon. If Julie discovered her, she would feel called upon to take care of her and accompany her home, thus thwarting Aunt Marie's intention of inviting indigestion by stopping for a chocolate marshmallow frappe at the ice cream parlor. Oh, why had she taken it for granted that when Juliana spoke of going to the picture with Jerry she had meant in the evening, forgetting Jerry's occasional afternoons off?

Then Aunt Marie realized that something was amiss between the young people. Jerry's face, half turned toward the girl, was set and stern, while Julie was speaking in a low, earnest whisper. Why, they were quarreling! Even as Aunt Marie watched, Juliana rose and, pushing past the row of knees between her and the aisle, left the theater.

Jerry stood up, made a motion as if to follow her, then sat down again. But Aunt Marie could tell from the rigid set of his shoulders and folded arms that he was miserable, angry, and more interested in his own little drama than in the one being unfolded on the screen.

The episode worried Aunt Marie, for she had long seen in the cool, reserved young man the proper husband for pepper-tempered Julie, whom she thoroughly disapproved of and loved immeasurably. It made her feel queer all over, witnessing this little scene. She wondered.

Suddenly Aunt Marie put her hand to her chest with a little cry that was just audible and, leaning forward, touched the young man's shoulder. "Would you be so kind—my heart—" Another little gasp—"take me home—"

Jerry had turned quickly. "Why, it's Juliana's Aunt Marie!" he exclaimed. "Why, of course." He was tenderly solicitous at once and presently, his arm supporting the thin little figure in its shawl, he had guided her to the street and stood looking about for the town's one taxicab.

"No, please," begged Aunt Marie, divining his intention. "I need the fresh air." In the brief space of a taxi ride, how could she say what she wanted to say?

Yet it was difficult to begin. Finally, "Juliana's awful hot-tempered," she began, and felt Jerry's arm stiffen.

"Yes," he said, non-committally.

"I—I couldn't help seeing you'd quarrelled." Aunt Maria continued. "But I don't believe it amounted to anything."

"I'm afraid it did," said Jerry, sadly. "You see, Julie told me she never wanted to see me again."

Aunt Marie was silent a moment. Then, "Young man," she said, solemnly, "I've lived 78 years. And I've learned you must always regard a woman's remark in three ways. What she really says, what she thinks she says, and what she wants you to think she meant to say."

"That," said Jerry doubtfully, "makes it pretty difficult for a man to know how to act."

"Not at all!" Aunt Marie's tone was triumphant. "He must always behave as if she had said just what he wanted her to!"

There was great concern expressed when Aunt Marie appeared on Jerry's arm.

"Your heart again, Aunt Marie. Oh, how could you?"

But later, as Aunt Marie shamelessly eavesdropped as Jerry and Julie sat in the couch hammock on the side porch, she had her reward.

"I—I absolutely hate you, Jerry Dixon!" she heard her niece say.

"In other words," came a masterful retort, you love me to death. Kiss me, Juliana." And Aunt Marie gathered from the pause that followed that Juliana obeyed.

She smiled, then sighed. She'd be watched closer than ever now. And she could never explain that this last heart spell had been an out-and-out bluff. As for following the vicissitudes of the Gambler's Mate—she'd thrown that chance away forever!

"I was just wondering—" began Mr. Gabb, as he looked up from his newspaper.

"Wondering what?" said Mrs. Gabb.

"I was wondering what would become of the silent vote when women get familiar with the franchise," said Mr. Gabb.

Shattered Romance.

By Parke Whitney

CLYDE!"

"Alice!"

A flush mounted to both faces of this handsome couple, now planning to separate—a superb pair.

The woman was speaking:

"I just mailed you a note, Clyde, to come over tomorrow evening. I thought we'd better settle on—that is—choose the mementoes each prefers. You may have first choice, except—"

"No, no, Alice." The man's breath caught sharply.

"You'll come, Clyde?"

"Oh, yes," eagerly.

"I'm on my way to Glenvale now, but I will be back in time." She turned to go.

"Alice."

"Yes—what is it?"

"I—Alice—if you'd only—" he stammered.

The wife put up a warning finger. "Goodbye. I'll see you tomorrow evening."

A hurt look crept into the man's eyes. He slumped into the station seat. Soon his eye caught the vision of a golden-haired fairy of three years.

"So like her, so like her," he quavered, as the vision of his own little dead girl arose before him.

That evening Clyde Faulkner, in his lonely apartments, stood gazing at his wife's photograph.

"You are beautiful, and I worship you. But self-will, uncurbed by doting parents, is separating us, and for trifles."

He snapped off the lights, and sat in the moon-lighted window. But the moon brought too vivid memories of courtship days. He left the apartment and sauntered far from the city. Suddenly the scent of sweet alyssum came to him. It was like torture—this reminder of their engagement flower.

He covered his eyes a second, and passed on. But sweet memory grew too strong. He retraced his steps to the little florist's shop. He bought a huge bunch of the sweet flowers. Quite late he entered his apartment and placed them in water. Then he opened his wallet and took out a small white package containing a yellowed spray of sweet alyssum.

"Nearly turned to ashes—like our romance," he sighed.

The next evening, after a most prolonged, nervous toilet, he set out from his wife's apartments.

She met him with the cordial greeting of a friend, nothing more. She tried to evade the pleading of his eyes.

"We'd better get—it over quickly," she advised. "Here are—photographs." Her voice faltered a little.

His breath came heavier as he saw his little child's pictures.

"Clyde, mothers feel more keenly than fathers—" The man winced—"So—So I thought I'd take the latest one. You can get another—sometime. You may have the little baby picture."

The man's face worked pitifully. "Yes, yes, Alice. Keep the other—I—you must not sacrifice it."

She reached out a tiny infant shoe. "Clyde, this is for you. I have the mate." The man snatched it greedily and pressed it to his lips. The woman turned her head.

Thus they divided the sacred mementoes of a sad and happy past.

Clyde, unable to bear more, arose hastily. "I must go, Alice, unless you—"

A warning gesture of negation stopped him. He left abruptly. He dared not look back.

Alice Faulker alighted from her car and walked up the broad path to the Orphans' Home. Her heart ached for her lost little one. If she could find one who looked like her she must have her. Not one suited. She stood there fearfully disappointed, only half hearing the matron's order for the maid to prepare the little girl for her new father who was due at any time.

Alice asked that she might rest awhile. Her disappointment grew keen.

Soon the maid appeared with the beautiful child.

Alice gazed in rapture. The child was the image of her own little Doris.

"O-oh, can't I have her? She's so like my own! I must have her," she begged.

"You are too late. She goes with her new father. Listen! There he is now."

As he entered he started back as if alarmed at the sight of a beautiful woman closely clasping his newly-adopted child. The woman's tears he saw were falling on the child's golden hair. He heard her crooning love talk to the baby, who patted the "pitty yady's" face—the face of his wif

"Oh, I can't give her up. You love me don't you, darling? Ask that man if I may have her," she pleaded.

"Alice!"

The woman looked around and looked straight into the eyes of her tall, handsome husband.

"Clyde—you—you are—the one—who—?"

He nodded. Both were conscious of an impending crisis, all unmindful of the wondering eyes bent upon them.

The baby arms clung closer. "Me 'ove 'ou," she lisped.

"Clyde, I must have her. You can't take her from me."

The man, his eyes suspiciously moist and tender, drew nearer. The child, chuckling with glee, put one arm around his neck, the other around the wife's.

"There, you see she clings to me, Clyde." "What about me?" He asked. Then, in a low voice, he whispered:

"Alice, you may have her"—the woman's face gleamed—"if—you'll take me too. I can't let her go, either. Don't you see I'm doubly lonely—now?"

"Why—why! Clyde, we can then both have her." The light glorified her face.

A little child had wrought far more than could any lawyer.

"We'll call her Alyssa, dear." An exultant note sang through his tone.

"Alyssa! from—from our alyssum engagement flower? And you remembered!"

Right before matron and maid Clyde drew forth the faded spray of sweet Alyyum.

"And to think," she cried, "that I almost wrecked—oh, Clyde!"

Giving Fortune Away Is Rich Man's Hobby

August Heckscher Spends Huge Sums On Poor Children Of New York

Some men are born with the money-making faculty. August Heckscher, the New York capitalist and philanthropist, was. Coming to America he has turned into gold almost everything he has touched.

He has made money in coal, in zinc, in steel, in Florida, in public utilities, in land, in New York skyscrapers, from Hamburg (Germany) when 22, etcectera. His career, in many respects, has been similar to that of Senator Coleman du Pont.

The one thing Mr. Heckscher enjoys more than making money is giving away money. He began practicing the art early. He has an especially warm spot in his heart for poor children and has done much for them.

He has just pledged millions to clear out New York's East Side slums and to erect in their place modern dwellings which will be rented at low cost. Mayor Walker of New York has commissioned Mr. Heckscher to go to Europe to learn everything possible about how to go about this ambitious, worthy work most effectively. Although he is 78, Mr. Heckscher is now busily roaming over Europe, gathering helpful information. He has announced that he does not want any return on his millions beyond one per cent—and he probably will not shed many tears should the one per cent be not forthcoming.

His only son, Maurice, is with his father heart and soul in this laudible, practicable purpose.—Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

And All I Did Was Bark A Little Bit

By MUTT

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., Aug. 25.—I'm Mutt, the neighborhood airdale dog that lives in the circle, and I'm peeved. Who wouldn't be peeved? I have a lot of good friends, a big circle of them, and every time they get some choice morsel, they call, "Here Mutt, here Mutt," and before you could say 'Jack Robin,' I'm there. Of course sometimes their ideas of a choice morsel is different from mine. For instance, I don't care much for chicken, and raw meat doesn't tempt me much, but I do like meat after it is a bit older. That's my doggie appetite.

But then I'm getting away from the main issue of this story. I just want to tell you how kind some of the neighbors are to me. The other day Mrs. Alles called from the second story window that she was busy, but would be down after while and give me a dandy dinner. Well, I was on the porch when she came down about an hour later, and didn't give her a chance to forget. 'Woof: Woof:" I said, in order to remind her. And my how she did laugh and tell folks how smart I was.

Then another time, I took Mrs. Connard home. I fooled her and got there first. But I kept an eye on her so she would be safe on the dark street. She was real well pleased too. Oh yes, and there are the Joneses. Will Jones and his sister just think that I'm it, and are always taking me in and showing me off to folks. Dave Jones once got me out of a big wagon, that was going to take me—goodness knows where. But then of course I'm Tom's dog. He brought me home in a half bushel basket with my two brothers, 5 years ago.

I never could understand just why people were nice to me, but I always try to show them that I am grateful and wag my tail like anything and say "Woof Woof." You see that is the only way I can express my feelings orally. Of course when I write, I say what I think, and that reminds me, I haven't told you just why I am peeved.

If my master, Tom had been home, I don't suppose it would have happened, but he's at the camp. Of course some of the doggie folks around here are peeved because I have so many friends, and then when I bark just to show I'm not scared of anything they make a lot of fuss and have their masters get after me and chase me, but this only happens once in a long while.

Some one who has a bad disposition must have told the policeman about me chasing the guys away from my master's house, when I barked at them from the front porch the other night. I expect maybe he had had a scrap with some one earlier in the evening and his conscience was bothering him, and when he heard me bark, it made him mad.

Well to make this tale short, Mr. Christy and Mr. Hayes come to the house and told my mistress that I was arrested and I would have to be chained up. Humph, can you imagine such an insult? Well last evening when we appeared at the City building, there was that lady from Line avenue with that ferocious little German Police dog, what some folks is scared of. (Huh: some folks is scared of everything.)

Well, I looked him over, and I'll bet I could chew his ears right off and he wouldn't say "Jack Robin." Then there was a man who lives on a farm and if he didn't have his dogs, he said he wouldn't even get to taste the apples, there's so many kids stealing them.

It's all right, there were about twelve dogs arrested, and it seems my friends haven't gone back on me any. The burgess told my mistress I'd have to be tied up—and here I am. Last night they put a nice blanket on the porch for me to sleep on sos I wouldn't get rheumatism, but I disdained to lay on it. The very idea of a big dog like me having to be tied.

Of course there is a long wire line and a pulley, which gives me a chance to run a little bit, and the kids take me out on the leash some. The neighbors still bring me choice morsels, and my people feed me good, but I can't see why they had to tie me, and I won't wag my tail when they come and pat me and say "Nice Mutt." It makes me tired, if they think I'm nice, why don't they unchain my collar and let me follow the kids, and Dave, and Bill, and Sloke, and Morry, and the rest of the gang, like I always used to.

Goodness knows, all I did was bark a little bit.

Post Office Men Complimented By Visitor Here

J. Clark Mansfield Says That Local Office Is Run Efficiently

New Castle postal employes are doing efficient work, in spite of inadequate quarters, according to a statement made today by Captain J. Clark Mansfield, of Pittsburgh, Pa., chief clerk of the Railway Mail Service. He also complimented Postmaster J. C. Norris for his work here.

Captain Mansfield made the statement before the Kiwanis Club at its regular weekly meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. His talk was devoted chiefly to the growth of the transportation of mail from the early stage coach days to the present highly efficient methods.

Name From The Romans

The name post office comes from the Romans, Captain Mansfield said. In the early days the Romans erected tall posts on which were fastened boxes containing messages. In the early stages the transfer of written matter was confined to military channels.

Gradually the transfer of written messages grew and in the 13th century the people of Europe began to use stage coach lines. The first stage coach line used in America was between St. Joseph, Mo., and San Francisco, Cal., a route 2000 miles long. Ponies were used in relays to haul the stages, and gradually the government installed other lines, establishing its right to use any or all highways for the transportation of mail.

It was also out of St. Joseph that the government first used railway mail service. This was started by and enterprising postmaster who wanted to save time in the distribution and classification of mail by sending clerks out on short runs.

The idea grew in favor and soon after the Civil War a railway mail route was established on the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. As the service has developed, it now gives a distribution on trains, not only by stations but in some cases by carriers.

The special service on parcels post is one of the latest developments of the railway mail service. By the payment of a special fee, it is now possible to get first class service on parcels. As recently as Tuesday, August 24, New Castle had a demonstration of this.

A local firm needed a piece of material which could be secured only in Oswego, N. Y. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon a long distance telephone call was put through and at 8 o'clock this morning the package arrived in New Castle.

The club enjoyed the talk of Captain Mansfield and at the conclusion of it he was given a vote of appreciation. Several matters of business came before the club, and arrangements to attend the Conneaut Lake convention of the State Kiwanis were furthered.

Lions Club Has Merry Outing On Slippery Rock

Members of the Lions Club, ladies, wives and children, enjoyed a corn and weiner roast dinner at the Boy Scout camp on the Slippery Rock Creek on Tuesday evening, August 24. In all about 90 attended, the rain of the early part of the day keeping the attendance down somewhat.

Families went to the camp in the afternoon and enjoyed themselves in various ways with races and games. The men who had their putters along played some golf, and a baseball game between two teams employed the attention of the men who were not golfers.

The dinner was served on the porch of the camp house and consisted of corn, weiners, baked ham and the seasonal garnishment that makes such a dinner attractive.

Following the dinner dancing was enjoyed on the spacious porch with an orchestra furnishing the music. Square and round dancing was indulged in and to add variety to the program a Charleston contest for children was held with prizes given the four contestants. Several members of the club also strutted their stuff to the delight of the gallery looking on.

It was one of the finest picnics ever held by the club and enjoyed by all.

NEW CASTLE DRY GOODS CO.

Stay Away From France Says Mrs. Carrie Roberts

Mrs. Carrie Jeffrey Roberts of this city, conducting a touring party through Europe, sends the News the following letter.

INTERLAKEN, Aug. 2, 1926.—Here I sit in a very comfortable hotel and while the rest of the party are off to Latterbrunen, I am writing to you. I felt a twinge of envy when I found that my room was not in view of the Jungfrau, but after I had divested myself of extra luggage and composed myself to sit at the typewriter and write this letter, I found that there are some recompenses in having a room at the rear of the hotel, for just outside the lovely gardens of this hotel is the Kursaal, and there is playing now a fine orchestra. I couldn't keep my eyes on the letter and the Jungfrau at the same time, but I can keep time to the strains of the lovely things that I am hearing.

Interlaken, as the name suggests, is between two beautiful lakes—Lake Brienz and Lake Thun. The air is fine and the view is worth any price they ask at the hotels. Had we time we would go up to the snow line on the Jungfrau, for it is most interesting to walk a short distance on the grass and flowers, then a shorter distance on shale, and then step onto the snow and ice of the glacier. It is possible to sled ride, and of course every one gets a ducking in the snow. "The Young Bride" is always beautiful, whether it be in storm or sunshine, and as you stand and watch the darkness settle about here, every minute marks a change, each seeming more beautiful than the one before.

In the evening we bought out the town, and since, we have been regular luggage vans; for musical trays and musical bears, and musical jewel boxes do not pack in an already over-crowded suitcase. But what care we! Just another experience!

In Geneva.

August 3—Here we are in Geneva! We just have a few hours in this place so out we go for a carriage ride. On our way down from Interlaken to Geneva we stopped for lunch and to see the Castle of Chilon at Montreax. The Castle of Chilon is so deceiving from its pictures—it looks so much smaller than it really is. It is built upon solid rock and covers several blocks of land. It is most massive in its construction. The walls are 12 and 15 feet thick. The old halls are large, in fact huge in size, and some of the original decorations are to be seen. One that interested me most is in the king's bed chamber. It is of life-sized lions, leopards, deer and a cow—queer decorations for a bedroom. The prison is below the castle and here we saw the "seven pillars" made famous by the poem by Byron, "The Prisoner of Chilon". The real dungeons are below this and are gruesome looking affairs—no light, only apertures in the doors thru which the food was passed to the unlucky ones there imprisoned—and we were all glad to get out of them into the sunshine once more.

Later—And now we have had our drive in Geneva. Quite an interesting time we had with the driver who first said that he had only a half hour free. Then he promised that he would show us the Reformation monument, and the League of Nations house in that time. He took us to the monument first, which by the way is cut in relief in part of the old wall of the city of Geneva. Four men, Calvin and Knox being two of them, stand in full relief about 25 feet apart. Then much smaller in size and about 50 feet apart stand other figures representing the great reformers of the other countries of the world. Rodger Williams stands for America. Between these figures, cut in the rock, is the Lord's Prayer in four different languages.

When we left this place he took us by a circuitous route to the main plazza and then told us that the half hour was up. So we decided that if he could bargain so could we, and we made him take us to the League House also. We made him rather uncomfortable when we would not finish out the hour and after a rather lively conflab we got out just where we wanted to be put down and then after worrying him a little we paid him for the whole hour—the show was worth the price.

Cut Out France.

Avignon, France—Absolutely we are disgusted with the French people! There now, I feel better. I have been tempted to say that all along and now that it is said, I feel no twinge of conscience about having said it. The opinion of most of the group is that they never care to do any part of France again, as far as the people are concerned. If I should start in to tell you why, you wouldn't believe me.

We came from Switzerland and are sorry that we did. We wanted to stay. My advice to you is that if you are coming to Europe choose the one that includes Switzerland and cut France.

We had to cross the French frontier this day, at Bellegarde. We left our personal baggage in the private train (we were told to do so) while we got out and carried our little handbags and opened our big suitcases for the custom officers. There were about 500 people crowded into a room large enough to accommodate 300. Such jabbering, such elbowing, such rudeness I have never seen—and this is characteristic of all France. And when we got back into the train, some of the coats which had been left on the train had been rifled by either the officers or the trainmen.

Avignon was once the seat of the popes. The entire city has a very high wall around it built with a corbelled parapet. The house of the popes is a very heavily built ruins, but is being restored. The walls are so thick that secret stairways are honeycombed through all of them. Nine popes had their residences here. Then the papal seat was returned to Rome. We drove to the top of the hill where once the Benedictine monks had their monastery. At one time 31 cardinals lived in this place. The hotel in which we lived was interesting. It was built about the time Columbus discovered America. It had an open court yard and the center of the house itself had a square opening running to the top of the house where glass protected it from rain.

Don't waste your time coming to Avignon unless it is necessary for you to reach Nice. Do see Nice. And just here may I say that if you do come to Nice make the Hotel Regina your stopping place. I am not trying to advertise any hotels or companies but I simply must mention some of them and this is one of two that cannot be left out. It is the most palatial I have ever seen. It is crowded in winter so that rooms have to be engaged for months ahead. It stands above the town is several squares long and faces the blue Mediterranean.

In front is a wonderful palm garden which is a favorite spot in which movies are made. In fact one was made the day before we arrived and the next day while we were there another one was filmed. The halls are 30 feet wide and the stair cases are just suited for dramatizing Lohengrin, especially the wedding march. Our first evening there we had a splendid concert given by Miss Barbara Schultz of New Castle and Miss Emmy Lou Biedenharn of Monroe, La. We surely are favored in having such talent with our party.

One morning we went to the beach and were quite horrified to see people dressing on the beach without shelter. Another ungainly fad is to get so tanned from head to foot that stockings are not necessary. They are the fashionable color so why wear them? There were times when one had to look the second time to see whether the wearer was a white person or colored.

Monte Carlo.

One afternoon we drove over the famous Corniche drive to Monte Carlo. We certainly got a kick out of it. Our passports were necessary. Passports. "Why need them," we asked. "To prove your age!" Perish the thought! Some of the girls were under 21 and were refused entrance. We got in. The rooms are large and except for the moving of the "lookers on" there would have been the stillness of death; for life is tragic at Monte Carlo. Whole books could be written about the expressions of the different faces, each trying to stoically face the outcome. One woman was the "whole show." She was dressed in a white felt hat, queerly made with three hat pins of huge gold nuggets stuck in it; around her neck she wore a chain with mystically symbols here and there in it, each symbol about the size of a bantam egg. Partly covering her face she had drawn a thick veil which was pinned to her hat with about ten pins, and she kept pulling this veil down for it reached just under her nose and was somewhat short and refused to stay where it was put. While we were there we saw her win a great deal of money. At another table, sitting among the crowd, was a little old lady about 80 years of age. She was a dainty, refined little soul and calmly played on as though she were winning. So I suppose she was.

However I was struck with the fact that most of those who were playing were older people. I saw no one who was under 40. And as we passed out of the Casino we went to the rear of the building and there lay the beautiful Mediterranean sea and the lovely gardens. How little of this is ever seen by those who play. There is no love of nature the handiwork of God in their lives. They have only time for the game. The great game of life counts for naught while they are winning and when they lose many of them seek the sea only as a place in which to find peace.

We came away feeling depressed. The expressions of the faces there were too much for us. Most of them could not afford to lose.

Beautiful Gardens.

Stresa, August 8: And here again I must speak of the hotel at which we are staying. It is called the Regina a favorite name in this section of the country. The one in Nice was named for Queen Victoria, because she stayed there when in Nice. I do not know whether this one was named for the same reason or not, but if she did choose both of these for her summer residence she knew a fine thing when she saw it. This hotel is not so large, not spacious as to halls and dining rooms, but the view and the lovely paved open plazza facing the wonderful Lake Maggiore with a mountain breeze is almost too good to even dream about We are quite thrilled too about being at the same hotel with Bernard Shaw. He is a peppy, well dressed, gray haired man with a gray beard. We wanted to get his autograph but didn't dare to start anything so wild as that with 127 girls to follow our example. This afternoon we went in a little launch to the little island, Isola Bella. This little gem lies just off the coast nearly opposite our hotel. It was owned by Count Barromeo, who was afterward cannonized and became Saint Barromeo. His remains lie in state (of decay) in the crypt of the Milan cathedral. It is covered with jewels and is worshipped by thousands every day who pause at this shrine for prayer.

The gardens were laid out by the count in 1630. There are ten terraces arranged in a most artistic manner. The gardens contain trees and shrubs from every country. We saw the mimosa (sensative tree that closes up its leaves at the touch or a sudden jar,) the bamboo, orange, lemon, fig, camphor tree, cork tree, banana and scores of others. Orchids of the rarest varieties, and lotus, blood red in color were interesting to all of us. And I got a real thrill out of feeding from my hand the white peafowls. The rest of the group have me spotted for feeding animals and birds. I am never without a hard roll or crust of bread in my handbag and I seldom lack the opportunity to feed something enroute.

In the lower rooms of the Castle Barromeo the roofs are made into Gothic arches and the ceilings, walls, arches and even the floors are all covered with lava from Vesuvius and pebbles from Lake Maggiore and placed into beautiful designs. The closeness to the water, and the cooling lap of the waves made us want to rest there for a long while. But we had to go back to our hotel. However the next morning we had a lark just outside our window who wakened us in the early dawn with his clear sweet tones. That is thrill enough for anyone I should think.

Oh dear, Oh dear. We want to stay. But we smile bravely, pack up our toubles consisting of all kinds of baggage except the bird cage and off we go. But do, do come to Stresa and stay there when you get there for at least a week.

NATIONAL LEAGUE RACE DRAWS ATTENTION

Hottest Fight In Many Years

Cardinals, Pirates And Reds Fight For Leadership In Senior Loop

SCHEDULE FAVORS ST. LOUIS TEAM

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
Sports Editor Internat'al News Service

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. — Foaming at the mouth probably will be condemned in some circles as ungentlemanly and lacking in sanitation therefore, those who feel that way about an ancient and honored function will be somewhat depressed to learn that in St. Louis an entire population today foams at will and without warning and is proud of it.

One glance at the standing of the clubs in the National League has been known to send large families foaming about the house, individually and in concert. Mere mention of the miraculous fact that the Cardinals are up with the pace during the last week in August has served to put a frothy "top" on a plain glass of water. Only righteous and strictly biased foam is tolerated.

Cards Favored

It seems to me that if they were a trifle premature, they might save a lot of wear and tear on the salivary glands, considering what the next two weeks will mean to the National League race. The Cards are a hot choice today. Within two weeks, they may be considerably hotter, in which case one may foam at leisure and with justification, or they may be absolutely frigid, in which case one wouldn't care about foaming with a mouth full of soap.

The next two weeks will tell the story of the pennant race, the greatest the National League has known since the memorable campaign of 1908. The preface will be written in St. Louis on Sunday when the Cardinals will open a series with the champion Pirates, with the league leadership at stake. The plot will thicken rapidly when, after a single game with the Cubs, the Cards will invade Cincinnati for another show-down set of games. The climax will come immediately in another Cardinal-Pirate series, their last meeting of the year.

That, briefly, is the situation today. It would seem to throw the real burden of proof on the Cardinals, at least for the time being. The Reds need only win the majority of games in two series with the Cubs to profit automatically while the Cards and Pirates are at each other's throats.

Easy Sailing

But, later, the same thing will react to the Cardinals' favor when, beginning September 10, the Reds and Pirates will play a two-game series while the Cards are dallying with Boston. And if you think this means a stand-off on paper, you will do well to consult the records which show that the Cards have won 12 out of 15 with the Braves while the Reds have taken 9 out of 16 with the Cubs.

However, past performances can run for the end book at this stage of the proceedings. The ball club that can show the most punch and consistency today, tomorrow, next week and next month will win the pennant, not the entry that is trying to prove something by what happened in June.

All three contenders are sprinting home right now. The Cards dropped thier first in nine games yesterday and fell into third place. The Reds ran their streak into ten straight. The Pirates made it eight out of the last twelve.

Pay your money and take your choice.

MISS ORCUTT BREAKS RECORD AT HAWORTH

HAWORTH, N. J., Aug. 25.—Miss Maureen Orcutt, metropolitan women's golf champion, shot a remarkable 18-hole card of 76 yesterday to match her own record for her home course, White Beaches, and register one of the best rounds ever recorded in women's competition.

Miss Orcutt made the score in winning the one-day tournament of the women's Metropolitan Golf Association.

Miss Orcutt on the first nine holes took 42, six over par, but finished in brilliant fashion with a 34, equaling par for the last nine holes.

The best medal card in the national women's competition was registered last year at St. Louis, where Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser of Ottawa, Canada, led the qualifying field with a 77, one stroke ahead of Miss Glenna Collett, who won the championship in subsequent match play.

Miss Orcutt's card clipped three strokes off her former record for the course, set earlier this year.

Ross Pitches One-Hit Game

Independent A. C. Hurler Allows Measly Hit In Whitewash Victory

Frankie Ross on the mound for the Independent A. C. team Tuesday night came within an ace of entering the sandlot hall of fame when he let the fast Lawrence Indies down with one hit as his teammates drove Barr to cover with the result that the Indies went down to a whitewash defeat 6 to 0. The game was played on the Lawrence grounds.

The victory last evening was the third straight for the newly organized Independent A. C. and they are on their way to the independent championship of Lawrence county.

Ross pitched one of the greatest games of his career and in addition to letting the Indies down with one hit, he fanned six men and walked but one. Barr was touched for ten hits.

The hitting of Clem General featured the game, the popular left fielder having a triple and two singles out of three times at bat, while Mash with a double and Scaglione with a pair of singles also were much in evidence.

Black, J. Zidow and Russu fielded sensationally for the losers.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 25.—Pinkey Mitchell, junior welterweight champion, has been ordered to defend his title before October 1 by the state boxing commission or forfeit the belt which he holds, emblematic of the title, to the commission.

He has been boxing at a weight considerably above the junior welterweight limit.

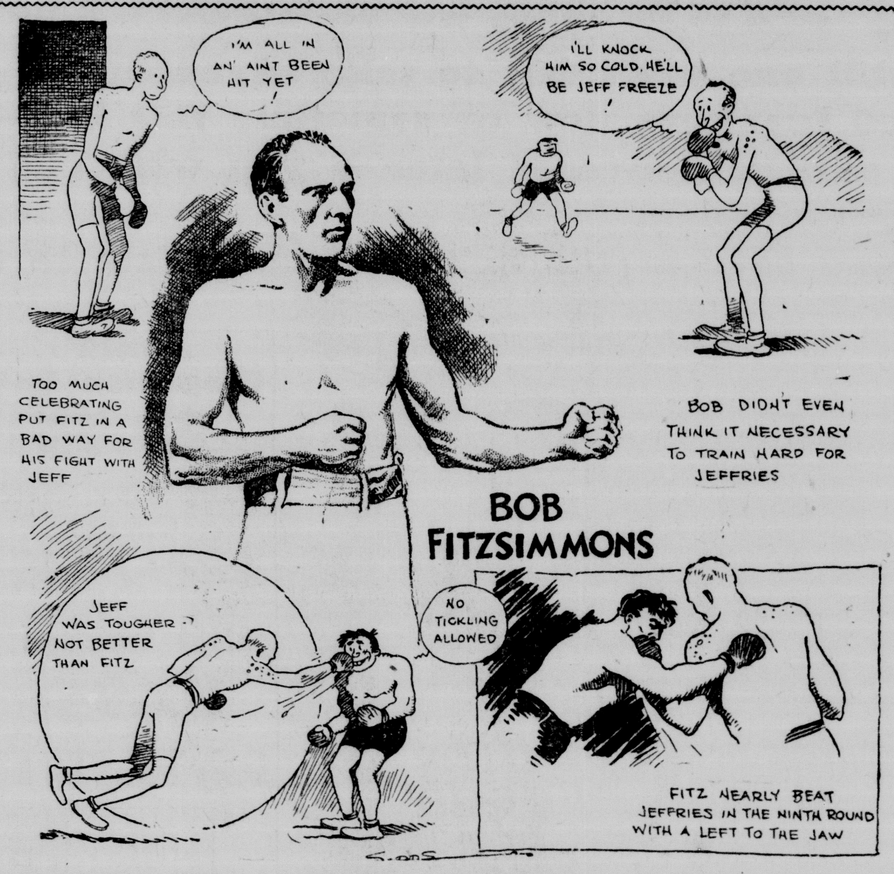
Mitchell is scheduled to box Jimmy Finley of Louisville here August 27. Billy Mitchell, brother and manager, said it was probable that Pinkey would defend the title either in New York, Chicago or California.

Grove City College Has 65 Prospects

GROVE CITY, Pa., Aug. 25. — Final announcements concerning the Grove City College football training camp were sent out last week by Athletic Director Bob Thorn to 65 prospective candidates for the Crimson team. Camp will open on Friday, September 10, and will be held on the college athletic field.

THE LAST ROUND

Fitzsimmons, Who Laughed at Jeff, Falls Before Him



By NORMAN E. BROWN

When Gentleman Jim Corbett trained for his memorable battle with Bob Fitzsimmons in March 1897, one of the former's sparring partners was a young brute-man named Jim Jeffries. He was literally built like a bull. He did not know his own strength. And he seemed to have the stamina of an ox.

Corbett, during his training, hammered Jeffries at will but the young man only laughed.

Jeffries had been fighting, off and on, for four years then. At the age of 18 Jeffries was dividing his time between working in a boiler factory and hunting and fishing. He laughed when his friends urged him to enter the ring but when they pointed out he could earn a month's pay in a night by winning. It was the money alone that held him to the game until he saw Bob Fitzsimmons, lean and lanky, dispose of Corbett. Then he decided he wanted some of the glory Corbett and Fitz had had. He started training in earnest.

Believed Himself Corbett's Master.

He had learned much of the science of the game while training Corbett. In fact it is said of Jeff that he felt confident that day the young bank clerk went into the ring against Fitz that he (Jeffries) could lick the champ. When Fitz won Jeff's belief regarding his own chances became a conviction.

The following year after Corbett's defeat Jeffries drew the attention of the fans by knocking out Joe Goddard, Peter Jackson and Pete Everett. Goddard fell in the fourth and the others in the third. Then he met Tom Sharkey.

Jeffries, now on an exhibition tour in vaudeville with Sharkey, says that Tom gave him his hardest battle. And Jeff probably means it. However Sharkey was defeated in 20 rounds and that was Jeffries' last real appearance until he met Fitz in their title bout June 9, 1899.

HOW CURLY BOB BOWED TO JEFF

How Fitz was dethroned by Jim Jeffries at Coney Island, June 9, 1899.

Round 11—Fitz came out slowly, but assumed the aggressive. Jeff stood off, evidently waiting for a knockout (a chance to land one). They clinched three times. Coming to close quarters Jeff put two hard rights over Fitz's heart, sending him back Then Jeff sent straight left to the neck, which he followed with a left to the chest.

Fitz crowded in. He tried his right for the jaw, but was short. He, however, succeeded in blocking the Californian's return. Jeff then jabbed his left to the head and sent his right to the point of Fitz's jaw. Fitz went down for the full count.

The battle was staged at Coney Island. Fitzsimmons was not a rugged man though courageous to the nth degree. Had he realized that his luxurious living in the two years intervening between his victory over Corbett and the date of the Jeffries bout had hurt him he might have trained more diligently for the bout. He not only failed to realize this but he even treated the battle lightly and felt no need of hard training.

What misled Fitz was a glimpse he had of Jeffries the year previous. After the Sharkey bout Jeffries had fought with Bob Armstrong, a clever negro fighter. Jeffries hurt his hand on the negro's head, and the champ's apparent clumsiness that night rather amused Fitz.

Jeffries Takes Off Weight

When Fitz and Jeffries entered the ring "Curly Bob" was not in good condition. Jeffries was. Between the night of the Armstrong fiasco (August 5, 1898) and the title bout Jeffries had taken off 28 or 30 pounds of weight and had learned to use his left hand. Fitz weighed 175 but he was soft. He drank all he wanted of beer and ale while training.

Fitz's confidence caused him to rush Jeffries from the first bell. The big boilermaker, however, played a safe defensive game. Only when Fitz left him a good opening in the second round did he cut loose and then with a blow to the jaw sent Fitz down for the count of nine. How Fitz weathered that round was a mystery to many.

In the ninth round Fitz realized that he was tiring and acting in the belief that he was about "shot" almost won the fight. He staked all on one punch that connected with Jeffries jaw. Had the blow been flush Jeff would have taken the count. As it was the curly one's left struck Jeff below the ear. Jeffries kept his feet but was still dazed when the bell rang. Fitz apparently put everything into the poke. He showed it in the tenth. And after making sure that the lanky chap wasn't "playing possum" Jeff went after him in the eleventh.

Crimson Grid Squad To Start Training Soon

GROVE CITY, Pa., Aug. 25.—Final announcements concerning the Grove City college football training camp were sent out last week by Athletic Director Bob Thorn to 65 prospective candidates for the Crimson team. Camp will open on Friday, September 10, and will be held on the college athletic field. The candidates who were members of last year's squad were exceedingly anxious to hear that the training period this fall would be held on the college grounds where the accommodations are ideal. The players will be housed and fed at Memorial hall, the boys' dormitory, while the dressing rooms will be in the college gymnasium adjacent to the playing field.

The preliminary camp last fall was held on the grounds of the Grove City Country club. That would be a very satisfactory place for a smaller squad to train. The accommodations are not extensive enough, however, for a squad of 50 or more men. The coaching force has been pretty well decided upon. Charles W. Bowser, who has been at Grove City for the past three years, will be the head coach, of course. The names of his assistants will be announced the first of next week.

Arrange Series

According to Manager T. C. Richards of the Independent A. C. today, his team will play the Hillsville team winners of the Twilight League a series of games starting with a game at Hillsville on September 2.

The Hillsville team will play the second game of the series in New Castle on September 10. The playing field for a third game if such is found necessary will be selected later.

Tagging All Bases

(International News Service)

The Giants almost won a game yesterday, but infield errors put Jack Scott at a disadvantage and the Cincinnati Reds came through on top, 4 to 3.

The Robins regretted of their action a little while ago in toppling the Pirates out of first place, so they handed the dish back again yesterday, 10 to 1. Ray Kremer pitched beautiful ball, while Burleigh Grimes bowled for the Dodgers, allowing a rally of five runs in two innings, before he was relieved of the responsibility.

The Braves and the Cards divided honors in their doubleheader at St. Louis yesterday. The visitors took the first, 2 to 1, then fought a close battle to give Hornsby's boys the second, 6 to 5.

Long-distance batting was the rule of the Chicago Cubs, leaving the Philadelphia Nationals on the sour end of both games of a doubleheader. The first one went 9 to 4, while two homers by Hartnett and one by Wilson in the second helped shut out the visitors, 9 to 0.

The Senators and the Browns had the American League all to themselves yesterday, and for the Senators, everything was quite all right. Heavy hitting at the start gave them a sizeable lead, and St. Louis dropped on the short end of a 9 to 6 score. Rain caused postponement of all the other games.

Mrs. Roy Palmer, of Portland, aspires to win the Oregon State Left-handed Golfers' championship and is the only woman entered in the title tournament this year. Mrs. Palmer plays to an 18 handicap and declares she is ready to test her skill against any man left-hander in Oregon.

The major league record for total runs in one season is 457, made by Babe Ruth in 1921.

Wide-Awakes Hurl Diamond Challenge

The Wampum Wide-Awakes thru the News wish to challenge any team in Lawrence county for the midget championship.

The ages of the Wampm team are so arranged that it is a team of players ranging in age from 14 to 17, thus being a midget team in age and size.

The Wide-Awakes will play the first game of a series away from home, providing that the team gives them a return game. The Wide-Awakes have won 18 games, lost two, and have won four games by the forfeit route.

Following are the players making up the club roster: Manager Pat Moran, Business Manager Walter Gaffey, box 42, Wampum, Pa.; Captain John Porter, S. Allen, A. Demarke, E. Boone, T. Dubrovich, J. Ferrucci, P. Herbert, R. Harper, J. Galliard and Paul Campbell, coach.

National Stars In Western Open

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 25.—Most of the Nation's golf celebrities have arrived here to put in a few practice rounds over the Highland Golf and Country Club where the Western Open tournament will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Gene Sarazen and Willie Macfarlane, former National open champions and Macdonald Smith, present Western open titleholder, were over the course yesterday. Smith showed he will be a strong contender for the title again this year by shooting a 33 on the first nine.

The sixth straight Texas League pennant now seems likely to be the mouse that is going to elude the Fort Worth Cats.

Grays To Play Here Thursday

New Castle Team To Play At Beaver Falls Tonight; Grays Here Tomorrow

CANTON HERE FOR SATURDAY BATTLE

Business Manager Carm Sacco announced today that the Homestead Grays would be the attraction at Centennial field on Thursday evening at six o'clock, daylight savings time. It will mark the fourth time the Grays have played here this season. Hospidor will likely twirl for New Castle.

Tonight the New Castle boys trot down to the valley to engage Ed. Harvey's Beaver Falls Elks team and to try and get back some revenge for the defeats suffered in Beaver Falls this season. It was announced that Cebula, the lad from West Virginia, would occupy the mound for New Castle, while it was possible that Hollis Cannon might be called on to face his former mates.

The two new players signed recently by the New Castle team, Patterson, an infielder, and Gahles, a catcher, will be in the line-up for the Elks game tonight and will also be seen here for the first time on Thursday night in the Homestead Gray game.

Saturday afternoon at Centennial field the locals will have the Canton Hooper Coals as their opponents. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock.

Tellings Socked For Two Losses

Yield To Canton And Then Are Battered By Grays, 16-4

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 25. — With Gantz and Howenstine allowing them a combined total of five hits, Doik Novario's Tellings went down to defeat before Canton, 5 to 3, in an O. & P. league contest in the first game of a doubleheader at Dunn Field yesterday, then suffered a more crushing 16 to 4 defeat by the colored Homestead Grays in the exhibition nightcap.

The pitching of Tex Perry deserved better results in the first game, a mental lapse in the eighth inning really costing him the game. The break came in the eighth, when Zandt walked, Warshler sacrificed, Corl beat out an infield hit, Agler hit to Billy Abel, and the latter, instead of throwing to first, heaved too late to get Zandt going to third. This filled the bases and Big Bill Miller promptly cleaned the sacks with his second double.

The Grays, in the second game, were in great shape, while the Tellings put a juggled lineup on the field. The colored boys nicked Abel and Smith for nineteen bingles, scoring in each of the first four innings and also in the seventh and eighth.

Lawrence County Loop Race Nearing Fag-End

Ellwood City Plays Wampum At Ewing Park Saturday Afternoon

Mahoning May Stage Surprise And With Victories Displace "Nocks"

By ED FRITZ

Although the Lawrencce county baseball league championship is evidently destined to rest in Ellwood City during the long wintry months, there will be a sharp fight for second place between the Neshannocks and Mahoning and unless the "Nocks" continue to hit a fast gait "Hub" Hart and his seventh warders may slide in to second place as they are only three games behind the 1925 champions.

Throughout the season, which is fast drawing to a close, Ellwood has played consistent baseball while the "Nocks" have played good baseball in spots. Mahoning suffered a long and lasting slump until a few days ago when they came from their lethargy and hope to down Energy at Energy Saturday afternoon while indications point to the Neshannocks winning from Bessemer at Bessemer.

If these two teams win the league standing will remain unchanged, relative to their berths. Wampum travels to Ellwood City to engage the prospective champions and nothing would be more pleasing to Bob Robertson and his Crescents than to topple Ellwood into a defeat. Wampum has been hard hit this season by a combination of circumstances that has left them weaker than in 1925 and it is probable that Connie Wardman's outfit will tack another game in their victory column Saturday.

Following the games Saturday the teams will have only six more games to play as the season ends September 18. Ellwood and the Neshannocks have met for the last time and the only team on the card that seems to have a chance to stop Ellwood from making a run-away race is Mahoning and then only twice.

First Christians Defeat Leesburg

The First Christian team defeated Leesburg 5 to 0, in a game played at Leesburg on Monday night.

Ryon on the slab for the Christians pitched airtight ball and allowed but two hits and won his own game with a timely single. The Christians secured fourteen hits off the Leesburg hurler.

Pelch Pitches Fine Ball For Bakers Against All-Star Team

The Bakers defeated the All-Stars 4 to 3 in a game played Monday night on the South Hill grounds.

Pelch on the hill for the Bakers pitched a fine game allowing but four hits and fanned three men, while the Bakers found Valley and McIntyre for six hits.

The Bakers won the game by bunching hits in the second and fifth innings.

Select Oakmont For Golf Meet

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Bobby Jones probably will defend his American open golf title next year at the Oakmont Country Club, near Pittsburgh.

Selection of this course has not yet received official sanction, but the United States Golf Association is understood to favor it, instead of the Winged Foot Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y., also a bidder for the tourney.

In his comparatively short career Johnny Weissmuller, the famous Illinois A. C. aquatic star, has broken more than 50 speed swimming records.

The new Multnomah stadium in Portland, Ore., is to be dedicated with the Washington-Oregon football game, which is regarded as the gridiron classic of the Northwest.

Net Profits — By Feg Murray

Copyright 1926, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Now that the "the nightmare is over," to use Suzanne Lenglen's own words, and the temperamental prima donna of the courts is preparing for her second visit to America, this time as a professional, let us draw a long breath and think what may happen to Lenglen or to amateur tennis during the forthcoming invasion.

It seem to be taken for granted that the people will flock to see the acrobatic brunette because there are more in this country who have cast asparagus than eyes upon her, and curiosity brings out the multitudes. To make her tour a financial success, however, she must have an opponent worthy of her, and whether or not this can be provided remains to be seen.

It is very doubtful if the U. S. L. T. A., which seems to stand for "U Shall Leave Touring-professionals Alone", will sanction any exhibition matches between Suzanne and some of the best amateur players, either men or women. But if Bobby Jones can play a golf match with Walter Hagen and still remain a pure and sweet amateur, why cannot Helen Wills play an exhibition match with Suzanne Lenglen and still be untainted? Of course, the French girl and her manager would get all the dough, but they present Helen with an expensive trinket, say a diamond bracelet, or a platinum wrist watch, as Sir Walter did Bobby and make everybody happy.

The most interesting phase of the subject, to my mind, is whether or not it will lead to an open tennis tournament, for both amateurs and professionals. Such an event is quite within the realms of possibility.

Other questions brought up by Suzanne's forthcoming invasion are, "How will the lady get along without the liquors which she is wont to drink during the course of her matches?" Or, "Will she do without them?", "Will she 'get by' in the movies since it is admitted that her face is her fortune?" and "How about a vaudeville act?"

A most interesting tour, to be sure. And Suzanne wants interest —on her money.

Feg Murray Says—

Prohibition authorities should investigate. It is said that the Scotch pastime is being played at Rye, N. Y.

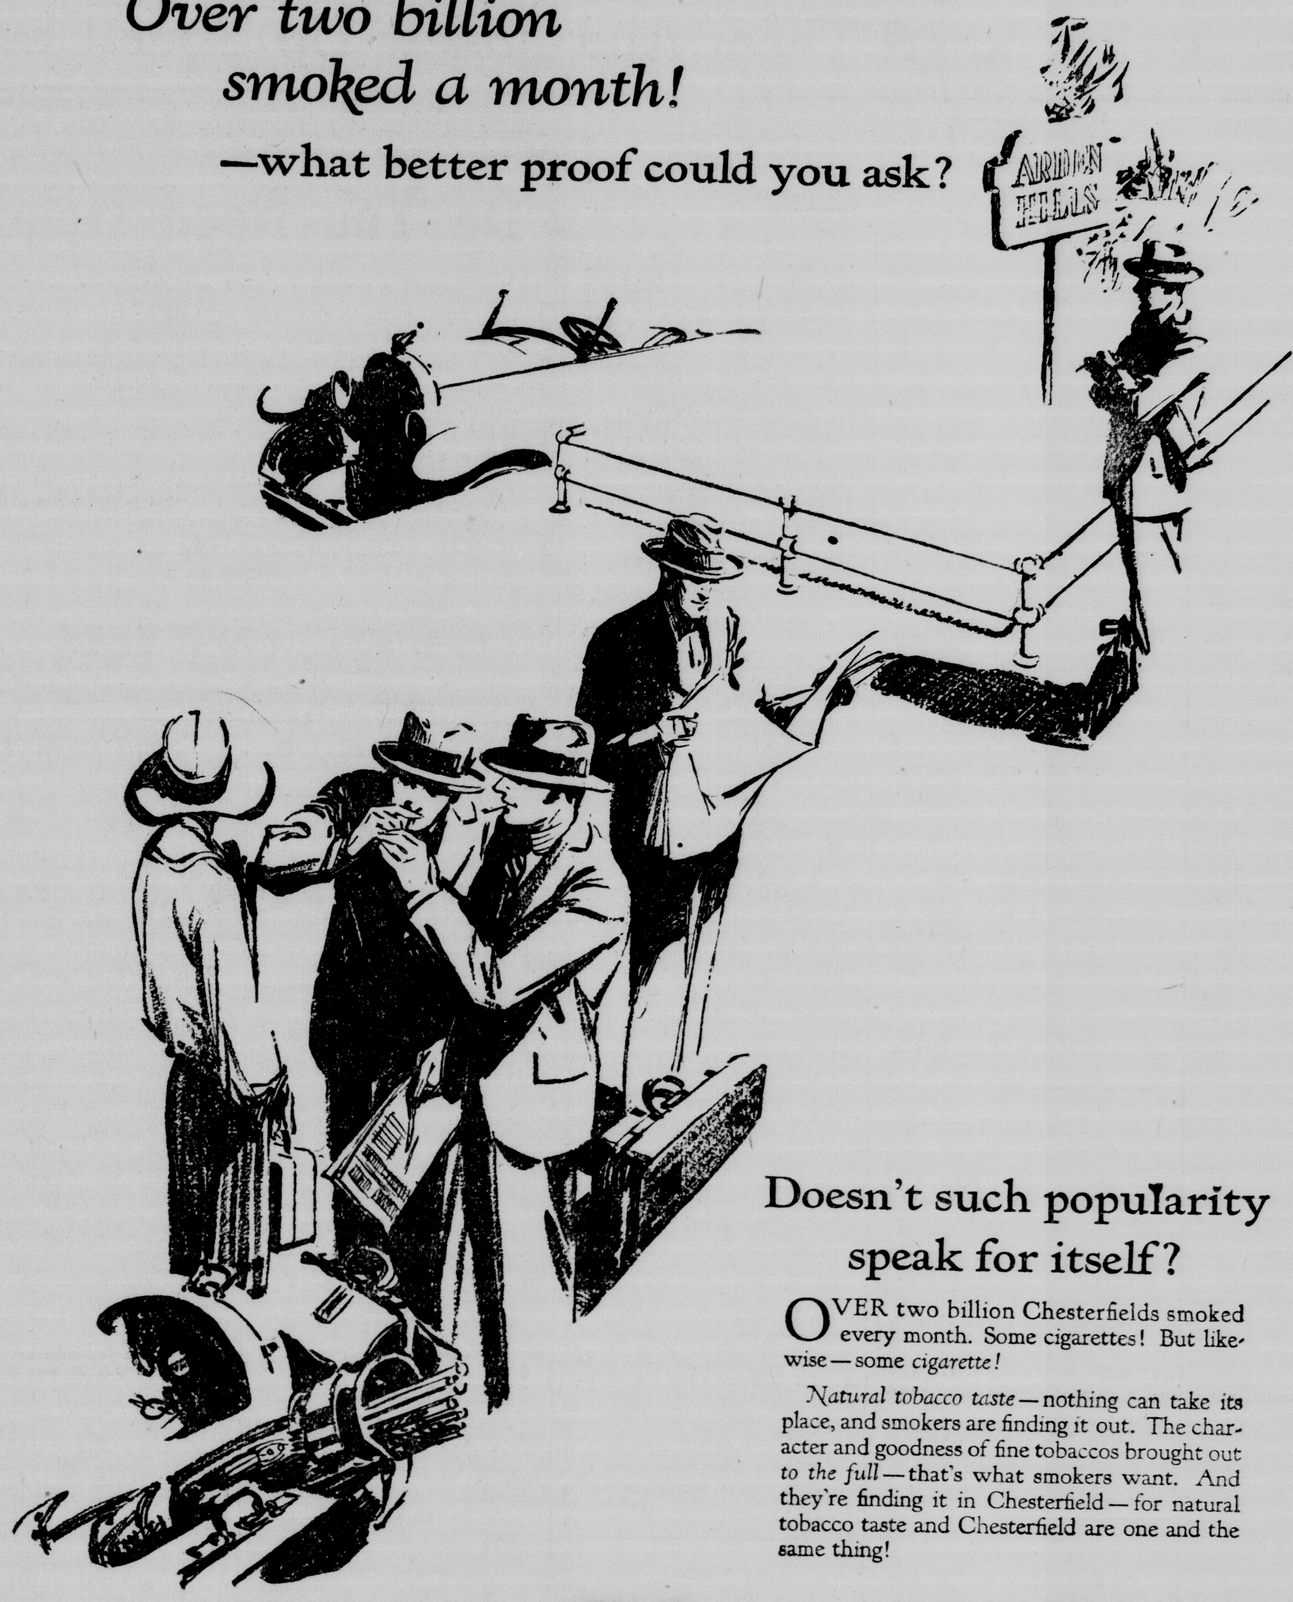
Over two billion smoked a month!
—what better proof could you ask?



Doesn't such popularity speak for itself?

OVER two billion Chesterfields smoked every month. Some cigarettes! But likewise—some cigarette!

Natural tobacco taste—nothing can take its place, and smokers are finding it out. The character and goodness of fine tobaccos brought out to the full—that's what smokers want. And they're finding it in Chesterfield—for natural tobacco taste and Chesterfield are one and the same thing!

Pinkie Mitchell To Fight Levine

Junior Welterweight King And Brooklyn Boy Head All-Star Card At Youngstown

BOUTS SCHEDULED FOR SEPTEMBER 1

By JOE HAYNES.
(Special To The News)

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 25.—When Pinky Mitchell of Milwaukee, Wis., answers the bell at Idora park September 1 the fans of this and surrounding towns will be treated to a glimpse of the fightingest champion of all the champs.

When Mitchell was declared the junior welterweight champion of the universe the wiseacre of the boxing game immediately got busy with the air hammers. He will put it away in moth balls, was the chant that went up with all the boys. Did he, well look his record over.

When you mention the names of Willie Harmon, Joe Dundee, Jimmy Finley, Joe Simonivich, Willie Doyle, Joe Jawson, Red Herring, Dave Shade, Lew Tendler, Bobby Barrett, Tommy Freeman, Joe Anderson, Hynie Gold, Billy Wells and Russie Le Roy you have just about called the names of all the good welters and junior welters in the game. Yet that is the list that Mitchell has boxed since winning the title.

Pinky also boxed ten rounds with Benny Leonard at Chicago, Ill. That fight is now history but the debonair Benny if questioned will tell you that Pinky gave him a hard battle that day. How many men can you name among all of Benny's opponents that ever made him step out to win. Few, and very few at that.

In meeting Georgie Levine of Brooklyn, N. Y., Pinky is grabbing an armful of trouble. This boy Levine is rated by New York critics as the best of the welterweight contenders and we will say that Pinky in meeting him showed that he still is, what he always was, a fighting champion.

This ten round battle between Mitchell and Levine will be one of three ten rounders and an eight round prelim that the Heakeh club will run off for the benefit of the Jewish center at Youngstown, O.

While the prices will be a little in excess of what has been charged in the past we think that with Mitchell-Levine Hill-Gardner, Jones Freedman, all signed to go over the ten round bout and Roberts and Harris going eight that the fans will be well satisfied with the prices.

Bakers Seek Game

The Bakers are without a game for Saturday afternoon August 28 and they would like to schedule a game away from home on that date.

The Bakers will take on any junior teams of the city or county. For information regarding a game call 2879-M between 4:30 and 6 o'clock and ask for Andy Mehalic, business manager of the team.

Freak Rock Sculpture Work Of Dame Nature

On the Cornish coast of England, Dame Nature has excelled in the art of the sculptor in the number of faces she has carved in the rock by means of wind and wave and weather. Every visitor to Land's end is taken to a certain point of vantage where can be seen the rugged features of Doctor Johnson, but in this case a little imagination is required. Far better is the remarkable likeness of Queen Victoria on the north coast of Cornwall. At Redruthen steps, the Queen Elizabeth rock rises majestically out of the sands on the summit of a mountain near Grasmere. The lion especially looks as well carved as one of the Landseer lions in Trafalgar square. Strangely enough, approaching from the other side, two or three miles beyond, another rock on the same mountain takes precisely the same form, and on coming closed this rock changes to what is called "The Lady at the Organ". This is a great rock in the shape of an organ, at which sits a woman with outstretched hands, as though producing "the sound of a great amen".

Governor Pinchot Discharges White

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 25.—Charles Fred White, Philadelphia negro attorney, has been removed as a member of the State Athletic Commission by Gov. Pinchot on a charge of breaking a promise not to take affairs of the state body regulating boxing into the newspapers. It is probable his successor will be named very shortly.

Exposure To Cold Not Harmful In Still Air

Professor Barcroft's heart beat and blood flow test on naked persons in the extreme cold of ten degrees below the freezing point suggests the question: What degree of cold can the unclad human body withstand? Perhaps the most surprising experiment in this direction was made during the international circumpolar expeditions in 1882-3. The officer in charge of the northern Siberian station, clad only in his nightshirt, left his tent for a stroll in the open air when the temperature was 72 degrees below the freezing point, and he was none the worse for it! This result was explained by the fact that during the promenade not a breath of air was stirring. Had there been a purga (the terrible blizzard of that region) with its dense, blinding and suffocating cloud of ice needles, it would have meant instantaneous death.

Ask Prosecution Of Bank Cashier

(International News Service)

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Aug. 25.—Hearing that a movement was under way to secure freedom for Will S. Leach, former cashier, and Joseph F. Ward, assistant cashier of the defunct bank of Benwood, a delegation of depositors appeared today before Prosecuting Attorney J. L. Arnold here.

The depositors sought information as to the proper steps in further prosecuting Leach and Ward, should they be pardoned or paroled from the state penitentiary, where they are serving 10-year sentences.

Various estimates place the loss in the bank crash in excess of a half million dollars. Depositors have never received anything on their deposits.

Oil Production Shows Increase

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Daily gross production of crude oil in the United States for the week ended August 21 amounted to 2,170,500 barrels, as compared with 2,162,050 barrels for the preceding week, an increase of 8,450 barrels, according to the weekly summary of the American Petroleum Institute issued today. Daily average production of California and mid-continent fields was 606,100 and 1,183,600 barrels, respectively.

Receipt of California crude and refined oil at Atlantic and gulf coast ports during the week totaled 719,000 barrels, a daily average of 102,714 barrels against a daily average of 64,429 for the preceding week. Imports of crude and refined oils at the principal United States ports averaged 160,857 barrels daily as compared with the previous week's daily average of 216,857 barrels.

The Kansas-Nebraska Bill — 1854.

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

ON JAN. 23, 1854, STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS' KANSAS-NEBRASKA BILL WAS REPORTED TO CONGRESS. THIS BILL PROVIDED FOR THE DIVISION OF NEBRASKA INTO TWO TERRITORIES, KANSAS AND NEBRASKA. SLAVERY WAS TO BE PERMITTED IN THESE TERRITORIES IF THE INHABITANTS SO DESIRED.

THE MISSOURI COMPROMISE OF 1820 HAD BARRED SLAVERY "FOREVER" FROM THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE NORTH OF 36° 30'. AN AMENDMENT TO DOUGLAS' BILL EXPLICITLY REPEALED THE COMPROMISE AND OPENED A REGION TO SLAVERY THAT WAS LARGER THAN ALL THE "FREE" STATES PUT TOGETHER.

THE NORTH WAS ENRAGED BY THIS PROPOSED ANNULMENT OF THE MISSOURI COMPROMISE. NORTHERN LEGISLATORS PROTESTED TO CONGRESS, INDIGNATION MEETINGS DENOUNCED THE BILL, AND EFFIGIES OF DOUGLAS, WHOM THE NORTH ACCUSED OF SELLING HIMSELF TO THE SOUTH FOR THE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION, WERE BURNED.

IN THE PROLONGED DEBATE UPON THE BILL, DOUGLAS TRIUMPHED OVER ITS OPPONENTS. ON MAY 22, 1854, THE BILL PASSED THE HOUSE, WAS PASSED BY THE SENATE (MAY 26), AND ON MAY 30, WAS SIGNED BY PRESIDENT PIERCE WHO STRONGLY FAVORED IT.

Former Banking Official Dies

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—Robert McAfee, 74, former state banking commissioner and a prominent Republican, died in his home here today from heart disease. He had been ill four days.

Governor Pennypacker in 1903 appointed him banking commissioner. He held that position two years, resigning to accept an appointment as secretary of the commonwealth.

He was successively re-appointed to the latter post by Governors Stewart and John K. Tener, serving until 1915.

N. Y. STOCKS

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Industrial stocks made a better resistance to bearish selling in the early trading today than during Tuesday's reactionary session of the stock market. The "big bears" offered the industrial speculative leaders in large blocks in the first hour, numerous sales of United States Steel in blocks of from 1,000 to 4,000 shares being reported at a point below yesterday's close and nearly 5 points below Tuesday's high price.

General Motors and Mack Trucks advanced fractionally in the face of heavy selling. Northwestern rails were also able to move upward in opposition to the general trend of the market, but the bulk of low priced industrials, including the oils, coppers, sugars, tobaccos and utility stocks were unable to carry the weight of bearish selling without a moderate dip to the lower price levels.

The market relapsed into dullness in the second hour, and some of the industrial stocks staged a modest come-back. The rails were firm, with good buying of the northwestern issues. Warner Brothers A, for the specialties, hung up a new record at 39, up 25 points from the low of last month. Rubber and the stocks were firm, with U. S. Rubber up about 2 points in active trading.

Tree Of Moses Grows In Kansas Arboretum

Rarity One Of 3000 Varieties Of Plants On 15 Acres Doc- Planted

Few men are permitted to build their own monuments. An outstanding exception to this rule is found in the case of Dr. W. E. Bartlett of Belle Plaine, who has been the town physician thirty-three years, ever since he was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in St. Louis, says a Belle Plaine, Kan., dispatch to the New York World.

The monument is known as Bartlett Park. But the doctor prefers to call it "Bartlett's Arboretum."

In 1911 Dr. Bartlett purchased fifteen acres of ground adjoining Belle Plaine on the southwest. It was then only a jungle of weeds and brush. On this fifteen acres, which has been land-scaped and beautified in many ways, there are now growing 3,000 different varieties of trees and shrubs.

From all parts of the world have come the rarest varieties of trees—from China, Japan, Norway, Sweden, islands of many seas and the plains and mountains of North and South America. One of the rarest is the Tree of Moses, the burning brush of Biblical history, described in Exodus. When the first frosts come, the foliage turns to a fire red. This is said to be the only tree of its kind in Kansas.

Dr. Bartlett has written many articles for publication concerning his observations and studies. He is now preparing manuscript for a volume entitled "The Reflection of a Country Naturalist."

Young Brains Master Technical Job Quickly

Signalman On Strike Awed By Efficient Way Youths Handle Levers

The following true strike story deserves repeating, for it contains a moral, says "Peter Simple" in The London Post. X. who tells it, lives in rural Kent, and going home on the third day of the recent strike, met an old signalman, who is also one of his tenants.

The old boy was looking worried, and it transpired that having gone back to his signal box to fetch a coat he had left behind, he found a couple of youths in plus fours unconcernedly caring on. "There they was," said the old man in an awestruck voice, "pullin' away at my levers and pullin of 'em right, too, like as though they'd been doin' it for these twenty years.

" 'And 'ow long might you young gentlemen 'ave been alearnin' ter work them signals?' I asks them. 'Oh, a couple of hours, granpa,' says one of 'em, offhand-like. 'Law!' says I ter myself, sir, 'that's what comes of 'aving brains!' Two hours, 'e said. And I calls meself a skilled man! Brains! That's what it is. I'm going back to work tomorrow, I am. Brains!"

X. wished the old man luck and left him at his cottage door—still with the awestruck look on his face, and muttering "Brains! That's what it is."

Try It, Girls! Printer's Ink As A Hair Dye

Here's a story showing still greater possibilities for the use of printer's ink. It dyes horse hair, so why not human hair?

Bloomsburg, Pa.—Horse traders here have gone David Harum one better, and a new use for printer's ink has been found. The discovery came through a request made in a newspaper office for ink for a horse dealer, and he related the story.

Printer's ink applied at night to gray or white hair turns it brown by morning, and the ink then can be removed without any trace that the hair has been "doctored". Not all buyers are particular about looking a horse in the mouth when the coat of gray indicates it is not so old, and the printer's ink turns the trick, the dealer said.

Early last week he bought a horse from a local man, took it to a nearby farm, applied the printer's ink, and the next morning brought the horse back to town and sold it to the man from whom he had bought it for $40 more than he paid, the buyer not knowing it was the same horse he sold the day before.

Whether the ink scheme would work as well on human hair, the horse dealer didn't know.

Dickens' First Work Returns To England

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Charles Dickens' first manuscript, "Stratagems of Rozonza", dictated when he was 16 to his mother, has come back to England. The author signed himself C. J. H. Dickens, a reminder of his full name, Charles John Huffham Dickens, which he never used in later life.

The plot of the play is concerned with the loves and adventures of a cosmopolitan group gathered in a Venetian inn, but the description of it resembles more closely that of London's noted amusement place of Dickens' boyhood, Vauxhall Gardens.

The existence of the manuscript was unknown until a year ago, when an American collector, G. E. Miller, of California, found it in Paris.

The thing most responsible for the cityward trend is man's queer aversion to working hard for very little.

Bank Teller Says Foreigner Asked For $2,000 And Made Threats

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 25.—A foreigner in destitute circumstances exploded the bomb in the Farmers' Deposit National Bank here late yesterday which claimed two lives and injured 40 persons, according to the theory on which the police were working today.

The bomb-carrier received the full force of the blast and was almost decapitated. George C. Ortmann, bank policeman, who was rushing toward the man when the bomb exploded, died ten minutes later in a hospital.

Police Lieut. Peter Connors, head of the homicide squad, said there was a bare possibility that the identity of the bomb hurler will be established.

Hundreds of persons viewed the body in the morgue today, but thus far none has recognized the man. The only clues police have, which may ultimately lead to identifying him, are a cheap belt buckle, initialed "L", and remnants of his clothing.

Examination of parts of the bomb picked up from the floor of the wrecked banking room showed it to be of the nitroglycerine type. Had the bomb not been on the marble floor when it exploded many more persons would have been killed, police believe.

Everett M. Jones, the paying teller, to whom the bomber presented a demand for $2,000 shortly before

Officials Resume Questioning Of Cleveland Youth

City Chemist Starts Analysis Of Girl's Vital Organs For Poison

International News Service Staff Correspondent

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 25.—Questioning of Emil Balanescu, youthful medical student, in connection with the mysterious death of Dorothy Kirk, 21-year-old stenographer, in a hospital Sunday, was resumed by detectives today while city chemists continued analyzing the girl's vital organs.

Balanescu is held on "suspicion" pending an official report of the coroner on the causes of the girl's death, but charges will be placed against him if the chemists' analysis reveals that drugs the youth was said to have admitted giving her contributed to her death, detectives Bernard Wolf and George Clark said today.

Meanwhile, Isedore Moidel, attorney of Warren, O., retained as counsel for Balanescu, was expected to begin legal action today looking toward the youth's release.

Balanescu, according to the detectives, admitted advising the girl about a month ago to take two pills when she was not feeling well.

PLAN DEMONSTRATION FOR GERTRUDE EDERLE

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—A welcome home demonstration such as will rival if not surpass that accorded Bobby Jones, will be put on for the benefit of Gertrude Ederle, heroine of the recent record-breaking channel swim, when she arrives on the Berengaria on Friday.

To the shriek of whistles in the harbor and a "water salute" from a battery of fire boats, "Trudy" will be escorted ashore by a mayor's committee of welcome and paraded proudly up Broadway to City Hall to be officially greeted and felicitated by Mayor Walker.

In spite of the fact that "Trudy" turned professional last year, fifty A. A. U. clubs plan to be represented in the line of march to City Hall.

Following the mayor's greeting, a reception to New York's "leading lady" will be held in the aldermanic chambers, following which the parade will be resumed to her now-famous Amsterdam avenue home. A guard of honor, composed of mounted, motorcycle and foot policemen, will accompany the swimmer on her triumphal entry, seated between her father and mother.

Elmer Alles Describes Scene When Blast Let Loose

INJURED RUSH OUT OF BANK

Among the hundreds of pedestrians who were in the neighborhood of the Farmers' Deposit Savings Bank in Pittsburgh Tuesday afternoon when the unidentified anarchist exploded the bomb which resulted in two deaths, a score of injuries and much property damage was Elmer Alles of West Washington street, this city.

Mr. Alles had business in Pittsburgh Tuesday and was near the bank on Fifth avenue when the blast let loose. He states that for a period of ten minutes utter confusion raged. Hysterical woman and men but a little less affected rushed from the bank, their clothing torn into shreds and blood streaming from wounds. Order was restored with the arrival of the police, but the dense crowd which gathered had no inkling of what had caused the trouble until newspaper extras were on the streets. The Pittsburgh publications, according to Mr. Alles, had extras carrying the details of the bombing on the streets not more than 20 minutes after it occurred.

Others Near Crash.

"It sounded to me as though one of the buildings in the downtown district had collapsed," said C. A. Cleaveland today in speaking of the bomb outrage in the Farmers bank in Pittsburgh on Tuesday.

With Charles Freeman, John Newman and Leo Malloy, Mr. Cleaveland was on Sixth avenue, just about a block away from the Farmers bank when the bomb exploded.

"It was a terrifying thing," he continued. "We rushed over to the Hold Youth For Death Of Tutor In Brooklyn, N. Y.

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Police today were holding Emmanuel Silverstein, 19-year-old philosophy student, charged with slaying Julius Calisch, his aged tutor, by a blow on the head with a hammer.

Calisch, according to police was struck down in a Brooklyn restaurant, dying half an hour later. The lad, immediately arrested, is alleged to have told police of an unconquerable desire to slay his aged instructor.

"I first decided to commit suicide", Silverstein is alleged to have told police, "then I decided it would be better to kill the old man". He is alleged to have admitted he fought for two hours against the overwhelming desire to commit the murder, and finally succumbed.

Police said they found a bottle of cyanide of potassium, a deadly poison, in the youth's pocket.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Acting under the authority of the new program laid down by congress, the administration has embarked upon an ambitious policy of coordinating all American air activities without the creation of one national department of aviation.

An unofficial board composed of the three new assistant secretaries for air—F. Trubee Davison, war; Edward P. Warner, navy, and William McCracken, commerce department—will carry out the new policy which is said to bear the stamp of approval of President Coolidge.

Preliminary consideration having convinced the assistant secretaries the policy is right, frequent meetings will be held in the near future in which every possibility of joint action will be explored, Davison said today.

Aviation enthusiasts in both the army and navy who have supported Col. Mitchell's plan for consolidating the air service believe the creation of the unofficial board is a long step in this direction.

One of the first proposals to be taken up is expected to be the creation of a joint board of experimentation to assign definite objectives to the experts of the army and navy air corps.

Standardication of training and tactics, and the interchange of officers between the army and navy for limited periods to break down the intense rivalry which is said to have become a serious obstacle to cooperation also will be taken up, it is understood.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 25.—Counsel for Henry De La Bruyere Carpender and Willie Stevens, charged with the murders of the Rev. Edward W. CANTON, O., Aug. 25.—Holding the sword of an ingenious legal move in her hands, Mrs. Florence Mellett, widow of Don R. Mellett, grimly watched from the background today the opening of the grand jury investigation into the Canton publisher's murder, determined to see that justice was done and the slaying avenged.

With the filing of a $100,000 damage suit by Mrs. Mellett against three of the alleged murder conspirators, a "checking up" procedure on the action of the county grand jury was assured. Further suits against any who obstruct the inquiry was promised by Mrs. Mellet if conditions warrant it.

"The purpose of this move is not to collect money, but to secure vigorous prosecution of the murderers," Frances Poulson,. Mrs. Mellett's attorney, said today. "No matter what the Stark county grand jury does, the evidence will thus become available in federal jurisdiction when the damage suit is tried.

The suit will be amended to include possibly a dozen more defendants before the trial, Poulson said.

Beside the three defendants named in her petition as causing the death of her husband, Mrs. Mellett mentions "other persons" who "unlawfully, purposely and of deliberate and premeditated malice did kill and murder" the publisher.

The Death Note

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—The note, demanding $2,000, which an unidentified bandit shoved through a teller's cage at the Farmers' National bank here, shortly before he and a bank policeman were blown to pieces, was found today in the pocket of George Ortmann, the policeman.

It read:

"Sirs: You are held up for $2,000. Dynamite is in my hand. It will discharge when the handle is out of my hand.

"If you or anyone else fire a gun at me there will be no cage left and we will all be blowing up to pieces.

"If you are willing to come with $2,000 be quiet and keep off the alarms. The help will do you no good. If they come they will come for their death. If not, make all the noise you like. I help you with the noise that whole Pittsburgh will hear.

"If you wish to see the death machine, ask for it. Otherwise absolute silence. Death or $2,000. Either you like".

POLA NEGRI ON WAY TO NEW YORK CITY

(International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—Her heart heavy with grief, Pola Negri, beautiful Polish film star, will leave here at noon today for New York, where she will meet Alberto Guglielmo, brother of the dead Rudolph Valentino, when the latter arrives on the steamer Homeric. She will try to persuade the brother that "Rudy's" body should be buried in Hollywood, in the city and state he loved.

Charles Eyton, a personal friend of Miss Negri, who, with his wife, Kathlyn Williams, a motion picture actress, has been with Miss Negri since she has been prostrated following the report of Valentino's death, declared today that although the decision where Valentino was to be buried was entirely in the hands of his brother, that Miss Negri would urge him to allow the body of the late film star to be buried in California.

"I am sure that Rudolph wished it," Mr. Eyton quoted Miss Negri as saying.

Mr. Eyton, himself a close friend of Valentino, was positive the "sheik" personaly would desire a California burial.

"He was 100 per cent American and loved especially California, the state of his adoption. He himself told me that California would always be his home, even when he was through with motion pictures."

(International News Service)

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Two boys, who found Lieut. Cyrus Bettis wandering in the mountain forests between here and Lewistown, brought the missing army aviator to Bellefonte hospital today.

Hospital physicians said Lieut. Bettis was suffering from a fractured jaw and a fractured leg. Although the pilot's physical condition generally is good, it will be some time before he is able to leave the hospital, it was learned.

The boys brought Bettis here in an automobile from the mountains. He was almost exhausted from lack of food and from his harrowing experience in the treacherous Alleghenies.

At the hospital it was said Bettis had not been questioned about the crash because his fractured jaw made it difficult for him to talk, but the boys who brought him here said his plane was wrecked.

Cameron Found Wandering On Croton Avenue

WAS NOT ABLE TO TELL NAME

Believed That He Has Been Wandering About City Since Last Monday

F. Willard Cameron, 420 East Garfield avenue, missing since last Friday morning, was found about 2:30 o'clock this morning at Croton avenue and East Washington street, by Officers Llewellyn and Golis, in a dazed condition.

Cameron, evidently the victim of amnesia, which causes loss of memory of past events, was stopped and questioned by the officers, who, from descriptions furnished, felt convinced that he was Cameron.

He asked where he could get a cup of coffee and when questioned did not seem to know his name, where he lived or where he was. The officers took him to the police station, where papers found on him proved conclusively that he was the missing man.

Members of his family were advised at once and he was removed to the home of his brother, Donald Cameron, 104 South Mulberry street, and a physician summoned. The physician, on examination, expressed the opinion that it was a case of physical exhaustion and amnesia. He has failed so far to give any information concerning his absence and has been sleeping most of the time.

His car, in which he left last Friday morning, was also found during the night on Liberty street in the Seventh Ward by Officers Hagan and Allgier. It had been standing there since Monday morning at a point near the Westfall store. It was placed in the Mahoning garage by the officers.

Cameron was seen in his car on Grant street last Saturday and on the Wampum road on Sunday. It is quite evident that since Monday, when he must have left his car in the Seventh Ward, he has been wandering about the city.

Arthur Mometer

The world is getting goofy, said Justinian McKay, we're getting closer to the well known cobbles every day, we're driving automobiles at a speed inspiring awe, and bandits ply their pleasant art, in spite of rules and law. The girls are cigaretting and they're rouging and they drink, and like Sodom and Gomorrah we are on the well known brink. Below us yawns the abyss of oblivion I wot, and any day old Gabriel's horn will call us, like as not. Ah woe is me he sadly sighed, and likewise lack-a-day, there's too much laughter in the world, and every one's too gay. I left him as he spoke his gloom, his ravings peeved me quite, for old Justinian talks like that from morning until night. I have no doubt his liver's bad, his gizzard and his spleen, else there would be no thoughts like that, gyrating in his bean. The world's a better place each day, I'm glad that I'm alive, I hope I live till 96, the weather's sixty-five.

Hundreds Injured In Riot To Glimpse Valentino Features

International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. — Thousands of admirers of Rudolph Valentino assembled again today in the streets for blocks around Campbell's funeral church in Broadway in the hope of getting a two-second glimpse of the body of the famous motion picture star which is lying in state.

They came in great numbers in spite of the fact that one hundred persons were injured late yesterday and last night when a crowd of 100,000 (police estimate) fought with police reserves for a glimpse of the features of the dead star. Most of the injured were women and three of them policemen. They were deluged with fragments of plate glass windows that had been pushed in or injured in the rioting in the streets.

Sidewalks and streets were littered with pocketbooks, umbrellas, furs and women's shoes when the doors of the chapel were closed at midnight and the police chased, or rather tried to chase, the people home.

Long before 9 o'clock, when the doors of the funeral church were to be opened, another throng began to assemble. By eight o'clock this morning it had reached several thousands. The doors will remain open until midnight.

TWO KILLED AS BOMB EXPLODES ON BANK FLOOR

he released the bomb, cut on the face and suffering from shock, vividly described events preceding and immediately following the blast.

It was late in the afternoon, Jones said, when the alien, roughly dressed and with hat pulled down over his eyes, shoved a crumpled piece of scrap paper through the grilled window.

On the face of the note was scribbled in almost undecipherable handwriting the demand: "Give me $2,000 or I'll blow up the bank."

"The man seemed calm enough," Jones related, "and his face was almost expressionless.

"My first thought was to play for time, so I told the caller to wait a minute while I phoned the vice president, at the same time motioning to the teller in the adjoining cage to engage in conversation."

The man grew impatient, J. V. Brogan, the second teller, said and inquired: "Will I get the money?"

Brogan assured the bomber that he would get the $2,000 and attempted to keep him calm while Edward B. Coll, president of the bank; M. A. Kendall, vice president, and the two bank policemen, Ortmann and A. C. Anderson, were summoned.

"Coll and Kendall approached from inside the cage," Jones said, "while the bank policemen, with Ortmann in the lead, came up from the corridor.

"Then the bomber became excited. He seemed to realize that all chances of getting the money were gone.

"He leaped from the cage window, let out a maniacal shout and that was all I remember. The next thing I knew I was lying flat on the floor of the cage with excited persons rushing about in all directions."

Other witnesses said the bandit kicked the black satchel containing the bomb as it fell to the floor. He received the force of the blast in the stomach and head. Ortmann was knocked against a marble wall. He was rushed to a hospital, but died ten minutes later.

Twenty-four persons, bank employes, depositors and passersby, were rushed to hospitals in ambulances and any means of transportation available.

After receiving first aid treatment, 15 of the victims were taken to their homes. The condition of four others is critical, although physicians hoped all would recover.

The interior of the bank in the vicinity of the explosion was wrecked. President Coll estimated the damage to the building and bank fixtures at $150,000.

That there were not more serious casualties was due in a large measure to the arrangement and construction of the bank fixtures. The walls, floor and the lower part of the cages were covered with thick white marble. This afforded a certain protection for the men inside the cages.

Plate glass windows for blocks around were shattered and many persons not near the blast were cut and bruised in this manner.

The bomb exploded at one of the busiest hours of the day when hundreds of workers were leaving for their homes. Within 15 minutes the crowd around the bank was so great that police reserves found considerable difficulty in holding the masses back.

The bank opened for business as usual today.

Origin Of Tar Heel Dates To Revolution

Tar heel, the nickname applied to residents of North Carolina originated as the result of an incident in the Revolutionary war. When Cornwallis and his forces headed for the eastern part of the state the end of the conflict the residents were in a quandry as to what to do with their accumulated naval stores which, above all, they wanted to keep from falling into the hands of the British.

They decided it would be better to lose them than have them confiscated by Cornwallis, so they dumped all their tar and pitch into the stream now called Tar river. The tar naturally sank and when the British troops reached the stream in their march and rolled up their trousers and waded across they received a coating of tar on their feet and legs.

Weeks later, relates the Raleigh News and Observer, when Cornwallis' forces surrendered at Yorktown remains of the tar were still visible on their feet. They believed that the rivers in North Carolina flowed tar. From then on North Carolinians have been called Tar Heels.

Seek 'Phantom Burglar" Trail

CHILLICOTHE, O., Aug. 25.—Police admitted today they are puzzled by the "phantom burglar" who on two successive nights visited the home of D. C. Wharton here and terrorized the neighborhood.

Wharton today offered $100 reward for the terrorist's capture.

After locking their doors Sunday night the Whartons heard a voice issuing from the cold air vent, threatening their lives if they did not unlock the basement doors.

Later it was found the intruder hid in the flue and escaped by an upstairs window after police left.

Last night while Wharton and a policeman lay in wait in the rear of the home, the terrorist leaped from the bushes at the side of the house and attacked Mrs. Wharton and her son, 15.

Both were felled by the man's fist. After kicking Mrs. Wharton, he fled on hearing her husband and the policeman approaching.

IRVING BERLIN AND WIFE SHY AT REPORTERS

(International News Service)

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Irving Berlin and his wife, the former Ellin Mackay, plan to stay here at least until the first of September, the song writer told International News Service today.

And they'll stay indoors at the home of Max Winslow, where they are guests, if that seems necessary to avoid photographers. At Mrs. Berlin's first appearance in public yesterday the cameramen attempted to get pictures, but their efforts merely resulted in her retiring to the house in a state of hysteria.

Later Berlin intimated that he would appreciate it if the photographers would show more consideration for his wife's present condition.

"We are here for a rest, and I have some work to complete which I started in Europe," he said. "We don't want to see reporters or pose for photographers. That's not the purpose of our visit."

Berlin then invited the newspapermen to join him and Winslow in a round of golf.

"I am consulting my sister in Turin," he said. "I cannot make a decision before I reach New York as there are so many factors to be considered."

Yesterday Alberto stated that he did not feel that the body should be brought back to Turin for burial, but should be laid at rest in the America which Rudolph had loved.

In default of bail he is being held in the county jail pending a hearing.

According to the police, Sheriff H. M. Reynolds informed them at 12:45 o'clock this morning that a large touring car had upset on the Wilmington road. That the occupants had righted it and started for New Castle. The occupants, he reported, were believed to be drunk.

Officers Thompson, Steiner and Lockard were detailed and started to look for the car and men. They found them at the Shenango Valley hospital. Finding that Baird was seriously injured and that the other occupants of the car had escaped with minor bruises and injuries, the officers brought Stacel and his companions to the police station.

A physician was called and examined Stacel, who admitted that he had been driving at the time of the accident. His decision was that he was under the influence of liquor. The county detective, George S. Kennedy, was advised of the situation and asked that Stacel and the rest of the occupants of the car be held until this morning. This was done and this morning all were turned over to Kennedy, who made the information against Stacel.

Stacel in his statement to the police here, said that they were enroute toward this city on the Wilmington road, and that he was driving. The car was rounding a curve, about five miles from the city, when it left the road and upset, throwing the seven occupants of the car out. He claims that the car was going from 30 to 35 miles an hour.

When they had righted the car, which was apparently not badly damaged, they placed the injured man in the car and hurried to the hospital, George Rittelman, who was perfectly sober, according to the police, driving the car from the scene of the accident to the hospital.

After Stacel had been arraigned before Alderman Mantz this morning and sent to jail, the other five young men were taken to the office of District Attorney J. Elder Bryan, where their statements with regard to the accident were taken. The report from the office of the district attorney is to the effect that the affair was in the nature of a drinking party. With the exception of the injured man, the other members of the party ranged in age from 17 to 24 years.

The boy was removed to the New Castle hospital, where it was found that he was injured about the head. His injuries were not, however, of a serious character, and he was able to leave the institution today.

scene of the bombing and here we found the wildest disorder. Injured people were working their way out through the crowd, men were yelling, women were screaming and police officers were endeavoring to control the crowd.

"While the reports place the estimate of the injured at 40, it seems to me that there must be many more than that. While we were there we could see many who were cut and bleeding, walking from the place. The 40 probably represents just those who were given medical attention in the hospitals and were listed."

Gage Kennedy, who is in charge of the defunct First State bank here was also near the Farmers bank when the bombing occurred. Like thousands of others he hurried over to the bank building and found it in a chaotic condition.

As far as is known, there were no New Castle people in the bank when the bombing occurred.

Meyer Levine, 1316 Highland avenue, was in Pittsburgh Tuesday afternoon and had just passed the Farmers Deposit Trust company and was possibly a block further up Fifth avenue when the explosion occurred that carried death and destruction with it. The concussion was terrific and turning, Mr. Levine saw people running in a frightened manner in every direction. He found it impossible to get near the scene of the explosion on account of the great crowds of people that gathered immediately after the explosion.

J. A. Altschuler, architect, was in Pittsburgh and about half a block away from the scene of the explosion when it occurred, being at the new Dan's Place store, which is being remodeled under his supervision.

He was outside at the time and thought that it must be an earthquake as the ground rocked and caused him to sway.

A St. James, Minn., special dispatch to the Journal says: "A hog on the Kroeker farm has established a record for fasting. Last fall Mr. Kroeker missed the 250-pound porker. A few days ago, while removing an old stray stack from a field, the hog was found still alive but too weak to move. Water and milk were given the animal and it now is as lively as any of the hogs on the place. The hog has been buried in the straw pile for eight months."—Sioux City Journal.

EVANGELIST OF EDUCATION

DEATH has just closed a remarkable career, a career which has neither parallel nor precedent in the United States. It is the career of Dr. Charles William Eliot, president emeritus and former president of Harvard University.

Doctor Eliot was born in Boston in 1834. He graduated from Harvard in 1853 at the age of 19 years. At the age of 24 he was teaching mathematics and chemistry to men as mature as himself in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. When only 35 years old he was made president of Harvard University, occupying that important administrative position for forty years until his retirement in 1909 because of his advanced years. From 1909 until his death at the age of 92 he was president emeritus of Harvard. This chronological biography of the man shows him remarkable in youth and no less remarkable in his old age.

If time fails to efface the name and works of Doctor Eliot it will not be because of any achievement in the realm of research, philosophy or thought. He was not a Pasteur, a Schopenhauser, a Plato, nor a Newton. He was to education in the United States what St. Paul was to Christianity, the evangelist, not the creator. He devoted his life to making the pursuit of knowledge fascinating to the English-speaking masses and his efforts were not without success.

Doctor Eliot's honor in his own country and throughout the world is the greater because he was never pedantic, always tolerant, ever sublimely democratic and never lacking in faith in humanity.

WAGES AND PRICES

IT seems unfortunate that the relation of wages to production can not be discussed without arousing antagonism from organized labor on the one hand or creating suspicion or opposition from employers. The tendency of prices to find a lower level involves changes in wages in order that activities may be given new life.

It is an economic fallacy to hold to the belief that prices of essential commodities may be lowered to meet the demands of consumers, and wages be maintained at the height reached as the result of inflated standards of value. Much of this inflation is the result of conditions created by the war, based on unusual demands for production in many lines.

Wage-earners demand that the cost of living be materially lowered before any suggestion is made regarding the lowering of wages, and manufacturers and other producers reply by stating that, as wages enter very largely into the cost of production, they cannot sell cheaper until they can produce cheaper. The two views create a situation that can only be met by compromise.

The merchant who is forced to sell his goods at a sacrifice in order to get the ready money to meet his bills is the victim of a condition that is just as artificial, and therefore unhealthy, as forcing prices to a level that is not warranted by the law of supply and demand. Severe losses are suffered and some failures result, but general conditions are slightly, if at all, improved.

In a few cases of the steel industry the scale of wages is based upon the selling price of the product during a certain period, and it is a plan that has been found to work well. It is a form of co-operation that would appear to be practical in many industries confronted with readjustments that will be difficult unless they are faced in the spirit of concession by both employers and and employes.

THE COMMUNITY'S HEALTH

THERE is not a person in this town, or the country either for that matter, who is not vitally concerned in the health of the community. It is important that the most rigid sanitary regulations should have force not only here but in every city throughout this country. For epidemics of disease can be kept to a minimum. They are the greatest wasters of life.

A pre-war estimate by a leading sanitarian places the average value of a human life as $3,600, and the average cost of medical attention and nursing care for each case of typhoid fever, for instance, as $200. On this basis in one small town epidemic 55 cases of typhoid cost $11,000 and in addition the loss of vital capital because of six deaths was $21,600.

That is a lot of money to be taken out of a community. Let us not consider it even from a humanitarian standpoint. It is really not good business policy to let such things happen. Public health is purchasable. Within natural limits every community can determine its own death rate.

Modern health methods include infant welfare, child welfare, prevention of communicable diseases and the sanitation of the community. Money invested in public health pays a dividend to every member of the community. A healthful community will not only have more money to spend on the necessities and luxuries of life, but it will attract trade from a wider territory. Health is a business proposition.

It is never safe to trust the man whose only motive for being honest is that it is the best policy.

If you cannot interest a man in a proposition to make money, he is probably not long for this world.

Through the agency of the corner drug store a lot of girls are able to make roses bloom throughout the year.

Millions, all over the world, as far as moving pictures spread, will learn with deep regret of the death of Rudolph Valentino. A very young man of intense feeling and earnestness, Valentino held his place, without a rival in his field. Foreign born, with no friends in America to help him, he made his way by hard work, and his talent gave intense pleasure to tens of millions. His life was too short, but it was not wasted.

Theodore Roosevelt said of him: "He is the only man I envy," which is surprising You would expect Roosevelt to envy Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, Genghis Khan and Tamerlane. President Taft said of Dr. Eliot: "He is as well preserved as though he had spent his years in the atmosphere of the supreme court."

Although head of a great university, Dr. Eliot was not an orthodox Christian. He said fear of hell "has not proved effective to deter men from wrongdoing." And of heaven he said: "It has never yet been described in terms very attractive to the average man or woman. Both heaven and hell are, indeed, unimaginable."

He even said that men and women would not be any more inclined to good or evil, "if heaven were burned or hell quenched. The prevailing Christian ideas of Heaven or hell have hardly any more influence with educated people in these days than Olympus and Hades have."

He attacked from the pulpit, but all that sounds mild enough now.

Dr. Crane's Editorial

THE VALUE OF FORENSICS

An earnest little book has fallen into my hands called "An Outline for Self-Education."

One of the points given most stress by the writer is the value of forensics for developing young men.

Most of America's self-made men, from Benjamin Franklin to Abraham Lincoln, have testified to the benefits they received from debating.

Ever since, and probably long before, Bacon wrote that "speaking maketh a ready man," the value of argument as a sharpener of the wits has been recognized.

Besides this, the study of debating does a number of other things.

It teaches where to find information. It drills in the important art of knowing where to seek. Its training in where to find facts you are looking for helps in everyday life later on.

It trains students to give attention to details. It demands a challenging of every accepted and seemingly guileless point that may harbor a fallacy. It requires an exact definition of terms and a clear understanding of what is included and what is left out.

It cultivates orderliness. It requires that weeds be kept out of the garden of the mind. It demands straight rows, solid foundations, consecutive links. Facts must be marshalled one, two, three.

It inculcates the invaluable lesson of seeing the other side of an argument. The surest man in a debate is always the one who knows the other side best.

Moreover, it gives training in seeing from another's point of view. In trying to get an idea across to a listener the speaker gets training in putting himself in the other's background and seeing the problem from his viewpoint.

It also gives exercise in expressing yourself, putting your ideas into words, and making your thoughts clear to others.

In a debate you have a test of your ability under conditions where weaknesses are made apparent and results are evident.

Earnest young people who are striving for self-development can do few better things than following this writer's advice to join a class in forensics at night school, extension work, or Y. M. C. A. classes.

PARIS, Aug. 25.—Skirts now end above the knees, says that authority on women's wear, A. G. B. (or Art, Gout, Beaut), and they have scalloped edges which make them still more abbreviated.

This has brought knee caps into vogue. They are embroidered, beaded, laced and made to match the hem of the dress. They look rather like the frills of the knickers that were worn in 1830, and they help to limit the revelations of a very short skirt.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

THE ITALIAN IMMIGRANT

The people of New Castle know the Italian as well as do any people of America. Of all the immigrants who have come to America and taken up their residence in Lawrence County, the Italian is by far the most numerous. They are now living in Lawrence County the members of the third generation of Italian immigrants. These people from the Mediterranean have prospered in the County; they have become landowners, and many of them have become very successful in the things which they have undertaken. They are known in Western Pennsylvania as a people of industry, intelligence, and integrity. Yet the framers of the Immigration Bill have seen fit to fix the quota of Italian immigrants very low. The Wiseacres who have figured upon the intelligence of the immigrants coming to the shores of America, have declared that the Italian occupies the sixteenth place in the order of intelligence. What right these men possess to be regarded as experts in the matter of intelligence of the Italian race, is unknown to the writer, but no observant citizen belonging to the Nordic race living in Lawrence County could possibly agree that these Wiseacres are right.

Sir Phillip Gibbs, a very able Englishman writing upon Mussolini and the work that has been accomplished in Italy since the War, calls attention to this ridiculous assumption on the part of the framers of the Immigration Laws of the United States. He seems to know his Italy very well. He asserts what is known here, that the Italian is a highly intelligent, industrious, honorable man, and worthy to join the citizenry of any Nation; and that if the plans of Mussolini for the regeneration of the Roman people shall be carried into effect for at least two generations, under whatsoever form of Government emerges from the present Dictatorship, that it is very possible "The Glory that Was Rome" will not be talked of so glibly as it is today.

A story of the industry of the Italian will not be amiss here. Two Italian bricklayers by the names of Antonio Iannello and Samuel Faticaco have been employed by a contractor building a Mount Vernon, N. Y. apartment house. They are master bricklayers, and believe it or not, they recently laid 10,000 bricks on a sixteen inch wall in seven hours' time. This is at the rate of 5712 bricks per man, for the regular eight hour day. There may be some bricklayers in New Castle who will say "It can't be done." The average bricklayer today lays about 1,000 bricks in eight hours, for which he is paid in the neighborhood of $18.00, but every contractor employing bricklayers knows that a bricklayer should lay at least 2500 bricks in that length of time, but walking delegates are often on the job in the interest of the slogan "Less work for more Wages."

Tony and Sam are Union bricklayers, however, but no effort on the part of the Union officials have ever been able to persuade them they should not do as much work every day as their capabilities permit. There are some walking delegates in Union organizations who glory in the capabilities of Union men. If there were more such, the Unions would not come in for as much criticism, but that is another story.

Tony and Sam belong to the Italian race; they are not a mixed breed. Their children, and their children's children will in all probability be of the highest type of American citizenship, and any Nation which deliberately excludes or reduces to an absurd minimum the immigration of the Italian people is and will be the loser thereby.

FAME IS NOT FOR WOMAN

"Fame is not for woman," Mary said.
'Tis hers to make the beds and bake
The daily loaf of bread.
'Tis hers to stitch the dreary seam
And sweep the dusty floor.
'Tis hers, however she may dream,
To wait beside the door.

"For man is all the glory,
For woman all the care,
'Tis hers to face the commonplace
And small reward is there.
'Tis hers to hear the kettle sing
And keep the oven hot,
But when she does some lovely thing
It quickly is forgot.

"Fame is not for woman,"
Once wistful Mary said,
"'Tis hers through life to play the wife
And put her babes to bed."
Yet Jesus was the son she bore,
And oh, so sweet His fame,
That all the world forever more
Will worship Mary's name!

POEMS I LOVE

BY CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

"Before Sleep," By Agnes Lee.

Agnes Lee (Mrs. Otto Freer) is a Chicago poet, far too little appreciated. She has published a striking volume under the title of "Faces and Open Doors," and in it I find this old favorite of mine. Mrs. Freer writes all too seldom, but when she gives us something it is of the highest quality, of the stuff of which poetry is made.

O child of struggle, here's the night!
Then rest, then rest.
Let peace come nestle on your brow.
Put out the light—

Nor back to the old battle hark.
Draw down the shades.
Put out the light. And in your soul
Put out the dark.

Big Movie Directors Mostly Young Men

(International News Service)

CULVER CITY, Cal., Aug. 25.—Youth is served as far as motion picture directors are concerned.

The famous directors at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios here are, for the most part, between the ages of thirty and forty.

Marcel de Sano, director of "Blarney," is the youngest. He is only 28. Hobart Henley and George Hill are both 31.

King Vidor, director of "The Big Parade" and a former noted actor, is 32.

Sam Taylor, Edward Sedgwick, Jack Conway, Edmund Goulding, Clarence Brown, Reginald Baker, Christy Cabanne, Rex Ingram, Robert Z. Leonard, Lew Lipton and Monta Bell are all in their thirties.

Fred Niblo, director of "Ben Hur," and Tod Browning, director of "The Road to Mandalay," are now in their early forties.

Family Budget Big Factor In Married Life

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Adopt a family expense budget and you will do much to insure a successful marriage, Chase G. Woodhouse, of the U. S. bureau of home economics, advises home makers, in a bulletin just published.

Scores of letters from housewives from all parts of the country telling of family troubles and asking for information on planning home expenses have been received by the bureau. In response to these pleas the bureau issued the budget plan.

"In order to spend wisely," the bulletin stated, "you must know what you have to spend. The first step in making your budget is to estimate your income. Next list all the articles and services that your family is likely to need during the year. List every expenditure. Set aside something for the "rainy day" and take out insurance enough to care for the family.

"Now compare the totals of the two lists—your estimated income and your estimated expendtiures. For safety the expenditures should be somewhat under the income. Go over the expenditures until this margin appears. You may find some extravagances if you look for them, especially in your small expenditures."

The budget plan operates best on a monthly basis, it was advised. Apportion the income according to the budget. Write down each day just how much has been expended in order to be certain of the total at the end of the month. Give each member of the family an allowance for personal expenses.

The bulletin urges "do not make your recording of expenditures a family nuisance, the main subject of conversation at the evening meal.

"It is not necessary to account for every penny. It is not how much money you have to spend but how you spend it and what you get for it that is important. Knowing this you can spend more advantageously next month.

Wierd Ball Of Fire Seen Over Cemetery, Farmers Guessing

CLAREMORE, Okla., Aug. 25.—A weird light in the form of a red ball of fire which farmers declare has appeared for several consecutive nights over a country cemetery near here is causing northern Oklahoma residents to plan watch parties in an attempt to explain the phenomenon. Some are of the belief it is St. Elmo's fire.

Farmers living nearby say the light appears between 9 and 11 o'clock each night, glows brightly for several minutes and gradually fades out to appear again in another place. At no time, observers claim, has it appeared more than a half mile from the cemetery.

The light was first noticed by Roy Bryant, who lives with his parents on a nearby farm. Bryant and several neighbors claim to have investigated, but on approaching the "ball of fire" it disappeared. Its regular appearance near the cemetery which but a short distance from the deserted pioneer boom town of Ruby, is causing attempts to link it with events of early day life in the "ghost city" or with various superstitions.

Although the light resembles St. Elmo's fire, many believe it appears too regularly to be explained in that manner. St. Elmo's fire is described as of flame-like appearance, sometimes seen in storm weather at prominent points on ships and also on land on tops of trees or steeples. It is in the nature of a brush charge of electricity, reddish when positive and bluish when negative.

Gossip of Staff Correspondents at World Centers of Population

By H. K. REYNOLDS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Aug. 25.—To make England safe from air attack in any future war is the object of a new scheme of national defense now approaching completion.

Experts from the Air Ministry, the Admiralty and the War Office have co-operated for five years in developing the defensive plans, which are designed to break up aerial bombardments as well as protect citizens of London and other large cities from gas attacks.

Units of the Royal Air Force concerned with engineering and maintainance are being moved further inland, so that ships and schools for training personnel would be less likely to be destroyed or damaged by enemy raiders, while squadrons of fighting airplanes are to be stationed at strategic points along the coasts, there to be in readiness to fly to the defense of London and the great centers of production. Land is being purchased by the Air Ministry to build new aerdromes with a view to establishing two unbroken rings of flying stations around London. These stations will be equipped with anti-aircraft guns, searchlights, sound-locaters and other devices to make it extremely difficult for any attacking squadron to steal down upon England from the Continent or from ships at sea.

The elaborate plans of the government for future protection against air raids are the natural outgrowth of the fears implanted in a large proportion of the English people by the German aerial bombardments during the World War. It is felt that in the next war the navigation of the air will be so perfected that it will be from that direction, rather than from the water, that England would be likely to receive the most serious blows.

Women members of the House of Commons, annoyed at the bad accommodation reserved for them in the private rooms of the legislative buildings, are considering the question of sending a petition to the speaker demanding more and better accommodation.

The return of Margaret Bondfield to the House has brought the matter to a head, declare the women M. P.'s. There are now six women in the Commons, and it is complained that the rooms which are now allotted to them are not only small, but have only one small mirror.

"The way in which we are treated is disgraceful," said Helen Wilkinson, the red-haired Laborite member for Middlesborough, describing the women's viewpoint.

The mosaic floor of an ancient Roman banqueting hall where St. Paul is said to have preached, and believed to be one of the finest Roman remains in the world, has been rediscovered at Woodchester, near Stroud, Gloucestershire, a district notable for its trace of the early Roman habitation of Britain.

First discovered 36 years ago by gravediggers digging in the local churchyard, the floor lay forgotten until an old-timer of the village suddenly remembered its existence and drew it to the attention of the local parson.

It was found at the time of its discovery to be part of a villa supposed to have been the home of a Roman general and governor of England. This supposition is borne out by the great beauty of the remains found, the elaborate arrangement of flues for heating and draining, and the magnificent baths.

Colonel Thomas Edward Lawrence, "mystery man of the war", scholar, archaeologist, strategist, tactician and anchorite, has again joined the British Air Force as a private. He wants quiet to write another book.

His last book, also written while a private in the Air Force, was surely the most expensive book ever written. With Arabia as its subject matter, he is issuing 150 copies only, at $160 each, and every purchaser must be known to the author and must sign a guarantee that he will not divulge the contents of the book.

In order to preserve the copyright in the United States, Lawrence will have to put one unabridged copy on the New York market, but he is pricing it at $25,000.

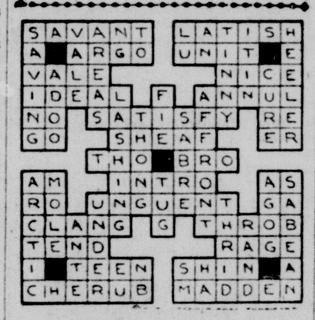
Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle



Three Things

In LUCKY STRIKE cigarettes you get all that can be in any very fine cigarette—also the added pleasure produced by the extra process of toasting.

You get the choicest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and perfectly blended.

But here are three additional things:

LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos are toasted for 45 minutes in superheat. This (1) removes all "bite" and harshness. It (2) develops the hidden flavors of the world's finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. Then (3) sudden chilling seals the moist fragrance in, insuring freshness.

"IT'S TOASTED" represents a costly extra process that adds the finishing touch to a wonderfully fine cigarette.

BECAUSE IT'S TOASTED

That's Why Luckies Taste So Good

Sees Parents Hurting Spirits Of Children

Ceaseless Pressure Blamed By Writer For Youth's Lack Of Initiative

The intense desire of human beings to see tehir offspring "do well" has brought about an epidemic of crippled spirits among American children, declares George Draper writing in the Forum.

"Two invisible and powerful dragons line in wait for every child he says. "One is the ceaseless pressure of parental interruption of the stream of psychic energy; the other is the system of education which grooms and lashes pupils for the it's too inexpensive.

trance examination boards. It is extraordinary that many parents who take great pains to respect a child's stomach are ruthlessly disrespectful toward the youthful personality and mind. The result is an epidemic of spirit paralysis.

"This universal tragedy of parenthood flows in part from the difficulty experienced by the mother in renouncing the joy of folding to the uttermost her fast growing child to the protecting bosom whereon once the infant lay or by the father to release the vigorously directing grasp of his hand from the little boy's shoulder. And so, between the two extremes of the orphan waif who unoppressed leaps onward to success and the pathetic adolescent still lashed to the parent leading string, may be found examples of every variety and degree of twisted and crippled child spirits."

Yom Kippur Dance On September 18

The annual Yom Kippur dance which concludes the observance of the Jewish holidays will be held this year in the new Eagles hall, Rayen avenue and Holmes street, Youngstown, O., Saturday evening September 18. A committee headed by Harry Leventhal assisted by Attorney A. I. Goldman, Maxwell W. Cohen and Buddy Moser has engaged the Interstate Collegian dance orchestra composed of college grads who are now closing a tour of the summer resorts in the eastern states. The committee is also arranging for novelties and entertainment of a high order for this affair. Dancing will begin at 9 and continue to 12. The public is extended a cordial invitation to attend. This dance is for the benefit of a student scholarship fund.

CHILDREN WORTH WHILE

Mrs. Ethel Clarke, who is making her home at the Colonial Hotel for a short time sends the News the following tribute to childhood.

CHILDREN

There are twenty little fingers and
twenty little toes,
That mother loves most dearly, yes,
more than anybody knows;
These four dear little ears, and two
darling noses
And four little feet loved more than any one supposes.

There are two dear little mouths
that mother loves to kiss
One speaks quite plainly while the
other slightly lisps;
There are two pair of bright eyes,
one blue, the other brown
Oft I've seen them dance with joy,
oft with teardrops twinkling
down.

The brown eyes belong to Billy, and the blue belong to Nan
Nan is my little baby and Bill is my little man.
Now what greater, sweeter blessing,
could God have sent to me,
Than these two darling children
I love so tenderly.

Why, life would seem so empty, not a thing would seem worth
while
Without these two sweet faces to
greet me with a smile;
Whatever would I plan or whatever would I do
If I had to travel life alone, no
special goal in view.

So to you who have companions,
wake up and busy get
Fill up your house with sunshine,
lest some day you'll regret;
Enjoy your home and babies, after
all 'tis well worth while
To feel their little chubby arms and
see your darlings smile.

Odd Masks Worn At Festivals For Dead

One of the queer and interesting customs of the Melanesians, dark-skinned inhabitants of the South Sea islands, is the festival in honor of their dead. At their festivals masks of grotesque appearance play an important part, says the Detroit News.

A collection of such masks has been made for the American Museum of Natural History. One of them resembles a crested helmet. Masks of this type, it is said, must be carved in secret and presented to the public view only during the funeral ceremonies. The crest of the mask represents an earlier custom of hairdress of the natives when they shaved their heads on such occasions, leaving only a single ridge of hair.

One particular type has long, wing-like processes. The face is carved from wood and the fibrous parts of plants are used in working out the other parts of the head. With such masks bark is used as a covering for the neck. Masks from the Gazelle peninsula, New Britain, are made from the facial bones of skulls. The flesh is removed and replaced by sticky lumps of earth.

NO CHANCE TO REPLY

Askit: "Why is it that Mrs. Nayber is so determined to have her husband shave himself every day instead of going to the barber?"

Tellit: "It's so she can have a few minutes to lay down the law to him when he doesn't dare talk back for fear of cutting himself."

Every reformer has his own pet method for making vice versa.

Missouri Drys In Stiff Fight On Referendum

Claims Of Wet Forces To Victory In Primaries Stirs New Contest

Gov. Baker And Three Ex-Governors Sign Attack On Vote In November

(International News Service)

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 25.—Following the claims of the "wet" forces in Missouri of having scored a great victory in nominating both Democratic and Republican candidates for the United States senate who were opposed by the "drys" the latter forces will concentrate their efforts in opposing the prohibition repeal referendum at the November election.

The first concerted move in the campaign of the "drys" has been announced in the calling of a meeting at Jefferson City for September 2 for the purpose of protesting against the state dry law proposal.

The call is made by a state-wide committee styled as being composed of members active in the prohibition movement and of others opposed to the proposed repeal. Accompanying the call was a statement in which it decried the move to "surrendering the state to moonshiners, bootleggers and their associates in crime."

Appended to the call is a list of 250 names which includes Governor Samuel A. Baker and three former governors of Missouri—Arthur M. Hyde, Elliott W. Major and A. M. Dockery.

The committee's statement attacks the repeal movement bitterly terming it an indirect attack on the constitution of the United States by withdrawal of the state's support from the enforcement of prohibition.

The meeting and statement is expected to draw the fire from the Association Opposed to the Prohibition Amendment which was active in the recent Missouri primary.

Black And Gray Awfully Smart Hollywood View

(International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—What is a smart combination for fall sports wear?

Black and gray, declares Joan Crawford, Metro-Goldwyn Mayer actress.

"I have just bought a street frock of black Elizabeth crepe, with a hip length bodice and skirt made entirely of panels.

"There is a wide berthe of the same material in gray. This is trimmed with silver buttons. The cuffs are also of the gray and the panels on the skirt are piped with the same color.

"Black is awfully smart," the actress concluded, "but it's often too harsh next to a youthful face. The gray has a wonderfully softening effect."

Father's Note Leads To Student Who Left Four Months Ago

FOLEY, Ala., Aug. 25.—While reticent concerning the latest possible clew to the whereabouts of his missing daughter, Herman Lawrenz was hopeful today that a message received from Pittsburgh may lead to finding the young woman who disappeared while a student at the University of Chicago four months ago.

Mr. Lawrenz did not say whether he had forwarded to Pittsburgh a sum of money asked in a message purported to have been from his daughter Margaret. The Pittsburgh address was not disclosed.

The father was inclined to believe the message genuine by reason of the small amount asked.

The Lawrenz family, well-to-do, has friends in Pittsburgh and it is believed an attempt to trace the latest clew through them will be made.

No reason was assigned for their daughter's disappearance. Her home life was said to have been happy, she was progressing in her school work and had no troubles of any character in so far as her family was informed.

Knowledge Of Self Helps Person In Life

Writer Tells How To Keep Free Of Clashes With Those Who Grate

Dr. Beatrice M. Hinkle has made a special study of the friction and misunderstanding that arise from conflicting temperaments. She tells how self-knowledge helps to smooth the rough corners of human contacts.

"To a greater or lesser degree we all live on the regard of others. One person feels that he will be thought less of if he reveals his real feelings and weaknesses to another person. Therefore concealment of real opinions and feelings is the habitual attitude of all people. Not only do we fear the risk of exposing our thoughts and feelings to others, we often conceal them from ourselves because they do not conform to our ego ideal. Thus we are so easily offended at a slight criticism or comment from others. We are always on the defensive, protecting our weaknesses from disclosure.

"A person may conceal his real thoughts and feelings because he is afraid of hurting another person. How often have you thought, 'Jane's tongue is sharp and biting', or 'John exaggerates so, you can believe only half he says.' But how often have you told Jane and John what you think or feel? You probably laugh at Jane's witticisms, and you probably listen attentively to John's stories. You may even be unaware of your distrust and disapproval. Under such conditions your real, unexpressed opinions and emotions accumulate and are stored in your unconscious mind.

"Now it is this unrecognized part of ourselves which in one form or another breaks through and influences our conduct and reactions. All the unexpressed ill feelings in a relationship accumulate and manifest themselves in a resistance to the other person. For instance, your disapproval of Jane's biting tongue is there—in your unconscious, even if you ignore it in your consciousness—a wall barring frank interchange of opinions between you and Jane, with the result that all unknown to your conscious mind deception creeps into the friendship.

"Our great tendency is to project the cause of our dissatisfaction on to an external object, sometimes on to circumstances, but more often on to the other person.—From Everybody's Magazine.

American Railroads Are Saving Timber

Chemical Treatment Is Now Used, Generally, To Protect Ties Against Decay

Timber sufficient to build 100,000 six-room houses of average design, or enough to provide homes for a city of a half million people, such as San Francisco, is being saved by the railways of this country annually by their rapidly growing practice of treating the ties in their tracks with preservatives to protect them against decay, says Railway Age. The railways may well point with pride to this record, for it is not even approached by any other large wood-using industry.

The railways consume approximately one-seventh of all of the timber produced now. It has long been known that the injection of certain chemicals, principally creosote and zinc chloride, into wood will sterilize it against the agencies of decay. As early as 1875 the Louisville & Nashville began to treat its ties and other timbers with creosote.

Another pioneer in the treatment of timber has been the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, which has been thus protecting its cross ties since 1885. This practice has spread rapidly to other roads in recent years until 62,623,710 ties were treated in 1924, or more than 60 per cent of all of the ties inserted in tracks in that year.

It has been demonstrated that treatment properly administered will more than double the life of ties, increasing their service in track of from 5 to 8 years when untreated to from 12 to 15 or even 20 years when treated. This is shown by statistics of the tie requirements of the Santa Fe on which during the last five years the average renewals have declined to 131 per mile of track per year, and in 1925 to 107, as compared with normal requirements of 250 to 300 untreated ties. Likewise, on the Northern Pacific, which has resorted to treatment more recently, the renewals have declined from 292 per mile of track before treatment to 166 at present.

The effect on the timber supply is shown by the fact that whereas 3,758,984 ties were required for the maintenance of 13,379 miles of tracks on the Santa Fe in 1910, only 1,936,497 were required for 18,054 miles of track in 1925. In other words, the ties required declined 48 per cent in these 15 years in spite of an increase of 35 per cent in the road's mileage.

Entire Town Is Reported Ruined By Damaging Fire

(International News Service)

THE PAS, Man., Aug. 25.—Perch Rapids, a settlement on the Churchill river, north of here, has been completely destroyed in a fire which is sweeping north and easterly through valuable timber areas, according to advices received here today.

The advices did not say if there had been any loss of life. Settlers are believed to have had ample warning to make their escape.

Milk Bottle Inventor Dies Known To Few

Dr. Harvey D. Thatcher's Model Has Gone Unchanged Since 1886

A comparatively unknown man died in Potsdam, N. Y., not long ago without inspiring an "extra" or even being headlined. He had merely invented the milk bottle back in 1886, says the Los Angeles Times.

However, he vied with Pasteur in saving the babies by protecting the milk of the great cities from dust and germs. That the institution has not changed in design in 40 years shows his wisdom.

Every morning a grateful people pours its cream into its coffee and floods its breakfast food with milk and the aroma thereof rises as a sweet incense to the memory of Dr. Harvey D. Thatcher, druggist and philanthropist.

Pasteur cooked his milk and exterminated the vast brood of bacilli that infested all edibles. Thatcher just prevented the germ in its rampages and made the milk germproof in bottles.

Pasteurization is frequently strong and repellent to the palate. Even then the process is dependent upon Thatcher to keep it that way. The bottle blower largely took away the necessity of sterilization.

Thatcher also tried his hand at a baking powder and an orange butter coloring matter; but his name and fame are largely secure by virtue of his bottle.

While no genius may be able to produce much poetry out of a bottle and no "Iliad" or "Odyssey" will ever be inspired by his heroism, and while he never rushed in spectacularly in a crisis and saved from disaster, yet he did make milk safe for democracy.

By so serving he has saved millions without fanfare or fuss. He needs no bust with name engraved thereon to preserve his name. While he may never be admitted to the Hall of Fame, yet the little white bottle standing on the front stoop and ever renewed each morning will be an endearing monument to Harvey D. Thatcher.

State Is Keeping Close Watch On Its Wild Life

Pennsylvania keeps a close watch on its wild life. Besides issuing hunting licenses the game commission required curators and collectors for museums, taxidermists, ferret breeders, ferret users and fur dealers to have licenses and file annual reports.

Three Types

Last year 20 curators and collectors availed themselves of the opportunity to obtain permits for the collection of game and birds. They are classified in three types—scientists in ornithology or mammalogy, agents of public museums and teachers of ornithology. The former may take an unlimited number of game and protected birds and their nests and eggs as well as an unlimited number of game and fur-bearing animals. The collectors may take eight specimens of each species of protected bird and two nests and eggs of each; four specimens of each variety of game birds and two nests and eggs and five specimens of each species of game and fur-bearing animals. Teachers of ornithology are limited to four specimens of each species of protected bird and to one nest and egg.

Must Have Permits

In 1925 the commission issued 433 licenses to taxidermists. In 1913 there were 105 of these licenses issued. Eighty owners of ferrets took out licenses. These animals, the commission said, are used largely for catching rats as it is unlawful to use them in the pursuit of game. One ferret breeder operated last year, but the commission has been notified that he will not renew his license, the demand for ferrets becoming so limited that their breeding has ceased to be profitable.

Many Licenses

There were almost 100 licenses issued for authority to propagate game. Operators of fur farms are not required to be licensed but fur dealers are and as a consequence approximately 1,100 licenses were issued last year.

4 Bound Over As Chicken Thieves

AKRON, O., Aug. 25.—Two men and two women, charged with burglary in connection with their alleged presence in a Greensburg farmer's chicken coop, were held to the grand jury under bonds of $1,000 each today by Municipal Judge Carl Hoyt.

They are Cecil Westfall, 33, of 589 S. Arlington street; L. W. Bevans, 27, and Florence Bevans, 23, of 80 W. Buchtel avenue and Helen Rodenbach, 35.

They are said to have been discovered in the chicken coop after a burglar alarm had sounded.

Convicted of operating an automobile while intoxicated, Eugene Hill, 33, of 38 McCoy street, was fined $25 and sentenced to the county jail for thirty days. Judge Hoyt also revoked his driving license for six months.

Nude Girl Turned Over To Parents

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 25.—Clara Brick, 16, of Etna, arrested by Millvale police after residents complained that a girl, entirely nude save for a thin cloth around her hips, was seen in the neighborhood, was turned over to her mother today by county detectives.

Harry Cochran, assistant chief of county detectives, said the girl refused to discuss the charge she is said to have made to Millvale police that a group of men attacked her.

Her mother said that Clara left home alone several days ago.

Believe Maniac Responsible For Bombing Of Bank

INJURED PERSONS ARE RECOVERING

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—Working on the theory that it was a maniac who bombed the Farmers Deposit National bank here yesterday when his demand for $2,000 was refused, police this afternoon enlisted Mayview hospital authorities in endeavoring to identify the bandit.

Several inmates of the hospital, where mental cases are treated, escaped recently and detectives are considering the possibility that one of them was the bomber.

Reports that the description of John Collins, former engineer in the bureau of city parks, corresponds to that of the dead man were denied by morgue attaches, who said they are positive Collins was not the man.

Collins recently disappeared from the Mayview institution with four other patients. A sister of Collins, after viewing the body, also said it was not her brother.

James W. Barley, an employe of the Philadelphia company, was put in an embarrassing position when the report gained circulation immediately after the blast that a card bearing his name was found on the dead bandit.

This was explained by bank officials who said the tellers were making out the Philadelphia company's payroll when the blast occurred. Barley's pay card was blown from a bank cage to a spot near where the remnants of the bandit's body were found.

All but seven of the blast victims have been released from hospitals. Of the remaining seven, A. C. Anderson, special bank policeman who was rushing to the aid of George Ortmann, bank policeman killed in the blast, was the only one in a critical condition.

Anderson was severely burned and it is feared he may lose the sight of both eyes.

Woman Wins Order For 50 Million Tees

Tiny Golf Ball Rests Will Be Made At Norway, Maine, Plant

A woodwoking concern in Norway, Me., is making a large number of tiny golf tees—a tiny little wooden peg-like thing to stick into the ground and form a rest for the golf ball. The order for golf tees is fifty—not fifty hundred, not fifty thousand, but for fifty million! Since a million is a thousand thousand according to schoolboy arithmetic, it is easy to figure the magnitude of this single order, says the Boston Globe.

The tees, which are 1 15-16 inches high, are turned in automatic lathes, one operator handling two lathes at a time. Turning 30,000 tees a day is considered a fair day's work for one man.

The tees are placed in great barrels, in which they are churned about in the sand and polished after they come from the lathes; then they are stained, some red, some yellow, in other large barrel-shaped contrivances for coloring and polishing.

The finished tees are then counted by automatic counting or weighing scales and are packed 230,000 tees to a specially made packing case for shipment.

Two hundred and fifty thousand feet, or some 400 cords, of birch squares will be fed into the lathes before the order is completed. The factory is owned and operated by a woman, Mrs. Iona Moore, of Norway, Me.

Eating Of Muskrats Not News To Editor

Might Have Been Scoop 300 Years Ago, However, New Yorker Admits

We are indeed pained at the announcement made by Dr. Charles E. Johnson of Syracuse University to the effect that the muskrat makes good eating, and we are even more pained that the newspapers have published this announcement, apparently under the impression that it is news.

We do not deny that it would have been news 300 years ago, if published in a London Journal under the caption "Intelligence From the New World;" but that it is news now we stoutly deny, and we shall defend our position if necessary with quotations from the authorities.

Yes, muskrat is good eating. The meat is like squirrel meat, but has, to our thinking, a better flavor. We take issue with Dr. Johnson when he says it should be dipped in a batter of flour and meal, then fried in lard. Evidently he is under the impression that a muskrat is first cousin to a rabbit.

Mystery Surrounds Suicide Of Woman

SHARON, Aug. 25.—Mystery surrounds the suicide of a woman supposed to be Mary Lesco, aged 30, whose body was found hanging in a barn on the farm of John Jerko, Brockfield township. She had used her apron strings as a noose, and before hanging herself had slashed her wrists. A note, written in Hungarian was found but has not yet been translated. Coroner J. C. Henshaw is conducting an investigation. Little is known of the woman. She appeared at the Jerko home Sunday and was given employment. A letter of recommendation, made out to Mary Lesco, showed she had been employed at a sanitarium in Stamford, Conn., about a year ago. She is said to have mentioned a son who resides in Youngstown, O., and search for him is being made this afternoon.

Massachusetts Youth Dodges Death In Leap

Jumps From Locomotive Tender, Escaping With Scratches

ELKTON, Aug. 25.—With the Federal Express making 35 miles an hour in crossing the Susquehanna river bridge, Charles Ford, 19 years old, of Braintree, Mass., leaped from the tender of the engine and escaped with only a few scratches and bruises.

Ford, who had left his home several weeks ago, ran out of funds while in Baltimore, and, wishing to get back home, "hopped" aboard the engine and found a comfortable seat amid the coal. All went well until Havre de Grace was reached, when the fireman started to shovel down coal. Ford, seeing the fireman with shovel in hand, and fearing he was about to be attacked, made a leap from the tender, landing on the platform between the two main tracks.

The fireman, believing the youth had been killed, had the train stopped, and the train crew, walking back to the platform, was surprised to find Ford walking toward the Perrysville side of the bridge. An officer placed him under arrest for trespassing and a sentence of ten days in Elkton jail was imposed on him.

The boy's parents were notified and money was soon wired to the sheriff to purchase a railroaod ticket and send the youth home.

Lassen Peak Volcanic Eruption Is Forecast

REDDING, Cal., Aug. 25.—A large vent has been discovered on the southeast side of Lassen Peak, and experts believe that the next big volcanic outbreak will occur there.

As a result of the discovery, Thomas A. Jagger, in charge of observations on the volcanic peak, said that the observation station which was to have been located at Mineral probably will be estabiished at King Meadows instead. The latter point is nearer the vent. Mount Lassen is the only active volcano in continental United States.

Relics Of Bronze Age Unearthed In England

On a long slope of seemingly virgin turf between the famous hills of Cisbury and Chanctonbury, Sussex, England, archaeologists have unearthed a site, abounding in evidences of occupation, of what is known as a late Bronze age village. Everywhere are the signs of a peaceful, cultured homestead, pastoral, yet with many of the luxuries of life brought about by 400 years of Roman civilization, and with every sign of this is a sign of the destruction wrought by the Saxon invader. The ground is littered with the Roman tiles, the Roman tile nails, fragments of walls that were once covered in the Roman manner with colored distemper. Here, in what was obviously the rubbish pit, fragments put together make up a perfect specimen of a wine cup of the classic red Samian ware, delicately ornamented with a pattern that originally came from classic Greece. Here are fragments of the great amphorae used by Romans for importing wine. It should be noted that pots made by these vanished Bronze age people and the earliest of the Celts would not stand fire, so to cook their food they heated flint stones and threw them into the water until it boiled. It is a trick of savages to this day. Once the turf is removed the soil of the downs about these villages is strewn all over with millions of flint stones bearing unmistakable signs of having been made red hot and then plunged into water.

Service Extended By P.-O. System

Other important Indiana points that can now be reached by the P.-O. electric freight service are Peru, Bluffton, Wabash and Huntington.

The freight service by the P.-O. lines has extended rapidly and through connecting lines many of the most important points in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Western Pennsylvania may be reached.

Ancient Greeks Used Coal As Did Romans

Coal probably was burned for the production of superheat used in the fabrication of metals during the iron age, as early as B. C. 1,000, but the first authentic use of this fuel is traced to Greece, where it was burned in B. C. 300. These and other facts relating to the common bituminous and rarer anthracite coal of today are presented by Malcolm MacFarlane, general fuel inspector of the New York Central, in an article in the latest number of the railroad's magazine.

"It seems reasonable," the writer says, "to believe that coal came into limited use with the discovery of metals because of the more intense heat required to work these. On this assumption coal may have been used as early as B. C. 1,000. Reports indicate that coal was mined quite extensively in England during the Roman invasion, but the earliest reliable record of its use there is in A. D. 852."

After tramping unconsciously over the enormous beds of coal in the Alleghenies, pioneers of America discovered the first bed of coal on the Illinois river at Ottawa in 1679. But nearly another century passed, says Mr. MacFarlane, before actual mining began, and then it was in Virginia, at a point 12 miles above Richmond, on the James river. This was in 1750. During the next 25 years it came into general use in that region and made possible the manufacture of cannon for Washington's army.

Grasshoppers Eat Up Peach Crop

According to reports from people residing on the Harlansburg road east of the city, considerable damage has been done in the past week or ten days by a vast swarm of grasshoppers numbering millions, which settled down in that section.

In one instance, a farmer of that district reported that they were destroying his very bounteous peach crop, apparently eating the peaches and foliage of the trees, with great relish.

Coolidge fixed a fence and pruned an apple tree. He can fix his political fence by pruning some plum trees.

Natives Of World's Northernmost Town Show Contentment

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, Aug. 25.—Hardy residents of these islands only 800 miles from the North Pole laugh when strangers speak of Spitzbergen as the rim of the earth. To them the real "old north" is many miles further on, among the nameless settlements near Point Morris Jessup, Greenland. There people among the strangest in the world live in primitive conditions known nowhere else.

Commander Byrd before his flight to the pole planned to establish his base among these Eskimos who number two or three hundred. He may go there in the summer of 1927. If so he will find them as Peary left them years ago—dirty, hospitable and profoundly content.

Peary was the first man really to become acquainted with them and live to bring back the story. His ship wintered several times at Point Morris Jessup and some of the natives accompanied him to the United States.

Mrs. Peary also took along a girl Ekrarisuark who was called "Bill" and exposed for a while to all the advantages of civilization.

The Peary Eskimos pined for their igloos and frozen warlus meat and went home. Two of them became prominent in the tribe merly by reason of the tall stories they told. They were eclipsed by one Samik however who became a plutocrat when Peary gave him a woden rowboat in which to fish.

Through his wealth Samik won the hand of "Bill" who after her study abroad was regarded as the tribe's choicest peach.

As the stories here go Mrs. Samik proved a good wife unspoiled by her sojourn in the southlands. The last traveler to see her said she had forgotten all her civilized ways and was no more squeamish about what went into the stew than any of her sisters who had not had the advantages of a finishing trip abroad.

Nowadays the only knowledge tribe has of the outside world is when a chance explorer or Scottish whaler happens to come near enough for a kajak-man to row out and trade some blue fox skins or when a very infrequent Danish trading agent comes.

They drink nothing stronger than ice water. Their sense of humor is pronounced though few of their stories are fit for print. Discomfited travelers who have overbalanced a kajak and got thoroughly icily wet have found that a whole camp would roll over with laughter instead of coming to fish them out.

Champion Hog-Caller Makes Challenge

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 25.—Fred Patzel, Madison, Neb., winner of several Nebraska contests, wherein hog-calling was the test, has issued a challenge to all comers. He said he preferred a contest based on accomplisment rather than on appearance, charm, volume and clarity.

Patzel limbered up his voice at the hog yards here recently. The minute his lyrical cadences began, a quiet hog yard scene was transform into intense activity of porkers speeding in answer to his sibilant invitation.

Dangerous age is when they are old enough to know better.

Lace Frock, Formal Gown, Silver Wig, Indicate Mode

For milady's consideration today-left, an elaborate evening gown of pink souffle over silver, with a full skirt trimmed with ostrich in heavy rows running from the waistline to the skirt, Marion Nixon posed. Center, one of the new wigs, in silver, which are proving popular in Paris. Right, a charming afternoon frock of Valenciennes cream lace trimmed with blue and gold flowers. A blue horsehair hat completes the outfit worn by Helene Costello, screen actress.

Much Wealth Back Of Great Minstrels

Money Seems No Object to Company Which Operates Seventy-two Big Shows Like One That Is Giving Free Performances Here.

Money seems no object to this company, for there seems to be no end of it as far as the great World's Minstrels are concerned, for they spend it like water.

One item of expense alone, that of the gorgeous costumes worn by the performers, represents a small fortune. And when it is considered that the company changes its entire program nightly, which necessitates carrying several different sets of costumes for each performer, the cost is staggering.

It is indeed refreshing to see the management of a show like this take a lively interest in our town, as Mr. Ross Dyar, manager of the World's Minstrels, has done. He is a most enthusiastic booster of everything and everybody in New Castle and he unhesitatingly tells his audiences that he wants to see no one at his show who is neglecting church or lodge meeting to do so. He urges every one to patronize home industries, points out the progressiveness of our local merchants, the splendid reputation of our local physicians and even generously recommends our movie shows, theatres, in spite of the fact that they are in a way competitive enterprises.

Another commendable thing about this show is the gentlemanly manner in which all the performers conduct themselves. There is none of the rowdyism and none of the tough characters that are so often observed around traveling troupes.

The show itself is a scream. The singing is exceptionally good; the comedy is clean and bright, and at the same time sparkling with wit and real fun.

The World's Minstrels will be here three weeks, giving a big free performance every night and a complete change of program each night at the B. & O. Grounds on South Mill street. Show starts at 8:00 p. m.

Offutt Employes Enjoying Picnic

Employes of the W. J. Offutt Company stores, both in New Castle and Butler, numbering over one hundred, are enjoying a holiday today with a picnic as the big event at Etna Springs on the Slippery Rock Creek. The picnic is an annual affair.

At 1 o'clock today the combined employes of both stores gathered at the Springs and enjoyed a delicious picnic dinner, the menu being headed by fried spring chicken and corn-on-the-cob. The officials of the two stores furnished the menu free of charge.

The program for the remainder of the day consisted of swimming, boating and other forms of picnic sports. The day was selected due to the fact that the employes will be rushed Thursday by the Dollar Day bargains.

Ben Franklin Wanted Maxims Put On Coins

He Believed Solomon's Wisdom Would Help Instill Thrift In All

The first third of the 19th century was the heyday of Staffordshire ware decorated with pictures. And not the least interesting of this china was the series picturing maxims, proverbs and morals.

Of this didactic china many pieces carried reproductions of "Poor Richard's' sayings, which our great American, Benjamin Franklin industriously circulated through his Poor Richard's almanack for 25 years.

The Poor Richard maxims were very near to Franklin's heart and he let no chance slip to get them into greater circulation. One of his projects—which however, was not carried out—was to imprint on one side of the copper coins of the new American republic some proverbs of Solomon and other sayings encouraging thrift.

"Diligence is the mother of good luck" and "Plow deep while sluggards sleep" were among those he suggested. His practical and benevolent mind pictured how many a family would read and ponder his precepts as they gathered round the hearth.—The Antiquarian.

Rich Indian Held In Marriage Quiz

"World's Wealthiest" Red Man Taken To Oklahoma To Face Contempt Charge

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Aug. 25.—Indicating a preference for tribal atmosphere rather than the white man's luxuries, Jackson Barnett, 76-year-old wealthy Creek Indian, returned from Los Angeles Sunday night in custody of a deputy United States marshal to answer a charge of contempt of court. Barnett had failed to appear in federal court here in connection with an investigation of his marriage in 1921 to a white woman.

"I am glad to be back and I want to stay," Barnett said as he left the train with Deputy Robert Bailey. "I want my horses brought back from California and will stay here."

Barnett, known as the "world's wealthiest Indian," obtained a large sum of money from oil royalties on his Oklahoma farm. He married Anna Laura Lowe of Tulsa at Coffeyville, Kan., in 1921, after unsuccessful attempts to have the ceremony performed in Oklahoma. Numerous suits are now pending in various state and federal courts relative to the status of a $550,000 gift to his white wife, as well as the donation of an equal amount to a college here.

Inaddition to questioning the legality of the gifts, the government charges Mrs. Barnett kidnaped the aged Creek from his home near Henrietta, Okla. Mrs. Barnett is understood to be enroute here from Los Angeles, where she objected to her husband's arrest Friday, declaring ill health would not permit a long overland trip.

Authorities indicated Barnett would not be held in jail pending his hearing August 27.

Women Are Lured By Public Service

From Governor To Sheriff They Take Men's Places In Government.

Federal Roster Shows Several Feminine Incumbents In High Places.

This is a fact story, concerned with the principal experiment of women in office, an experiment that is working all over the United States. And the facts, gleaned from an individual survey, not complete but representative to an accurate degree of conditions in municipalities, counties, States and nations, as left by the last election, are as follows, says the Kansas City Star.

In the roll call of the State Legislature women answered in the lower houses in the last legislative sessions of Alabama, 1; Arkansas, 3; California, 4; Colorado, 4; Connecticut, 15; Delaware, 1; Georgia, 2; Illinois, 3; Indiana, 2; Kansas, 1; Maine, 1; Maryland, 2; Massachusetts, 2; Michigan, 1; Minnesota, 1; Mississippi, 2; Missouri, 1; Montana, 1; Nebraska, 3; Nevada, 4; New Hampshire, 13; New Jersey, 5; New Mexico, 3; New York, 1; North Carolina, 1; North Dakota, 2; Ohio, 8; Oklahoma, 3; Pennsylvania, 8; Rhode Island, 1; South Dakota, 4; Tennessee, 2; Utah, 4; Vermont, 11; Virginia, 2; Washington, 3; West Virginia, 2; and Wisconsin, 2.

There was a woman in the Senate of Connecticut and Mississippi. There were two women in the Ohio Senate, one in the Pennsylvania Senate, one in Illinois, one in New Mexico, one in Washington and one in Oregon. One hunrded and forty women in all.

It was twelve years ago that Helen Ring Robinson, of Colorado, was one of the seven wonders of the world as the only woman State Senator in captive, and at that date women had been elected in the lower house in only three other Western States—Washington, Wyoming and Utah.

Everybody knows that two of the forty-eight States have elected women as Governors. It is so generally known that in five of the forty-eight women are the Secretaries of State? In Texas, Mrs. Emma Grigsby Meharg; in New York, Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp; in Kentucky, Mrs. Emma Guy Cromwell; in Delaware, Miss Fannie Herington; in New Mexico, Mrs. Soledad C. Chacon. In South Dakota, the Assistant Secretary of State is Miss Gladys Pyle. No women are State Treasurers, but in both Washington and Idaho the Deputy States Treasures are women, and in Iowa the Deputy State Auditor is a woman.

Most people know that one of Ohio's six Supreme Court Judges is Miss Florence E. Allen, and that one of the twenty Circuit Judges of Illinois is Miss Mary Bartelme. Do they know also, that the chief clerk of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island is a woman? So is the clerk of the Supreme Court of Minnesota. So is the State Industrial Commissioner of Missouri, the secretary of Public Welfare of Pennsylvania, and the president of the State Board of Health in North Dakota. Women fill the office of State Superintendent of Instruction in eight States—Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Montana, North Dakota, New Mexico, Washington and Wyoming. Women are State regents, on State boards of control, on other boards and commissions in every State in the Union.

Hold Many State Offices

The range is wide in State experiment. Precedents are being established on every hand, but the actual percentage of women holding any State office is very low. Not until you come to the organization of the States by counties do you find something like size in the figures. You find that women are filthe office of the counties of one state, county treasurer in 60 per cent of another State's counties, the office of recorder in 80 per cent. of the counties of still a third State.

Today in Iowa more than half of the county superintendents of schools, 56½ per cent. are women. In Colorado, where they are sixty-three superintendents, fifty-two are women. In 64 per cent of North Dakota's counties and in 44 per cent. of Oregon's counties women have been elected to this office. Of Minnesota's eight-seven counties forty-three have women as superintendents. In Montana fifty of the fifty-six superintendents are women. In Wyoming nineteen of twenty-three. In Idaho thirty-six of forty-four. In Washington State twenty-one of thirty-six. In Wisconsin twenty-nine of seventy-one. In New Mexico 58 per cent. of the superintendents are women. Illinois employs fifteen women as county superintendents. It is noteworthy, as a matter of precedent, that Southern States like North Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee are inducting women into this county office. North Carolina has women superintendents of instruction in eighteen of its counties. Tennessee has seven, South Carolina three, Alabama one.

Eighty per cent. of the counties of Utah have elected women to the office of county recorder. In Iowa 56½ per cent. of the county recorders are women. More than one-fourth of Ohio's counties have women recorders. Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Montana employ women as recorders. In some States the register of deeds takes the place of the county recorder.

Columbia's Ice Field Feeds Three Oceans

Oregon's Mighty Stream Has Origin High In Rockies Of Canada

Far away, upon the roof of the continent, in the heart of Canada, rockies, the Columbia river has one of its beginnings, says the Portland Oregonian.

The Columbia ice field, named for the river, has an expanse of more than 150 square miles and from its melting glaciers spring the streams that form Bush river, one of the early confluents of the noble stream that defines Oregon's northern boundary for hundreds of miles.

It is one of the greatest ice fields in the western hemisphere, outside of the Arctic regions, north and south. Great peaks, white with snow, surround it, rising into the sky from 10,000 to more than 13,000 feet.

It is a region formidable and inaccessible except to hardy mountaineers. Much of it has never been trodden by man. In the midst of its lonely grandeur rises Mount Columbia, monarch of its section of the Rockies, second only to Mount Robson in the Canadian system of peaks.

The great ice field feeds streams that empty into three oceans, perhaps the only place in the world that there is such a diversion of water from a common source.

Where drainage from the ice is westerly the water runs to the Wood and Bush rivers and thence to the Columbia. On the north the melting ice feeds the branches of Athabasca, that runs to Great Slave lake and down the Mackenzie to the Arctic ocean.

Gorillas First Found By Hanno In 500 B. C.

Admiral Who Took Them To Carthage Thought They Were Wild People

As long ago as 500 B. C. gorillas were found by Hanno, the Carthaginian admiral when he, with about 30,000 others, sailed from Carthage round the coast of Africa to the west. They captured two or three of these hair-covered, massive, wild people, as he supposed them to be, but even in chains they proved so unmanageable that they had to be killed, says Alyse Cunningham, who brought back from Africa John Daniel I and John Daniel II. Writing in the London Mail, she continues:

"Somewhere about 1860, Paul Du Chaillu also discovered gorillas, although at that time he was not credited, especially when he wrote about them beating their chests. He did make a slight error when he observed they beat their chests in rage. We have found they always do it when they are very happy and excited.

"Many hair-raising, blood-curdling descriptions have been written about these animals. After exhaustive personal inquiries among natives and well known gorilla hunters, and personal experience, I fail to see why these animals should be any worse to handle than any other vegetarian animal.

"Certainly I have found my three of absorbing interest, for besides growing at roughly the same rate as man they show an enormous brain development which at times is quite uncanny."

Paris Tree Classed "Historic Monument"

PARIS, Aug. 25.—The latest object to be classified as a "historic monument" is a magnificent cedar tree near Rouen. It was planted in King Henry IV's time, three and a quarter centuries ago. Thus it is preserved from sale except with government permission.

An effort is being made to have the banks of the Seine, within the limits of Paris, so protected as buildings to be built near the Louvre may spoil the beauty of the view.

Chiefs Of Police Gather In Erie

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Mayor Jos. C. Williams and Sheriff Thomas G. Sterrett yesterday welcomed the police chiefs of Pennsylvania to this city. The chiefs convened here for their thirteenth annual convention with about 250 officials in attendance.

The meeting was called to order by C. E. Briney, of Johnstown, president of the association. He responded to the addresses of welcome given by the Erie mayor and Sheriff Sterrett.

J. N. Tillard, of Altoona, secretary-treasurer of the association, presented his annual report at yesterday's session.

Lieut. Col. B. C. Goss, of Cleveland, regarded as an expert on the use of gas and chemicals in the combatting of crime, gave a talk accompanied by practical demonstrations of gasses and chemicals as applied particularly to protecting banks against banditry and in their use against criminals.

Long before the English channel was crossed for the first time by a swimmer—Captain Webb, in 1875—champions of many lands had pitted their skill and powers of endurance against the channel gods. So many failures had been recorded in fact that the feat was generally considered to be beyond human strength and stamina.

Rears 17 Beside Her Own Family

One Of Sioux City Woman's Adopted Brood Rise To U. S. Senatorship

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Aug. 24.—Mother Goose methods of raising a family won't do in these hectic times.

The "old woman who lived in a shoe" must have been of a very nervous temperament if she knew of nothing better to do with her brood send them to bed."

At least, so says Mrs. Eliza B. Roberts of Sioux City. And Mrs. Robert certainly should know whereof she speaks.

Most women consider they have done their duty to posterity when they have reared a family of three children. Not so, however, Mrs. Roberts. In addition to caring for three children of her own, this soft-spoken, sweet-faced Sioux City mother has adopted and reared seventeen others.

With all of the twenty children grown to manhood and womanhood, Mrs. Roberts proudly claims the mothering championship of the States of Iowa and South Dakota, and none has appeared to dispute her claim.

Most of the children have married and now have children of their own. Some have achieved prominence in business and the professions.

One of the boys, who for four years was under the guiding care and protection of Mrs. Roberts and of her husband, who died several years ago, is Peter Norbeck, Governor of South Dakota from 1917 to 1921, and now United States Senator from that State. Although never legally adopted, he was for four years a member of Mrs. Roberts' family.

Another of her children is an officer of a large bank in Kansas City, Mo. Others are farmers and merchants, doctors and lawyers. But proud as she is of the material success achieved by her children, Mrs. Roberts finds even greater satisfaction in the fact that her boys and girls have become "good Christian men and women," she asserts.

And, despite her eighty-two years, Mrs. Roberts practices her creed of industry by helping with the housework at the home of one of her daughters in Morningside, Sioux City suburb, with whom she now makes her home.

From Lydia E. Pinkham To Her Great Granddaughter

Have you ever heard a grandmother say, "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? Why, my mother and I took that fifty years ago." In some families the fourth generation is learning the merit of this dependable medicine.

From the days of the polanaise to the days of the radio, mothers have given this famous remedy to their daughters. The happy schoolgirl of today, like the demure maiden of the 1870's, knows she can rely on Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

TIMELY VIEWS on WORLD TOPICS

MEXICAN INDIAN IS STRIKING OUT AGAINST SPAIN

By H. C. HERRING
Secretary of the Social Relations Commission of the Congregational Churches of the U. S., in statement on recent return from Mexico.

Insofar as Mexico is revolting against the church, it is far more of an Indian revolt against Spain than it is a religious revolt. President Calles said to me: "We have no quarrel with any religion. Our quarrel is with the foreign imposed heirarchy."

I am convinced the present Mexican government is not hostile to the Roman church. Whatever hostility there may be is directed against any hint of foreign intervention. They resent the appeal of the Mexican church to America.

The Roman church has strong leadership. I met many priests and leaders. They are men of fine intellects and genuine concern for the welfare of Mexico. They are convinced that the country is being ruined by the Calles administration, and they do as they think right in bitterly opposing it.

I doubt whether you can say that the struggle in Mexico is primarily religious. It is a war between two social philosophies. The present government of Mexico is liberal in cast. The Roman church is traditionally allied with the conservatives. That furnishes enough powder for the fireworks. Add religion to the conflagration and you have a pretty mess.

The Roman church came over with the conquest, the cross was associated with the sword. Rome and Spain were one. Now at last the Mexican Indian is aroused. He is striking out at Spain and all that Spain brought to Mexico. In this the Mexican is undoubtedly unfair to the church. The church is accused of being responsible for all the ills to which Mexico is heir. The church is loaded up with the blame for everything Spain ever did.

But I am optimistic about Mexico and her church. There are brains enough down there to find a way out. The government means business and will probably have its way, but there is no reason why that way should prevent the church exercising all reasonable functions.

Mexico is incurably religious and the Roman church possesses the love of the people. Of course, the church has made mistakes, but I have no patience with those who would load all the sins in the calendar upon the church. It is grossly unfair. As a Protestant, I hope that this conflict will be speedily settled and that the Roman church and the Mexican government will find some amicable basis for living together. Mexico is a Catholic country, and the Catholic church has a great deal to offer.

Two Are Killed, Eight Injured In Bomb Blast

Bank In Heart Of Downtown Section In Pittsburgh Bombed Yesterday

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—Two persons were killed and eight seriously injured here yesterday afternoon when a bomb was exploded in the Farmers Deposit National Bank building in the heart of the downtown district here.

The bomb exploded, according to police, when bank police and several patrons attempted to capture an unidentified man who had threatened to "blow up the bank" if he was not given $2,000 which he demanded of a teller.

Mellett's Wife Enters Damage Suit In Court

By DAVID SENTNER,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CANTON, O., Aug. 25.—Throwing the evidence into federal jurisdiction of the Don R. Mellett murder, Mrs. Florence Mellett, widow of the slain Canton newspaper editor, will file a $100,000 damage suit in Cleveland federal court this afternoon against Louis Mazer, "Pat" McDermott and a resident of Massillon, Ohio, alleged conspirators in the killing of her husband, it was learned exclusively Tuesday by International News Service.

Mrs. Mellett alleges through the murder plot she and her children were deprived of support and comfort. The plaintiff is now a resident of Indianapolis.

Mazer is now under arrest in Cleveland charged with the murder. McDermott is being sought as the missing "trigger man." The Massillon man has been questioned in connection with the case, but no charges have been brought against him to date.

Officials Probe Death Of Girl

(International News Service)

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 15.—Authorities Tuesday renewed their probe into circumstances surrounding the mysterious death of Dorothy Kirk, 21, who died in a hospital here shortly after having been brought there by a young man whom police are questioning.

Although no charges have been placed against the youth, said to be a medical student and a native of France, police stated they were working on the theory that the girl had been given medicine which might have been a contributing cause in her death.

Friends and relatives of the girl, police said, have told them she had been taking medicine for some time for an ailment and that the young man had occasionally prescribed for her.

Coroner A. P. Hammond continued his investigation today while chemists analyzed pills found in the girl's room. Police said a quantity of pills also were found in the boy's home.

Queer Shapes Of N. Y. Structures

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Some of the most curiously shaped buildings in the world are located in New York without one of them being planned as a freak.

This condition arises from their having been planned according to streets, which originally were laid along twisting roads or Indian trails.

The Flatiron building is the best known, with its knife like edge facing north while the southern exposure is widened in the space between converging streets. Broadway has a similar shaped building every few blocks up to Times Square.

Broadway bisects Manhattan Island from the southeast corner to the northwest. The remainder of the main streets are laid out in rectangular squares, which causes the odd shaped lots to appear at each intersection.

Times Square itself is formed by a junction of this sort, and is anything but square, being rather more the shape of a diamond, as Broadway crosses Seventh avenue there from the east and then turns north.

An apartment house located at Riverside Drive and 116th street is built inside of a long curve of the latter street which makes the building a triangle with one side "ballooned" outward. The building across 116th street, a companion to this one, is built with the curve inward. If the street could be removed and the two buildings joined they would dovetail.

Five Hurt In Machine Wreck

(International News Service)

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Aug. 25.—Charles Kennelley, 23, of Lock Haven, sustained a fractured skull, his wife, 21, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. William Kennelly, escaped with severe lacerations, and the driver, William Kennelly, of Hughesville, was seriously shocked and injured when the car in which they were coming from Erie to Lock Haven crashed into a car driven by Eugene Huber, of Ludlow, near the Warren county line Tuesday. They were taken to the Warren General hospital. Charles Kennelly's condition is serious. The car struck a rock by the side of the road with such force it was thrown into the Huber car.

Only a few more weeks left in which to get all washed up for the long cold spell.

Two More Victims Of Cistern Water

Son And Daughter Of Stricken Lonaconing Family Sent To Hospital

LONACONING, Aug. 25.—Two more victims of the disease diagnosed as bacillary dysentery, which has caused seven deaths in the family of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Green, farmers, of Beechwood, near here, since Tuesday, Aug. 3, were added to the list of sufferers today when Thomas, aged 19, and his sister, 10, were admitted to the Miners hospital at Frostburg, for treatment.

They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Sampson Green, also of Beechwood, and are believed to have contracted the disease from the use of cistern water found to be polluted with germs of dysentery on the Green farm while on a visit there. Mrs. Charles Whitman, 20, their sister, who died Saturday, is believed to have been another victim of the disease which has almost wiped out the family of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Green, who, with four other members of their family are in the hospital suffering from the effects of drinking the polluted water.

Investigation has shown the cistern on the Green farm has no outlet for drainage and the water is not filtered. It held only rain water that ran from the gable roof of the farm house. Volunteers from here and Beechwood plan to clean out the well, many persons believing poison weeds or some other objects may have been thrown into the cistern, causing the water to become poisonous. It is said the cistern has not been cleaned for seven years, since the Green family moved to the farm.

Beside Mr. and Mrs. Green the other members of his family now in the hospital under treatment for bacillary dysentery are Florence, Alfred and Mary Green. They are in a serious condition although each has been inoculated by Dr. E. D. Taylor, who is treating the stricken family.

The disease has the effects of causing the victim to practically waste away, they have no appetite for food and nourishment accepted is practically forced upon them. Twins of Mr. and Mrs. Green, born two weeks ago, are the only members of their immediate family not afflicted with the disease. They are being cared for by nurses at the hospital.

Quota Restriction Machinery Working More Efficiently

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. — Immigration during the fiscal year 1925-26, the second year under the two percent quota act, showed a slight increase over that of the previous year, amounting to four percent, but partly owing to declining emigration of aliens from the United States, our net gain in population through immigration was 13 percent greater than the year before, according to an analysis made by the National Industrial Conference Board, 247 Park avenue, New York.

Total immigration of aliens during the past fiscal year amounted to 304,488, as against 294,314 in the previous year. Only 76,992 aliens, 17 per cent less than in 1924-25, left the United States, leaving a net gain in population of 227,496, which is 64 percent less than the net immigration during the fiscal year 1923-24, the last before the new restriction act went into effect.

Jack White Wins Medal For Riding At Culver School

Jack White, son of City Solicitor and Mrs. Robert M. White of Hazlecroft avenue, returned from Culver Military academy at Culver, Ind., yesterday wearing a medal which he received for being the best new trooper of the Culver Black Horse Troop. This is quite an honor considering the fact that before going to the academy a short time ago Jack had no experience except for having ridden a pony.

The Culver Black Horse Troop does all kinds of bareback and fancy riding such as is usually seen in a wild west show. Jack, whose parents sent him to Culver because he was a little under weight came back over weight and the very picture of health and strength.

Brother Asks That Valentino Funeral Be Delayed Awhile

(International News Service)

PARIS, Aug. 25.—A request that the funeral services for Rudolph Valentino be delayed until he can reach New York was made by radio today by Alberto Guglielmo, brother of the dead screen star. Alberto caught the boat train to connect with the White Star liner Homeric at Havre.

"I was surprised to learn of the plans to hold my brother's funeral on Monday," Alberto said just before boarding the train. "Since it is planned to delay the services that long, I sent a wireless message asking for a delay of two more days, which would permit me to attend the services."

IT MADE MY WIFE FEEL TWENTY YEARS YOUNGER

"Yes Sir, Plant Juice Saved Me Hundreds of Dollars a Year and Brought Happiness to Our Home," Says Altoona Man.

"Since this Dillingham's Plant Juice has done her so much good, my wife says she actually feels 20 years younger", declared John Schmid, 2017 Twelfth Ave., Altoona, Pa.

"She has been confined to her bed practically all the time during the past two years suffering from high blood pressure, nervousness and dizziness and was subject to frequent vomiting spells. She tried all sorts of medicines but nothing did her a particle of good until she began taking this Plant Juice.

"Now she sleeps the whole night through and awakes in the morning feeling perfectly refreshed and able to go out and enjoy herself, something she wasn't able to do for a long time until she got this wonderful medicine. She can eat a hearty meal now and life is so much brighter to her that she is perfectly happy again.

"It just seems marvelous that she can get a good night's rest now, because before she tried Plant Juice, she would simply roll and toss in bed and when morning came she was practically exhausted. She'd be hungry too, but just couldn't eat and certainly was in a bad condition but Plant Juice just made her troubles disappear.

"Both my wife and I have recommended Plant Juice to some of our friends and they are just as pleased with it as we are. This medicine has not only saved me hundreds of dollars a year but has brought happiness to our entire household".

Plant Juice is sold in New Castle by Eckerd's of New Castle, Inc., and is sold by all leading druggists everywhere.

AGED MAN DIES AT AUTO WHEEL

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Seized with an attack of acute dilation of the heart while he was driving alone on the Wood road, northeast of Mill Village, James Dowler, 70, of Norwalk, O., dropped over dead at the wheel of his machine.

Dowler, according to Coroner D. S. Hanley, who made an investigation, had just left the home of his brother, Oscar Dowler, on the Wood road. He was returning to Norwalk when Mrs. Goldie Murphy, who lives near Mill Village, saw him pull up to the side of the road, stop his machine and fall over on the steering wheel. She ran to his assistance, but he was dead when a doctor arrived.

Society Girls Must Pay For Street Shimmy

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 25.—"No sir, society girls from New York cannot visit Honesdale, Pa., do the shimmy on the main street and get away with it. Justice of the Peace Cory, of Honesdale, today fined a young woman for just that.

The dancer visited Honesdale along with ten other young women, all coming from a summer camp which New York society girls are attending.

In court today the justice ordered the fair prisoner to strut her stuff. After she complied the justice declared "your conduct was shocking, $20 fine."

She paid.

Judge Prather To Run Third Time

MEADVILLE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Friends of Judge Thomas J. Prather of the Crawford county courts have been informed that he will seek a third term of that office at the coming election. Judge Prather previously served two terms of ten years each. Even though the general election is 15 months away, many of the aspirants are beginning to line up their organizations. It is understood that two other attorneys, O. Clare Kent and Captain Wesley B. Best, have stated they will also run for the office.

Twenty-five dollars a year is the magnificent salary received by the president of Andorra, the queer little republic tucked away in the heart of the Pyrenees between Spain and France.

Air's Vapor Traced To Trees, Not Seas

Forester Tells Scientists Acre Of Woods Gives 2,000,000 Pounds Of Moisture A Year

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Forests contribute more water vapor to the air than lakes and streams and consequently are the actual rain-producing sections of the continent Raphael Zon of the United States Forest Service, St. Paul, Minn., told the forestry section of the International Congress of Plant Sciences here.

Modern studies of the circulation of water in the atmosphere have tended to upset the old theory that wind carried vapor from the oceans over the continent where it condensed in the form of rain or snow Mr. Zon declared. It is now believed he added that the oceans contribute only two-ninths of the precipitation and that the remaining seven ninths is delivered from evaporation.

Measurement of evaporation he plained has shown that lakes and streams contribute less vapor to the air than bare moist soils; that bare moist soils contribute less than land covered with grass crops and that of all vegetative coverings a dense forest contributes most.

In order to produce one pound of dry wood substance from 500 to 1000 pounds of water must pass through the body of a tree he said and an acre of forest must give off into the air from two and one half to four million pounds of moisture per year or enough to cover an acre of land 12 inches deep.

H. K. Hayes of the University of Minnesota told the section on agronomy that the growing of varieties of crop plants resistant to specific diseases is the cheapest method of controlling the disease.

Dieting Bad For Disposition, Says Lucretia Bori

There are other ways to health than by dieting, and in the September issue. Lucrezia Bori, the famous lyric soprano of the Metropolitan, tells the readers of McCall's some of the things she thinks important as aids to retaining of youth and beauty.

"One of the very first things I had to learn was that a singercannot do what you American's call 'slump.' The voice is an instrument so delicate that it is sensitive to one's physical condition. Only the buoyant health that comes from sane living can keep this instrument in perfect singing trim.

"I am afraid I have no fine-sounding 'beauty secrets' to give. I have only a few simple little rules for myself that I try to follow faithfully. First of all, my exercise. Every morning I walk briskly in the open air. And if it is wet underfoot so that I cannot go out, I can tell you that I feel the loss the next day. In the long New York winters, I find I put on a little extra weight because I miss some of my exercise. Of course, there are excellent indoor exercises, which one must do with the windows open, but it is never quite the same, I can assure you, though that I would rather take indoor exercise than have to diet.

"Another rule that I have," she went on, "is never to say out loud that I am tired. Of course, I am often tired. In addition to appearing in a performance at least twice a week, I must go to rehearsals, plan and try on costumes. And my own wardrobe takes much time for I love clothes so passionately that I can hardly wait till summer comes when I go to Paris and revel in the smart, new styles. Then, too, there are photographers and reporters, charity concerts and singing for the phonograph records.

"No matter what happens, however, do not let those fatal words, 'I am so tired,' cross my lips. Perhaps it is a superstition with me. But is it not a fact with many women let themselves get into the habit of saying, ten times a day, that they are 'just too tired' to do this or that? If they say it enough, they can make themselves believe it.

College Inherits Old Stage Coach

By M. F. DACEY,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

DENVER, Aug. 25.—Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., is to come in possession of one of the two remaining original Wells-Fargo coaches, vehicles that in the '50s and early '60s formed the chief means of transportation for passengers and valuables across the plains and mountainous country of the frontier west.

When President Kerr D. MacMillan, of Wells College, recently expressed the wish to have one of the coaches for Wells College museum, W. L. Petrikin, president of the Great Western Sugar company, father of a student at Wells, instituted a search for one of the relics. After many weeks it was learned that one of the two original "jack" coaches used on the stage line from St. Joseph, Mo., through Denver and to the Pacific coast, was owned by an aged ranchman living near Saratoga, Wyo. The other coach is on exhibition in the Wells-Fargo offices in San Francisco.

Negotiations were opened with the Saratoga ranchman, named Swanson, who was reluctant to depart with the relic until he learned it was to be used as an object of "art" in Wells College museum.

The Swanson "jack" coach was built in Concord, Maine, nearly 70 years ago, especially for the Wells-Fargo service. It was found to be in a splendid state of preservation, its timber staunch and sound, and the leather rockers upon which body was swung as solid as the day it was built—a tribute to the old time leather tanners.

Shortly after its acquisition by Petrikin, the coach was paraded through the streets of Denver behind a six horse team, and was then crated for shipment to Wells College.

Invention Eliminates Noise In Iron Working

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. — The prospect of "noiseless" building construction has brightened as a result of tests just completed by the Bureau of Standards.

With an electric welding process substituted for the nerve-wracking clatter of the riveting machines, two plates of a big steel girder were joined together so solidly that the bureau's crushing machine failed to break them apart. The machine has a 5000-ton force, and as increasing power was applied the girder itself buckled while the joint held fast. The tests were conducted in co-operation with the American Bridge company, which is planning to erect a rivetless building. A statement today by the bureau said the "gratifying success of the process promises to eliminate much of the cannonading of the pneumatic hammer usually associated with riveting construction."

Illinois Roads Aid Business Of Busses

(International News Service)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 25.—Operating fleets of 872 busses, with an organization with nearly $10,000,000 invested, 78 motor bus lines now blanket the state of Illinois, aided ably by the state's system of hard roads, perhaps the best in the union.

These busses last year operated 25,280,129 miles and carried 76,738,739 passengers.

These figures are taken from a report made by Chester G. Moore, executive vice president of the Illinois Motor Transport association, for an interstate commerce commission hearing.

Of these 78 companies, 63 operate inter-city busses only while 17 have interstate operations. Of the 872 busses, 328 ply between the cities of Illinois, the rest operating within the limits of the cities of Illinois.

How the bus lines compare with the steam lines is shown by the fact that in Illinois during the year 1925 the railroads carried 83,553,564 fare paying passengers at the average fare of 7 8 3-10 cents per passenger while the inter-city busses carried 8,153,021 fare paying passengers at an average fare of 22 6-10 cents per passenger. As the city busses operating in cities only carried additional 68,585,748 passengers, it is shown, the report states, that 47 8-10 per cent of the passengers carried by the steam railroads and the busses combined were handled on busses and 52 2-10 per cent on the steam railroads.

Banker's Money Didn't Help Him

"Have spent a fortune in doctoring. Twelve years ago I became afflicted with stomach trouble which steadily became worse. I frequently became prostrated with colic attacks and bloating. My doctors wanted to operate for gall stones. I wished to avoid an operation and on advice of a friend tried MAYR'S with excellent results as since taking it about 2 years ago my trouble has entirely disappeared". It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Lady Astor Tells Maine Folks How To Raise Families

(International News Service)

ISLEBORO, Me., Aug. 25.—Telling of her work for the betterment of children, Lady Nancy Astor, M. P., made what she called her only platform speech before 300 permanent residents here. Summer residents were politely excluded from the town hall where the distinguished visitor delivered her address.

Lady Astor appeared at he invitation of the Isleboro Board of Trade. She urged the uplifting and upbuilding of character in the rising generation and explained why she had entered politics. At the conclusion of her talk she stationed herself at the door and shook hands with every one as they left.

Lady Astor's opening was an inquiry regarding reporters and she was assured only one was present and he got in by accident anyhow.

After telling of her work for the children Lady Astor told of her aid to her husband when he was an M. P. and of her decision to seek the vacant seat when he went into the Lords.

She said she did not wonder that at first the presence of a woman was distasteful to the 600 other members of the House of Commons and adding that the presence of a man would be distasteful to a gathering of 600 women. She said she intended to stand for parliament as long as the people wanted her.

Lady Astor declined to comment on Maine politics. She said she knew nothing about them but she did say she understood Maine had a very nice governor.

Child Fatalities Alarming St. Louis

(International News Service)

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 25.—As part of the campaign to check the amazing increase in the number of fatalities of children in street accidents, 28 drivers whose motor cars killed children were brought before a special committee of the St. Louis Safety Council.

This plan was decided upon when at a meeting here it was brought out that seven children had been killed in the first nine days of August by automobiles.

To get at the other apparent cause for the number of accidents, speakers will appear before mothers' clubs at the public schools and meetings of the parent'teachers' association and talk to mothers on warning children of the dangers of playing in the streets. The council believes that the two-fold education will cut down the automobile mortality rate.

WASHED THROUGH MILES OF SEWER RING IS FOUND

(International News Service)

COVINGTON, Ky., Aug. 25. — Service is the motto of William E. Blackburn, public works commissioner here. When there is anything to be done "Bill" finds a way to do it or knows the reason why.

So the other day when Mrs. Elmer Wadsworth dropped her $500 diamond ring into the drainpipe of a lavatory—she called Bill.

Blackburn blocked off a section of sewers and stationed a man with a fine mesh screen at the outfall of the line. He then had a fire hose laid from a plug to the drain trap in the Wadsworth basement and began pouring a four-inch stream of water through the system. A few minutes later the man with the screen caught the ring several miles from the Wadsworth home.

It's easy to pick out the asses, even if they havn't funny signs on the back of their ears.

Workman Falls From Scaffold At Courthouse

MERCER, Pa., Aug. 25.—Porter B. Smith, well known Sharon carpenter, employed with William McIntyre Sons' Company, of Sharon, Mercer county court house, was seriously injured when the scaffold on which he was working on the south side of the building broke and precipitating to the concrete floor of the portico, a distance of 38 feet.

The accident was witnessed by "trusties" from the jail, who were working on the lawn on the south side of the park under the direction of Custodian George S. McElheny. They hurried to his assistance and when they reached him they found him laying unconscious in a pool of blood.

He was removed to the north portico of the court house, placed on a bench, and Miller's ambulance summoned. First aid was rendered by Dr. R. M. Hope, who was joined in a few minutes by Dr. M. G. Yeager. As soon as the ambulance arrived he was taken to the Mercer Cottage hospital and placed on the operating table, where he remained for several hours.

Smith was working in repairing the windows on the third story on the south side of the court house beneath the ceiling of the south portico. A scaffold had been fastened to the window casing and to reach the top of the window frames the unfortunate man was working from the top of a step ladder. A workman engaged in cleaning the dome in coming down the stairs in the inside of the building noticed the slanting position of the step ladder, who thought it was slipping and called out to Smith. The next he heard was the crash of the falling scaffold.

A 2x4 used as a brace had snapped in two beneath the weight of the workman and one-half of the scaffolding was torn from the window casing. The breaking of the 2x4 was without warning and Smith had no opportunity to save himself, if such had been possible.

Evidently in falling he had attempted to save his face and head, as his right arm was beneath his face when picked up, looking as though he had placed it there as a protection as he was being hurled to the floor of the portico.

WHO'S WHO IN THE DAYS NEWS

PRESIDENT CALLES

The present religious troubles in Mexico have brought into international prominence President Plutarco Elias Calles, the Sonoran who directs the nation's affairs from the great palace of Chapultepec—the White House of Mexico. There is no question that the president is determined to enforce the fundamental religious law and the regulations promulgated for their enforcement. One has but to talk with him five minutes in order to understand that Calles (to use an American expression) is in the fight to the finish, and those who know him say there will be no compromise and that his intention is that the laws will be carried into effect to the letter, regardless of protests of the church or its supporters and sympathizers in this or other countries.

The Mexican president is in the prime of life and physically trained to the minute. He is usually up with the dawn, and no matter how pressing the duties of state, may be he finds time for his horseback ride or his swim in one of the beautiful natatoriums of Chapultepec. The president, who is about 50 years of age, like most of the men who are occupying high position in Mexico today, sprang from the middle classes. His career has been entirely identified with what is known as the revolutionary movement — the movement that started with Madero and has remained in control since the time in 1911 when that unfortunate president drove Porfirio Diaz out of Mexico to await death in a foreign land.

Nearly six feet high, without a pound of fat, as straight as a Sioux Indian, with black hair in which the silver has begun to appear and a closely cropped mustache. President Calles is known to all Mexico City as the man whose brain is the controlling factor in the government of the country. It is said that his blood is partly European, which may account for the fact that, unlike so many other leading Mexicans of today, there is only a slight indication of the Indian blood in his features.

As a boy in his teens Calles labored in a Sonora flour mill, at the same time acquiring an education that made possible his later occupation as a school teacher. While he was still very young the uprising against the dictatorship of Diaz got under way and from the first Calles was a sympathizer with those whose cause was directed against old Don Porfirio. So he joined the revolution and bore an active part in the campaigns directed against Pancho Villa by the late General Benjamin Hill, the Mexican of American blood, one of the principal cogs in Mexico's revolutionary machine when Carranza started his successful fight against Victoriano Huerta, the usurper. America held Huerta partly responsible for the killing of Madero.

The Sonoran was on the side of Carranza and later when Carranza was himself deposed and assassinated Calles sided with his friend Obregon. The latter, becoming president, made Calles, then governor of Sonora, his Minister of War and Marine. Obregon, whom Calles succeeded, remains the firm friend of the president, a friendship the importance of which no person in Mexico minimizes.

SHORT ROMANCES OF EVERYDAY LIFE

The Joy of Service.

By Claire Wesson

HELEN FREELAND stood in the parlor of Meade Hall. She was the center of a group of girls who were none the less bright for the sweet gravity which had rested on them for the last few minutes.

"Girls," Helen was saying. "I wish I could help you to understand, help you to feel the joy of a life of service. Most of you are pledged to the performance of duty and have, I think, a worthy purpose in life. But, dear girls, this is not enough. It is only when we gloriously forget ourselves that we really begin to live. As we go on we shall find happiness in giving, not getting. It is my dearest hope for each one of you that she may know the joy of a life of service."

Helen's voice shook with her earnestness. The girls, some of them moved to tears, sang a stanza and gathered around her to say good night. Doris Kemp pressed her right arm lovingly.

"I am beginning to understand, Miss Freeland.

"And I am beginning to feel, Miss Freeland."

"And I." "and I," echoed several of the others.

Plain little Eunice Borden lifted her grave eyes.

"I can't understand it," she said wistfully. "There is just a plain duty for me."

"Oh! but Eunice, you will, you must!" Doris and Amy placed each an arm about her as they went out together.

Seated in happy reverie at her own pretty desk, Helen drew her portfolio to her.

"I must write to Inez before I slip."

Inez was a classmate whom Helen called her alter ego.

Her pen flew over the sheets. "It is bedtime," she wrote, "and the hour finds me spent and weary, which is not unusual. But I feel as Paul did when he wanted to spend and be spent. Dear Inez, I could write this to no one else. I say it in all reverence and humility, and you will understand. Yesterday I met Katherine Bird. I had not seen her since our graduation. She has changed. Her life seems to be one continuous round of pleasure-seeking and—you will hardly doubt me—she does not look happy.

"I gather my special group of girls around me often for a little talk. It is my constant endeavor to make the dear carefree creatures realize that their only real happiness can be in a life of service, and tonight I could see that they are beginning to respond. I am very happy, Inez."

A little noise in the corridor made Helen glance up. Her eye fell upon an unopened letter.

"I hadn't noticed this. It must have been brought when I was in the class-room. One of Bob's scrawls."

She opened it and read:

"Dear Helen: I hope this finds you well. Dad wanted me to write and tell you how we are. He said mother has been sick with newmonear, and it has left her with a complerkation. She isn't able to do anything but she goes all 'round the house telling everybody everything is rong. Myrtle gets mad. She is rather yung to manage a house. She can stue proons, but the bread is rather dowey.

"Dad wanted to send for you, but mother said she'd as soon send for the queen of Sheebar if she was living at this eera. Doctor Burt says time will work wunders for her. I wish old time would begin those stunts right away. Harold and Davy are fearce—just scrap, scrap, scrap all the time.

"I go to school, at least I start with a book-strap, but I don't always arive. I'm in Jack Doane's bunch now, and there's something doing most all the time.

"Thare's a Mister Toomy holding revivie meatings, but he hasn't convurted any of our bunch. You can bet your sweet life on that. We don't give him a chanst.

"Well, I've got a date with Jack. No more at present, and I remane your brother.

"ROBERT W. FREELAND."

"Say, sis, can you lend me five dollars? I think I can pay you back soon. Send it under cover to Jack Doane. Honest, Helen, I nead it awful bad. BOB."

Helen's brows had knitted as she read. She rose and opened the door to glance across the corridor. There was still a light in Miss Armington's room.

"I'm so glad you're up," Helen said as she entered. "Here is my brother Bob's latest missive. It may give you a laugh," she added nervously.

But Miss Armington did not laugh. Her eyes were full of sympathy.

"Poor children! How much they need you! I think you must go, Helen, dear."

Helen had been a favorite with Miss Armington ever since her early student days. Helen paled at this.

"Oh, Miss Armington! You don't know what I'll be up against. My stepmother and I are never congenial at her best, and now—! Myrtle, too, is rather difficult—moody and morbid at times. Bob is good-hearted, but, as you can imagine, he cares chiefly for mischief. My little half-brothers are noisy and hard to control. Father will be depressed and a little irritable; and the housekeeping is hard, too. We haven't any of the up-to-date appliances in our home."

Miss Armington stroked her hand gently.

"I know, dear. It must be hard. This is one of the times when service means sacrifice. It will tax all your resources, too; but I think you will win out, and this is really a great opportunity for service, Helen."

"I thought," Helen faltered, "that perhaps I could not be spared just at this time."

Miss Armington reflected. "My cousin, Laura Chapin, who has been too ill to teach, is much better. I think she could finish out the term. I could wire her in the morning. But it is for you to decide, my dear."

Helen had grown paler still.

Miss Armington smiled kindly.

"We shall count on having you back. You are doing splendid work here. Your personal influence with the girls is worth as much as your success in the curriculum. It will be only for a time, my dear."

Only for a time! To Helen's impetuosity Miss Armington might have said, "it is only for eternity my dear!"

"I'll let you know in the morning," she said at last.

"That's right. Sleep over it."

"Sleep!" Helen echoed the word bitterly in her own room. She caught up the letter she had written to Inez, tore it fiercely into strips and tossed them into her waste-basket.

"Helen Freeland! You are a fraud. You've just been happy here in this congenial atmosphere, with these charming girls adoring you. How you have been preaching to them and posing for them as a model of unselfishness! And now at the first test you fall down. The joy of service! You had better be learning of dear, sober little Eunice to do your plain duty when you hate it."

She bowed her head upon her desk and sobbed miserably. "Tried in the balances and found wanting. Oh, I can't, I can't!"

But the next morning Helen and her trunk were on the 10:37 northbound train.

"I've come," said the woman politician, "to ask you to support me."

"I'm sorry, Miss," replied the man, "but you're too late. I've been married for years."

"Can you propose any remedy to this deadlock?"

"Yes; why not use a skeleton key?"

The Green-Eyed Monster

By Margaret Taylor

AUNT FANNIE had come to make a visit with her favorite niece, who had been married a year. As is characteristic of young folk who have always depended on the sage counsel of their elders, Eda began unloading her troubles on Aunt Fannie.

"To tell the truth, Aunt Fannie, I am the most wretched creature you ever saw. If a girl could only see her future husband as he will later turn out to be! I thought Stanley would be the easiest person to live with, but he is everything I detest. He is unambitious, stingy, selfish and thriftless—content to eat, sleep and read his daily paper.

"Now, if he were like Ula's husband. He has some pep to him. He has bought a lovely home, with beautiful grounds, has a big car and a radio, and dresses Ula in all the latest styles. And he himself always looks as though everything he has on is new."

Eda paused for breath and searched Aunt Fannie's face for judgment of her information.

Aunt Fannie's countenance, however, was as innocent of criticism as the sleeping cat's. Carefully binding off the heel of a stocking, she casually remarked:

"I think Stanley has got on your nerves. Anyone is apt to if you shut yourself up with him and think of nothing else. Why not invite Ula and her husband for a visit of a week or two? Probably they would be glad to spend part of their vacation, at least, with you. I shall be here to help with the work, so you can be free most of the time to enjoy yourself. Of course, you will have the benefit of Ula's car while they are here and they will plan some trip about every day."

Ula and George accepted the invitation with evident pleasure, quite overwhelming, in fact. Moreover, they generously informed Stanley and Eda that they had made other visits during the year where they had driven the people all over the country, and had had no recompense except the cost of gasoline and the paying of the few hotel bills.

Aunt Fannie listened to all Ula's remarks with absorbing interest. She told Stanley and Eda to go to it while the going was good. They did. And Eda watched George with envy as, in his natty sport clothes, he skilfully steered the car. She gazed with something much like disdain upon the useless Stanley by her side and almost wished she had the right to the front seat occupied by Ula.

The next morning was the third day of the month. Their guests were in bed when the mail arrived—a big bunch of it, mostly forwarded for their visitors. Stanley handed the forwarded mail to Eda.

"Nice lot of bills, aren't there? From the auto company, the radio company, department stores, tailors, butchers, grocers, magazines, newspapers, florists, candy shops, and lots more—dealers' names printed so big you can't help but read them. No wonder they needed help on their vacation."

Eda made no reply, but took the mail up to the guest room and thrust it through the door. "I'd be ashamed to put it right into their hands," she thought.

But the guests had not so much pride in their privacy as had Eda, for she soon heard them quarreling over the bills, each denouncing the other as being mostly responsible for a crisis.

Aunt Fannie informed Stanley and Eda that she had heard George exclaim that "that car has to be back by tomorrow night or there will be an arrest!"

But while they were all eating breakfast, George exclaimed, with exaggerated regret, that they had a letter telling of the illness of a member of the firm he worked for and that he and Ula must go home immediately. "Such a shame to lose our trip to Montreal," he sighed.

When they were gone and Stanley had started to pull the neglected weeds in the garden, Aunt Fannie quizzed Eda mischievously:

"How would you like to swap husbands now with Ula?"

Eda blushed with chagrin. "It's nice to find out one is a fool in season," she said, then, with sudden intuition, "You had me invite George and Ula for me to find out their wretched way of managing and compare it with Stanley's good judgment!"

Aunt Fannie merely grinned.

High Finance

By Joella Johnson

BENJIE was experiencing the misery of an empty pocket. On the opposite sidewalk paraded his small sweetheart, Dottie Hill, in a white ruffled dress and pink bow. Probably she wanted an ice cream cone. She wouldn't get it, Benjie decided, grimly. He hated Dottie's brother George, who had won Benjie's big sister, Priscilla, from Gordon Lake. Why, Gordon used to keep Benjie's pockets overflowing with bribes, and a fellow couldn't wring a quarter out of George.

Benjie's gloom deepened. He watched Gordon step out of a big gray car, and sighed to think of the tips he had missed. If only he could make Pris "mad" on George, maybe Gordon would come back.

Oh, gee! Here was Pris driving up in her runabout now. Going to the postoffice.

She stopped as Benjie placed himself in her way.

"Oh, Pris! I've got something to tell you. It's about George. Of course, if you don't want to hear it—"

"Well, don't tell the whole town. What is it?" Benjie put his hands in his pocket and traced a pattern on the sidewalk with his heel.

"Oh, nuthin'," shortly. A pause, then, "I saw George out riding with Doris last night."

"Are you sure?" He could tell by her voice that she was mad.

"Oh, sure. He was just bringin' her home, and—"

"That's enough." She was mad all through now. She gave Benjie a nickel, and he eased his conscience over a solitary ice cream cone.

Priscilla walked straight into the postoffice and met—Gordon Lake.

"Hello," she said, more eagerly than she had done for several months. "How are you? Won't you come up tonight?" Her eyes looked the invitation so plainly that Gordon felt himself glow with hope.

"But George?" he objected, remembering.

"George works in the bank tonight." It was true, too, but now Priscilla saw a different interpretation for those nights he excused himself with the plea of work.

That evening Benjie planted himself in a corner of the parlor sofa, and wild horses could not have dragged him from a book entitled, "Great Heroes." Priscilla came in and tried to shake him.

"Hey," the reader said, in an aggrieved voice, his eyes fastened doggedly on the book.

"Mo-other, can't you make Benjie—" the rest of the wail was drowned in the ringing of the doorbell.

In came Gordon, and sill Benjie read on. Not a word of the conversation escaped his eager ears. When a pause ensued, Benjie was not surprised to feel a brotherly slap on his shoulder.

Gordon held up a dollar bill.

"How does that look to you? To go to parts unknown," he added, with a laugh intended for Priscilla.

Benjie took the bill, carefully looked at the page, and walked nonchalantly out of the room. Once behind the closed door, he threw down the book, and examined his gift. An ecstatic expression overspread his face.

As luck dictated it, another visitor made his apearance that evening. Benjie, omnipresent, and ever pursuing mercenary ends, ushered him into the parlor. It was George, and he stood still enough on the threshold at the scene before him. He got red, which Benjie gladly understood to be an indication of rising anger.

Priscilla said quite coldly, "I thought you were working tonight—or with Doris," he could not help adding maliciously.

"So I'm not wanted?" George looked the way any man would under the circumstances, and strode out, raging inside.

Benjie let him out of the front door carefully, and George, touched at the little fellow's solicitude, gave him a dime.

Days followed in which George did go with Doris, out of pique, and Priscilla rode haughtily in Gordon's big car.

Earth was a pardise of quarters, 50-cent pieces, and an occasional dollar for Benjie. It was shared by one Dottie Hill, who gratefully received the sodas, ice cream cones and sticky candy that Benjie showered upon her. All small boys of Benjie's age in the vicinity sullenly withdrew from the competition. He was accepted as her hero.

They were sauntering along the street. His chosen one was eating an ice cream cone.

"Benjie," she inquired, still eating, "why doesn't your sister like my brother?"

"She does," Benjie replied, absorbed in missing all the cracks in the sidewalk.

"My mother says she doesn't."

"Your mother doesn't know. Pris doesn't go with him—because," Benjie stopped to explain elaborately. "You brother's poor, and Gordon Lake," he told her finally, with pride in his voice, "has lots of money, and gives me a lot of it to keep out of the parlor." He showed her triumphantly a half dollar received the previous night.

Dottie listened, wide-eyed. He was still her hero, but she did not exactly approve of his lie about George. Although only 8, Dottie had enough woman in her to tell her mother immediately on going home.

Again Benjie sat on the parlor sofa. He had almost finished "Great Heroes." The bell rang, and Benjie noticed with some concern that George's flivver stood outside.

George's voice and his mother's rose and fell. Pretty soon George went into the parlor, and mother upstairs. After that, Priscilla herself came down, slowly.

Benjie was uncomfortable. They were probably kissing each other. There was no resisting a peep through the door. And Priscilla caught him at it.

Benjie hung his head sullenly.

"Was it a lie about Doris?" Pris asked.

The guilty one dug his toe into the rug.

"Here's a quarter, young man, for telling my sister."

A gleam came into Benjie's eye. A quarter!

"He doesn't deserve it," Pris said, giving George back two dimes, and Benjie a nickel.

"Aw, Gee!"

Benjie was disgusted.

"Pa, why do they joke so much about wives roasting their husbands?" asked Clarence.

"Because the old fools pull off so much raw stuff."

"You look good enough to eat," gushed the enraptured youth.

"Well, I am hungry enough to," replied the girl, insinuatingly.

Juliana's Aunt Marie

By Clyde Weldon

LOOKING like a figure out of a rare old painting in her pansy-trimmed bonnet and Paisley shawl, Aunt Marie slipped gleefully out of the front door. She had waited until Juliana, her grandniece, had gone out and until Juliana's mother was busy with a caller on the side porch. Then, with fingers that trembled nervously, she had hurried into her best clothes and made her escape.

She hadn't felt free for some time. Not since that last bad heart attack when the silly old specialist had told Jim and Mary, his nephew and his wife, that she ought not to be left by herself. She had overheard them talking about it.

"It's risky, anyhow, for a woman of 78 to travel about alone."

"Fiddlesticks! It would likely be years before she had another heart spell. Maybe she never would."

And now the whole afternoon lay ahead of her to spend as she pleased. There was little chance of being found by any member of the family who might decide to hunt her up, for the Empire Picture Palace was the last place she would be suspected of visiting. Yet that was her destination.

Today she would see for herself just how bad "The Gambler's Mate" was. She had overheard Jim deploring Juliana's intention of going to see it with Jerry Dixon and she had gathered that it was a lurid affair of cabarets and opium dens and a why-did-you-come-into-my-life? motif. No, they might look for her at her cousin's across town or at the meeting of the Relief Corps, but hardly at the movies.

She stopped for a moment at the corner ice cream parlor, then hurried to the theater. She waived aside the girl usher and, finding a seat just where she wanted it, sat down, removed her hat, fussed a moment with her soft white hair, and gave herself up to the untrammelled enjoyment.

Aunt Marie fumbled in her bead purse for the little paper bag of candy. Then she sat back weakly, her eyes focussed sharply in the darkness on the couple sitting in front of her. Unmistakably they were her niece Juliana and Jerry Dixon, the young man so patently in love and so patently being coquetted with by his girl companion.

All her joy vanished like air out of a pricked balloon. If Julie discovered her, she would feel called upon to take care of her and accompany her home, thus thwarting Aunt Marie's intention of inviting indigestion by stopping for a chocolate marshmallow frappe at the ice cream parlor. Oh, why had she taken it for granted that when Juliana spoke of going to the picture with Jerry she had meant in the evening, forgetting Jerry's occasional afternoons off?

Then Aunt Marie realized that something was amiss between the young people. Jerry's face, half turned toward the girl, was set and stern, while Julie was speaking in a low, earnest whisper. Why, they were quarreling! Even as Aunt Marie watched, Juliana rose and, pushing past the row of knees between her and the aisle, left the theater.

Jerry stood up, made a motion as if to follow her, then sat down again. But Aunt Marie could tell from the rigid set of his shoulders and folded arms that he was miserable, angry, and more interested in his own little drama than in the one being unfolded on the screen.

The episode worried Aunt Marie, for she had long seen in the cool, reserved young man the proper husband for pepper-tempered Julie, whom she thoroughly disapproved of and loved immeasurably. It made her feel queer all over, witnessing this little scene. She wondered.

Suddenly Aunt Marie put her hand to her chest with a little cry that was just audible and, leaning forward, touched the young man's shoulder. "Would you be so kind—my heart—" Another little gasp—"take me home—"

Jerry had turned quickly. "Why, it's Juliana's Aunt Marie!" he exclaimed. "Why, of course." He was tenderly solicitous at once and presently, his arm supporting the thin little figure in its shawl, he had guided her to the street and stood looking about for the town's one taxicab.

"No, please," begged Aunt Marie, divining his intention. "I need the fresh air." In the brief space of a taxi ride, how could she say what she wanted to say?

Yet it was difficult to begin. Finally, "Juliana's awful hot-tempered," she began, and felt Jerry's arm stiffen.

"Yes," he said, non-committally.

"I—I couldn't help seeing you'd quarrelled." Aunt Maria continued. "But I don't believe it amounted to anything."

"I'm afraid it did," said Jerry, sadly. "You see, Julie told me she never wanted to see me again."

Aunt Marie was silent a moment. Then, "Young man," she said, solemnly, "I've lived 78 years. And I've learned you must always regard a woman's remark in three ways. What she really says, what she thinks she says, and what she wants you to think she meant to say."

"That," said Jerry doubtfully, "makes it pretty difficult for a man to know how to act."

"Not at all!" Aunt Marie's tone was triumphant. "He must always behave as if she had said just what he wanted her to!"

There was great concern expressed when Aunt Marie appeared on Jerry's arm.

"Your heart again, Aunt Marie. Oh, how could you?"

But later, as Aunt Marie shamelessly eavesdropped as Jerry and Julie sat in the couch hammock on the side porch, she had her reward.

"I—I absolutely hate you, Jerry Dixon!" she heard her niece say.

"In other words," came a masterful retort, you love me to death. Kiss me, Juliana." And Aunt Marie gathered from the pause that followed that Juliana obeyed.

She smiled, then sighed. She'd be watched closer than ever now. And she could never explain that this last heart spell had been an out-and-out bluff. As for following the vicissitudes of the Gambler's Mate—she'd thrown that chance away forever!

"I was just wondering—" began Mr. Gabb, as he looked up from his newspaper.

"Wondering what?" said Mrs. Gabb.

"I was wondering what would become of the silent vote when women get familiar with the franchise," said Mr. Gabb.

Shattered Romance.

By Parke Whitney

CLYDE!"

"Alice!"

A flush mounted to both faces of this handsome couple, now planning to separate—a superb pair.

The woman was speaking:

"I just mailed you a note, Clyde, to come over tomorrow evening. I thought we'd better settle on—that is—choose the mementoes each prefers. You may have first choice, except—"

"No, no, Alice." The man's breath caught sharply.

"You'll come, Clyde?"

"Oh, yes," eagerly.

"I'm on my way to Glenvale now, but I will be back in time." She turned to go.

"Alice."

"Yes—what is it?"

"I—Alice—if you'd only—" he stammered.

The wife put up a warning finger. "Goodbye. I'll see you tomorrow evening."

A hurt look crept into the man's eyes. He slumped into the station seat. Soon his eye caught the vision of a golden-haired fairy of three years.

"So like her, so like her," he quavered, as the vision of his own little dead girl arose before him.

That evening Clyde Faulkner, in his lonely apartments, stood gazing at his wife's photograph.

"You are beautiful, and I worship you. But self-will, uncurbed by doting parents, is separating us, and for trifles."

He snapped off the lights, and sat in the moon-lighted window. But the moon brought too vivid memories of courtship days. He left the apartment and sauntered far from the city. Suddenly the scent of sweet alyssum came to him. It was like torture—this reminder of their engagement flower.

He covered his eyes a second, and passed on. But sweet memory grew too strong. He retraced his steps to the little florist's shop. He bought a huge bunch of the sweet flowers. Quite late he entered his apartment and placed them in water. Then he opened his wallet and took out a small white package containing a yellowed spray of sweet alyssum.

"Nearly turned to ashes—like our romance," he sighed.

The next evening, after a most prolonged, nervous toilet, he set out from his wife's apartments.

She met him with the cordial greeting of a friend, nothing more. She tried to evade the pleading of his eyes.

"We'd better get—it over quickly," she advised. "Here are—photographs." Her voice faltered a little.

His breath came heavier as he saw his little child's pictures.

"Clyde, mothers feel more keenly than fathers—" The man winced—"So—So I thought I'd take the latest one. You can get another—sometime. You may have the little baby picture."

The man's face worked pitifully. "Yes, yes, Alice. Keep the other—I—you must not sacrifice it."

She reached out a tiny infant shoe. "Clyde, this is for you. I have the mate." The man snatched it greedily and pressed it to his lips. The woman turned her head.

Thus they divided the sacred mementoes of a sad and happy past.

Clyde, unable to bear more, arose hastily. "I must go, Alice, unless you—"

A warning gesture of negation stopped him. He left abruptly. He dared not look back.

Alice Faulker alighted from her car and walked up the broad path to the Orphans' Home. Her heart ached for her lost little one. If she could find one who looked like her she must have her. Not one suited. She stood there fearfully disappointed, only half hearing the matron's order for the maid to prepare the little girl for her new father who was due at any time.

Alice asked that she might rest awhile. Her disappointment grew keen.

Soon the maid appeared with the beautiful child.

Alice gazed in rapture. The child was the image of her own little Doris.

"O-oh, can't I have her? She's so like my own! I must have her," she begged.

"You are too late. She goes with her new father. Listen! There he is now."

As he entered he started back as if alarmed at the sight of a beautiful woman closely clasping his newly-adopted child. The woman's tears he saw were falling on the child's golden hair. He heard her crooning love talk to the baby, who patted the "pitty yady's" face—the face of his wif

"Oh, I can't give her up. You love me don't you, darling? Ask that man if I may have her," she pleaded.

"Alice!"

The woman looked around and looked straight into the eyes of her tall, handsome husband.

"Clyde—you—you are—the one—who—?"

He nodded. Both were conscious of an impending crisis, all unmindful of the wondering eyes bent upon them.

The baby arms clung closer. "Me 'ove 'ou," she lisped.

"Clyde, I must have her. You can't take her from me."

The man, his eyes suspiciously moist and tender, drew nearer. The child, chuckling with glee, put one arm around his neck, the other around the wife's.

"There, you see she clings to me, Clyde." "What about me?" He asked. Then, in a low voice, he whispered:

"Alice, you may have her"—the woman's face gleamed—"if—you'll take me too. I can't let her go, either. Don't you see I'm doubly lonely—now?"

"Why—why! Clyde, we can then both have her." The light glorified her face.

A little child had wrought far more than could any lawyer.

"We'll call her Alyssa, dear." An exultant note sang through his tone.

"Alyssa! from—from our alyssum engagement flower? And you remembered!"

Right before matron and maid Clyde drew forth the faded spray of sweet Alyyum.

"And to think," she cried, "that I almost wrecked—oh, Clyde!"

Giving Fortune Away Is Rich Man's Hobby

August Heckscher Spends Huge Sums On Poor Children Of New York

Some men are born with the money-making faculty. August Heckscher, the New York capitalist and philanthropist, was. Coming to America he has turned into gold almost everything he has touched.

He has made money in coal, in zinc, in steel, in Florida, in public utilities, in land, in New York skyscrapers, from Hamburg (Germany) when 22, etcectera. His career, in many respects, has been similar to that of Senator Coleman du Pont.

The one thing Mr. Heckscher enjoys more than making money is giving away money. He began practicing the art early. He has an especially warm spot in his heart for poor children and has done much for them.

He has just pledged millions to clear out New York's East Side slums and to erect in their place modern dwellings which will be rented at low cost. Mayor Walker of New York has commissioned Mr. Heckscher to go to Europe to learn everything possible about how to go about this ambitious, worthy work most effectively. Although he is 78, Mr. Heckscher is now busily roaming over Europe, gathering helpful information. He has announced that he does not want any return on his millions beyond one per cent—and he probably will not shed many tears should the one per cent be not forthcoming.

His only son, Maurice, is with his father heart and soul in this laudible, practicable purpose.—Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

And All I Did Was Bark A Little Bit

By MUTT

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., Aug. 25.—I'm Mutt, the neighborhood airdale dog that lives in the circle, and I'm peeved. Who wouldn't be peeved? I have a lot of good friends, a big circle of them, and every time they get some choice morsel, they call, "Here Mutt, here Mutt," and before you could say 'Jack Robin,' I'm there. Of course sometimes their ideas of a choice morsel is different from mine. For instance, I don't care much for chicken, and raw meat doesn't tempt me much, but I do like meat after it is a bit older. That's my doggie appetite.

But then I'm getting away from the main issue of this story. I just want to tell you how kind some of the neighbors are to me. The other day Mrs. Alles called from the second story window that she was busy, but would be down after while and give me a dandy dinner. Well, I was on the porch when she came down about an hour later, and didn't give her a chance to forget. "Woof: Woof:" I said, in order to remind her. And my how she did laugh and tell folks how smart I was.

Then another time, I took Mrs. Connard home. I fooled her and got there first. But I kept an eye on her so she would be safe on the dark street. She was real well pleased too. Oh yes, and there are the Joneses. Will Jones and his sister just think that I'm it, and are always taking me in and showing me off to folks. Dave Jones once got me out of a big wagon, that was going to take me—goodness knows where. But then of course I'm Tom's dog. He brought me home in a half bushel basket with my two brothers, 5 years ago.

I never could understand just why people were nice to me, but I always try to show them that I am grateful and wag my tail like anything and say "Woof Woof." You see that is the only way I can express my feelings orally. Of course when I write, I say what I think, and that reminds me, I haven't told you just why I am peeved.

If my master, Tom had been home, I don't suppose it would have happened, but he's at the camp. Of course some of the doggie folks around here are peeved because I have so many friends, and then when I bark just to show I'm not scared of anything they make a lot of fuss and have their masters get after me and chase me, but this only happens once in a long while.

Some one who has a bad disposition must have told the policeman about me chasing the guys away from my master's house, when I barked at them from the front porch the other night. I expect maybe he had had a scrap with some one earlier in the evening and his conscience was bothering him, and when he heard me bark, it made him mad.

Well to make this tale short, Mr. Christy and Mr. Hayes come to the house and told my mistress that I was arrested and I would have to be chained up. Humph, can you imagine such an insult? Well last evening when we appeared at the City building, there was that lady from Line avenue with that forocious little German Police dog, what some folks is scared of. (Huh: some folks is scared of everything.)

Well, I looked him over, and I'll bet I could chew his ears right off and he wouldn't say "Jack Robin." Then there was a man who lives on a farm and if he didn't have his dogs, he said he wouldn't even get to taste the apples, there's so many kids stealing them.

It's all right, there were about twelve dogs arrested, and it seems my friends haven't gone back on me any. The burgess told my mistress I'd have to be tied up—and here I am. Last night they put a nice blanket on the porch for me to sleep on sos I wouldn't get rheumatism, but I disdained to lay on it. The very idea of a big dog like me having to be tied.

Of course there is a long wire line and a pulley, which gives me a chance to run a little bit, and the kids take me out on the leash some. The neighbors still bring me choice morsels, and my people feed me good, but I can't see why they had to tie me, and I won't wag my tail when they come and pat me and say "Nice Mutt." It makes me tired, if they think I'm nice, why don't they unchain my collar and let me follow the kids, and Dave, and Bill, and Sloke, and Morry, and the rest of the gang, like I always used to.

Goodness knows, all I did was bark a little bit.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN ANIMAL LAND

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

For many months Peter has been wandering in the jungles making friends with the birds and the animals there. The tail of a blue lizard which he always carries with him keeps Peter from harm. At present he is traveling about with Dromda, the Camel. Peter is very angry at the Camel for Dromda has just pushed Little Tusker, a baby elephant, over a cliff because he is jealous of the elephant's father, Kamba, who has replaced him in the favor of the king. Mother Elephant is trying to bring her child to safety. Now read the story and learn how she goes about rescuing Little Tusker.

THAT WISE LADY SHUFFLED HER FEET - TROD DOWN THE DIRT AND TREES.

ALMOST A LANDSLIDE

In the moment that Dromda saw Mother Elephant sliding over the brink Dromda forgot he was trying to keep out of sight—forgot his wish to be revenged upon Kamba and remembering his old-time friendship for Mrs. Elephant, was sorry he had tumbled her little son into the ravine.

"Mother Elephant! oh, Mother Elephant, have you lost your wits?" snorted he. "Come back to safety if you can! Don't go down after your youngster. You can't do him any good and you will only break your own neck! Better one lost than two in a family. Besides, perhaps we can think of another way to rescue your baby!"

Mother Elephant, however, didn't crawl back. Nor did she so much as squeal a reply.

Peter was so frightened he could only gasp:—

"Poor, poor Mrs. Elephant! How brave she is, but she will be dashed to pieces! And you, wicked Dromda, will be the cause of it!"

"Keep still!" snapped Dromda, and bared his teeth. "Don't nag at me or I will bite your foot. I didn't think of Mother Elephant or I would never have done what I did. She was good, Mrs. Elephant was! Used to divide the nuts and the cocoanuts she found with me! She was never the King's favorite. I had no quarrel with her. Yet—stupid fellow that I am—I might have guessed that what hurt Kamba would hurt her, too; Oh, dear! oh how sorry I am! But all my regret will never set young Elephant back on the pass!"

Dromda ran to the brink and peered over, and it seemed to Peter as if Mother Elephant was carrying the whole mountainside down with her.

"An avalanche!" cried the Boy. "A landslide! Mrs. Elephant will be buried!"

Trees, rocks, dirt and brush—all went tumbling after Mother Elephant. Suddenly that wise lady made a sudden move, shuffled her feet, trod down the dirt and the trees and the brush and, side by side with the baby Tusker, was standing on the ledge quite as firm as his own, a ledge that she had made herself!

Next: "Together Again!"

DOCTOR, DOCTOR

"I say, doctor, did you ever doctor another doctor?"

"Oh, yes, often."

"Well, tell me this: Does a doctor doctor a doctor the way the doctored doctor wants to be doctored, or does the doctor doing the doctoring doctor the other doctor in his own way?"

Post Office Men Complimented By Visitor Here

J. Clark Mansfield Says That Local Office Is Run Efficiently

New Castle postal employes are doing efficient work, in spite of inadequate quarters, according to a statement made today by Captain J. Clark Mansfield, of Pittsburgh, Pa., chief clerk of the Railway Mail Service. He also complimented Postmaster J. C. Norris for his work here.

Captain Mansfield made the statement before the Kiwanis Club at its regular weekly meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. His talk was devoted chiefly to the growth of the transportation of mail from the early stage coach days to the present highly efficient methods.

Name From The Romans

The name post office comes from the Romans, Captain Mansfield said. In the early days the Romans erected tall posts on which were fastened boxes containing messages. In the early stages the transfer of written matter was confined to military channels.

Gradually the transfer of written messages grew and in the 13th century the people of Europe began to use stage coach lines. The first stage coach line used in America was between St. Joseph, Mo., and San Francisco, Cal., a route 2000 miles long. Ponies were used in relays to haul the stages, and gradually the government installed other lines, establishing its right to use any or all highways for the transportation of mail.

It was also out of St. Joseph that the government first used railway mail service. This was started by and enterprising postmaster who wanted to save time in the distribution and classification of mail by sending clerks out on short runs.

The idea grew in favor and soon after the Civil War a railway mail route was established on the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. As the service has developed, it now gives a distribution on trains, not only by stations but in some cases by carriers.

The special service on parcels post is one of the latest developments of the railway mail service. By the payment of a special fee, it is now possible to get first class service on parcels. As recently as Tuesday, August 24, New Castle had a demonstration of this.

A local firm needed a piece of material which could be secured only in Oswego, N. Y. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon a long distance telephone call was put through and at 8 o'clock this morning the package arrived in New Castle.

The club enjoyed the talk of Captain Mansfield and at the conclusion of it he was given a vote of appreciation. Several matters of business came before the club, and arrangements to attend the Conneaut Lake convention of the State Kiwanis were furthered.

Lions Club Has Merry Outing On Slippery Rock

Members of the Lions Club, ladies, wives and children, enjoyed a corn and weiner roast dinner at the Boy Scout camp on the Slippery Rock Creek on Tuesday evening, August 24. In all about 90 attended, the rain of the early part of the day keeping the attendance down somewhat.

Families went to the camp in the afternoon and enjoyed themselves in various ways with races and games. The men who had their putters along played some golf, and a baseball game between two teams employed the attention of the men who were not golfers.

The dinner was served on the porch of the camp house and consisted of corn, weiners, baked ham and the seasonal garnishment that makes such a dinner attractive.

Following the dinner dancing was enjoyed on the spacious porch with an orchestra furnishing the music. Square and round dancing was indulged in and to add variety to the program a Charleston contest for children was held with prizes given the four contestants. Several members of the club also strutted their stuff to the delight of the gallery looking on.

It was one of the finest picnics ever held by the club and enjoyed by all.

NEW CASTLE DRY GOODS CO.

Stay Away From France Says Mrs. Carrie Roberts

Mrs. Carrie Jeffrey Roberts of this city, conducting a touring party through Europe, sends the News the following letter.

INTERLAKEN, Aug. 2, 1926.—Here I sit in a very comfortable hotel and while the rest of the party are off to Latterbrunen, I am writing to you. I felt a twinge of envy when I found that my room was not in view of the Jungfrau, but after I had divested myself of extra luggage and composed myself to sit at the typewriter and write this letter, I found that there are some recompenses in having a room at the rear of the hotel, for just outside the lovely gardens of this hotel is the Kursaal, and there is playing now a fine orchestra. I couldn't keep my eyes on the letter and the Jungfrau at the same time, but I can keep time to the strains of the lovely things that I am hearing.

Interlaken, as the name suggests, is between two beautiful lakes—Lake Brienz and Lake Thun. The air is fine and the view is worth any price they ask at the hotels. Had we time we would go up to the snow line on the Jungfrau, for it is most interesting to walk a short distance on the grass and flowers, then a shorter distance on shale, and then step onto the snow and ice of the glacier. It is possible to sled ride, and of course every one gets a ducking in the snow. "The Young Bride" is always beautiful, whether it be in storm or sunshine, and as you stand and watch the darkness settle about here, every minute marks a change, each seeming more beautiful than the one before.

In the evening we bought out the town, and since, we have been regular luggage vans; for musical trays and musical bears, and musical jewel boxes do not pack in an already over-crowded suitcase. But what care we! Just another experience!

In Geneva.

August 3—Here we are in Geneva! We just have a few hours in this place so out we go for a carriage ride. On our way down from Interlaken to Geneva we stopped for lunch and to see the Castle of Chilon at Montreax. The Castle of Chilon is so deceiving from its pictures—it looks so much smaller than it really is. It is built upon solid rock and covers several blocks of land. It is most massive in its construction. The walls are 12 and 15 feet thick. The old halls are large, in fact huge in size, and some of the original decorations are to be seen. One that interested me most is in the king's bed chamber. It is of life-sized lions, leopards, deer and a cow—queer decorations for a bedroom. The prison is below the castle and here we saw the "seven pillars" made famous by the poem by Byron, "The Prisoner of Chilon". The real dungeons are below this and are gruesome looking affairs—no light, only apertures in the doors thru which the food was passed to the unlucky ones there imprisoned—and we were all glad to get out of them into the sunshine once more.

Later—And now we have had our drive in Geneva. Quite an interesting time we had with the driver who first said that he had only a half hour free. Then he promised that he would show us the Reformation monument, and the League of Nations house in that time. He took us to the monument first, which by the way is cut in relief in part of the old wall of the city of Geneva. Four men, Calvin and Knox being two of them, stand in full relief about 25 feet apart. Then much smaller in size and about 50 feet apart stand other figures representing the great reformers of the other countries of the world. Rodger Williams stands for America. Between these figures, cut in the rock, is the Lord's Prayer in four different languages.

When we left this place he took us by a circuitous route to the main plazza and then told us that the half hour was up. So we decided that if he could bargain so could we, and we made him take us to the League House also. We made him rather uncomfortable when we would not finish out the hour and after a rather lively confab we got out just where we wanted to be put down and then after worrying him a little we paid him for the whole hour—the show was worth the price.

Cut Out France.

Avignon, France—Absolutely we are disgusted with the French people! There now, I feel better. I have been tempted to say that all along and now that it is said, I feel no twinge of conscience about having said it. The opinion of most of the group is that they never care to do any part of France again, as far as the people are concerned. If I should start in to tell you why, you wouldn't believe me.

We came from Switzerland and are sorry that we did. We wanted to stay. My advice to you is that if you are coming to Europe choose the one that includes Switzerland and cut France.

We had to cross the French frontier this day, at Bellegarde. We left our personal baggage in the private train (we were told to do so) while we got out and carried our little handbags and opened our big suitcases for the custom officers. There were about 500 people crowded into a room large enough to accommodate 300. Such jabbering, such elbowing, such rudeness I have never seen—and this is characteristic of all France. And when we got back into the train, some of the coats which had been left on the train had been rifled by either the officers or the trainmen.

Avignon was once the seat of the popes. The entire city has a very high wall around it built with a corbelled parapet. The house of the popes is a very heavily built ruins, but is being restored. The walls are so thick that secret stairways are honeycombed through all of them. Nine popes had their residences here. Then the papal seat was returned to Rome. We drove to the top of the hill where once the Benedictine monks had their monastery. At one time 31 cardinals lived in this place. The hotel in which we lived was interesting. It was built about the time Columbus discovered America. It had an open court yard and the center of the house itself had a square opening running to the top of the house where glass protected it from rain.

Don't waste your time coming to Avignon unless it is necessary for you to reach Nice. Do see Nice. And just here may I say that if you do come to Nice make the Hotel Regina your stopping place. I am not trying to advertise any hotels or companies but I simply must mention some of them and this is one of two that cannot be left out. It is the most palatial I have ever seen. It is crowded in winter so that rooms have to be engaged for months ahead. It stands above the town is several squares long and faces the blue Mediterranean.

In front is a wonderful palm garden which is a favorite spot in which movies are made. In fact one was made the day before we arrived and the next day while we were there another one was filmed. The halls are 30 feet wide and the stair cases are just suited for dramatizing Lohengrin, especially the wedding march. Our first evening there we had a splendid concert given by Miss Barbara Schultz of New Castle and Miss Emmy Lou Biedenharn of Monroe, La. We surely are favored in having such talent with our party.

One morning we went to the beach and were quite horrified to see people dressing on the beach without shelter. Another ungainly fad is to get so tanned from head to foot that stockings are not necessary. They are the fashionable color so why wear them? There were times when one had to look the second time to see whether the wearer was a white person or colored.

Monte Carlo.

One afternoon we drove over the famous Corniche drive to Monte Carlo. We certainly got a kick out of it. Our passports were necessary. Passports. "Why need them," we asked. "To prove your age!" Perish the thought! Some of the girls were under 21 and were refused entrance. We got in. The rooms are large and except for the moving of the "lookers on" there would have been the stillness of death; for life is tragic at Monte Carlo. Whole books could be written about the expressions of the different faces, each trying to stoically face the outcome. One woman was the "whole show." She was dressed in a white felt hat, queerly made with three hat pins of huge gold nuggets stuck in it; around her neck she wore a chain with mystically symbols here and there in it, each symbol about the size of a bantam egg. Partly covering her face she had drawn a thick veil which was pinned to her hat with about ten pins, and she kept pulling this veil down for it reached just under her nose and was somewhat short and refused to stay where it was put. While we were there we saw her win a great deal of money. At another table, sitting among the crowd, was a little old lady about 80 years of age. She was a dainty, refined little soul and calmly played on as though she were winning. So I suppose she was.

However I was struck with the fact that most of those who were playing were older people. I saw no one who was under 40. And as we passed out of the Casino we went to the rear of the building and there lay the beautiful Mediterranean sea and the lovely gardens. How little of this is ever seen by those who play. There is no love of nature the handiwork of God in their lives. They have only time for the game. The great game of life counts for naught while they are winning and when they lose many of them seek the sea only as a place in which to find peace.

We came away feeling depressed. The expressions of the faces there were too much for us. Most of them could not afford to lose.

Beautiful Gardens.

Stresa, August 8: And here again I must speak of the hotel at which we are staying. It is called the Regina a favorite name in this section of the country. The one in Nice was named for Queen Victoria, because she stayed there when in Nice. I do not know whether this one was named for the same reason or not, but if she did choose both of these for her summer residence she knew a fine thing when she saw it. This hotel is not so large, not spacious as to halls and dining rooms, but the view and the lovely paved open plazza facing the wonderful Lake Maggiore with a mountain breeze is almost too good to even dream about We are quite thrilled too about being at the same hotel with Bernard Shaw. He is a peppy, well dressed, gray haired man with a gray beard. We wanted to get his autograph but didn't dare to start anything so wild as that with 127 girls to follow our example. This afternoon we went in a little launch to the little island, Isola Bella. This little gem lies just off the coast nearly opposite our hotel. It was owned by Count Barromeo, who was afterward cannonized and became Saint Barromeo. His remains lie in state (of decay) in the crypt of the Milan cathedral. It is covered with jewels and is worshipped by thousands every day who pause at this shrine for prayer.

The gardens were laid out by the count in 1630. There are ten terraces arranged in a most artistic manner. The gardens contain trees and shrubs from every country. We saw the mimosa (sensative tree that closes up its leaves at the touch or a sudden jar,) the bamboo, orange, lemon, fig, camphor tree, cork tree, banana and scores of others. Orchids of the rarest varieties, and lotus, blood red in color were interesting to all of us. And I got a real thrill out of feeding from my hand the white peafowls. The rest of the group have me spotted for feeding animals and birds. I am never without a hard roll or crust of bread in my handbag and I seldom lack the opportunity to feed something enroute.

In the lower rooms of the Castle Barromeo the roofs are made into Gothic arches and the ceilings, walls, arches and even the floors are all covered with lava from Vesuvius and pebbles from Lake Maggiore and placed into beautiful designs. The closeness to the water, and the cooling lap of the waves made us want to rest there for a long while. But we had to go back to our hotel. However the next morning we had a lark just outside our window who wakened us in the early dawn with his clear sweet tones. That is thrill enough for anyone I should think.

Oh dear, Oh dear. We want to stay. But we smile bravely, pack up our toubles consisting of all kinds of baggage except the bird cage and off we go. But do, do come to Stresa and stay there when you get there for at least a week.

NATIONAL LEAGUE RACE DRAWS ATTENTION

Cardinals, Pirates And Reds Fight For Leadership In Senior Loop

SCHEDULE FAVORS ST. LOUIS TEAM

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
Sports Editor Internat'al News Service

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. — Foaming at the mouth probably will be condemned in some circles as ungentlemanly and lacking in sanitation therefore, those who feel that way about an ancient and honored function will be somewhat depressed to learn that in St. Louis an entire population today foams at will and without warning and is proud of it.

One glance at the standing of the clubs in the National League has been known to send large families foaming about the house, individually and in concert. Mere mention of the miraculous fact that the Cardinals are up with the pace during the last week in August has served to put a frothy "top" on a plain glass of water. Only righteous and strictly biased foam is tolerated.

Cards Favored

It seems to me that if they were a trifle premature, they might save a lot of wear and tear on the salivary glands, considering what the next two weeks will mean to the National League race. The Cards are a hot choice today. Within two weeks, they may be considerably hotter, in which case one may foam at leisure and with justification, or they may be absolutely frigid, in which case one wouldn't care about foaming with a mouth full of soap.

The next two weeks will tell the story of the pennant race, the greatest the National League has known since the memorable campaign of 1908. The preface will be written in St. Louis on Sunday when the Cardinals will open a series with the champion Pirates, with the league leadership at stake. The plot will thicken rapidly when, after a single game with the Cubs, the Cards will invade Cincinnati for another show-down set of games. The climax will come immediately in another Cardinal-Pirate series, their last meeting of the year.

That, briefly, is the situation today. It would seem to throw the real burden of proof on the Cardinals, at least for the time being. The Reds need only win the majority of games in two series with the Cubs to profit automatically while the Cards and Pirates are at each other's throats.

Easy Sailing

But, later, the same thing will react to the Cardinals' favor when, beginning September 10, the Reds and Pirates will play a two-game series while the Cards are dallying with Boston. And if you think this means a stand-off on paper, you will do well to consult the records which show that the Cards have won 12 out of 15 with the Braves while the Reds have taken 9 out of 16 with the Cubs.

However, past performances can run for the end book at this stage of the proceedings. The ball club that can show the most punch and consistency today, tomorrow, next week and next month will win the pennant, not the entry that is trying to prove something by what happened in June.

All three contenders are sprinting home right now. The Cards dropped thier first in nine games yesterday and fell into third place. The Reds ran their streak into ten straight. The Pirates made it eight out of the last twelve.

Pay your money and take your choice.

The Thiel coach will take probably 30 men to camp, it was intimated by the officials.

MISS ORCUTT BREAKS RECORD AT HAWORTH

HAWORTH, N. J., Aug. 25.—Miss Maureen Orcutt, metropolitan women's golf champion, shot a remarkable 18-hole card of 76 yesterday to match her own record for her home course, White Beaches, and register one of the best rounds ever recorded in women's competition.

Miss Orcutt made the score in winning the one-day tournament of the women's Metropolitan Golf Association.

Miss Orcutt on the first nine holes took 42, six over par, but finished in brilliant fashion with a 34, equaling par for the last nine holes.

The best medal card in the national women's competition was registered last year at St. Louis, where Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser of Ottawa, Canada, led the qualifying field with a 77, one stroke ahead of Miss Glenna Collett, who won the championship in subsequent match play.

Miss Orcutt's card clipped three strokes off her former record for the course, set earlier this year.

Ross Pitches One-Hit Game

Independent A. C. Hurler Allows Measly Hit In Whitewash Victory

Frankie Ross on the mound for the Independent A. C. team Tuesday night came within an ace of entering the sandlot hall of fame when he let the fast Lawrence Indies down with one hit as his teammates drove Barr to cover with the result that the Indies went down to a whitewash defeat 6 to 0. The game was played on the Lawrence grounds.

The victory last evening was the third straight for the newly organized Independent A. C. and they are on their way to the independent championship of Lawrence county.

Ross pitched one of the greatest games of his career and in addition to letting the Indies down with one hit, he fanned six men and walked but one. Barr was touched for ten hits.

The hitting of Clem General featured the game, the popular left fielder having a triple and two singles out of three times at bat, while Mash with a double and Scaglione with a pair of singles also were much in evidence.

Black, J. Zidow and Russu fielded sensationally for the losers.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 25.—Pinkey Mitchell, junior welterweight champion, has been ordered to defend his title before October 1 by the state boxing commission or forfeit the belt which he holds, emblematic of the title, to the commission.

He has been boxing at a weight considerably above the junior welterweight limit.

Mitchell is scheduled to box Jimmy Finley of Louisville here August 27. Billy Mitchell, brother and manager, said it was probable that Pinkey would defend the title either in New York, Chicago or California.

Grove City College Has 65 Prospects

GROVE CITY, Pa., Aug. 25. — Final announcements concerning the Grove City College football training camp were sent out last week by Athletic Director Bob Thorn to 65 prospective candidates for the Crimson team. Camp will open on Friday, September 10, and will be held on the college athletic field.

THE LAST ROUND

Fitzsimmons, Who Laughed at Jeff, Falls Before Him

By NORMAN E. BROWN

When Gentleman Jim Corbett trained for his memorable battle with Bob Fitzsimmons in March 1897, one of the former's sparring partners was a young brute-man named Jim Jeffries. He was literally built like a bull. He did not know his own strength. And he seemed to have the stamina of an ox.

Corbett, during his training, hammered Jeffries at will but the young man only laughed.

Jeffries had been fighting, off and on, for four years then. At the age of 18 Jeffries was dividing his time between working in a boiler factory and hunting and fishing. He laughed when his friends urged him to enter the ring but when they pointed out he could earn a month's pay in a night by winning. It was the money alone that held him to the game until he saw Bob Fitzsimmons, lean and lanky, dispose of Corbett. Then he decided he wanted some of the glory Corbett and Fitz had had. He started training in earnest.

Believed Himself Corbett's Master.

He had learned much of the science of the game while training Corbett. In fact it is said of Jeff that he felt confident that day the young bank clerk went into the ring against Fitz that he (Jeffries) could lick the champ. When Fitz won Jeff's belief regarding his own chances became a conviction.

The following year after Corbett's defeat Jeffries drew the attention of the fans by knocking out Joe Goddard, Peter Jackson and Pete Everett. Goddard fell in the fourth and the others in the third. Then he met Tom Sharkey.

Jeffries, now on an exhibition tour in vaudeville with Sharkey, says that Tom gave him his hardest battle. And Jeff probably means it. However Sharkey was defeated in 20 rounds and that was Jeffries' last real appearance until he met Fitz in their title bout June 9, 1899.

HOW CURLY BOB BOWED TO JEFF

How Fitz was dethroned by Jim Jeffries at Coney Island, June 9, 1899.

Round 11—Fitz came out slowly, but assumed the aggressive. Jeff stood off, evidently waiting for a knockout (a chance to land one). They clinched three times. Coming to close quarters Jeff put two hard rights over Fitz's heart, sending him back Then Jeff sent straight left to the neck, which he followed with a left to the chest.

Fitz crowded in. He tried his right for the jaw, but was short. He, however, succeeded in blocking the Californian's return. Jeff then jabbed his left to the head and sent his right to the point of Fitz's jaw. Fitz went down for the full count.

The battle was staged at Coney Island. Fitzsimmons was not a rugged man though courageous to the nth degree. Had he realized that his luxurious living in the two years intervening between his victory over Corbett and the date of the Jeffries bout had hurt him he might have trained more diligently for the bout. He not only failed to realize this but he even treated the battle lightly and felt no need of hard training.

What misled Fitz was a glimpse he had of Jeffries the year previous. After the Sharkey bout Jeffries had fought with Bob Armstrong, a clever negro fighter. Jeffries hurt his hand on the negro's head, and the champ's apparent clumsiness that night rather amused Fitz.

Jeffries Takes Off Weight

When Fitz and Jeffries entered the ring "Curly Bob" was not in good condition. Jeffries was. Between the night of the Armstrong fiasco (August 5, 1898) and the title bout Jeffries had taken off 28 or 30 pounds of weight and had learned to use his left hand. Fitz weighed 175 but he was soft. He drank all he wanted of beer and ale while training.

Fitz's confidence caused him to rush Jeffries from the first bell. The big boilermaker, however, played a safe defensive game. Only when Fitz left him a good opening in the second round did he cut loose and then with a blow to the jaw sent Fitz down for the count of nine. How Fitz weathered that round was a mystery to many.

In the ninth round Fitz realized that he was tiring and acting in the belief that he was about "shot" almost won the fight. He staked all on one punch that connected with Jeffries jaw. Had the blow been flush Jeff would have taken the count. As it was the curly one's left struck Jeff below the ear. Jeffries kept his feet but was still dazed when the bell rang. Fitz apparently put everything into the poke. He showed it in the tenth. And after making sure that the lanky chap wasn't "playing possum" Jeff went after him in the eleventh.

Crimson Grid Squad To Start Training Soon

GROVE CITY, Pa., Aug. 25.—Final announcements concerning the Grove City college football training camp were sent out last week by Athletic Director Bob Thorn to 65 prospective candidates for the Crimson team. Camp will open on Friday, September 10, and will be held on the college athletic field. The candidates who were members of last year's squad were exceedingly anxious to hear that the training period this fall would be held on the college grounds where the accommodations are ideal. The players will be housed and fed at Memorial hall, the boys' dormitory, while the dressing rooms will be in the college gymnasium adjacent to the playing field.

The preliminary camp last fall was held on the grounds of the Grove City Country club. That would be a very satisfactory place for a smaller squad to train. The accommodations are not extensive enough, however, for a squad of 50 or more men. The coaching force has been pretty well decided upon. Charles W. Bowser, who has been at Grove City for the past three years, will be the head coach, of course. The names of his assistants will be announced the first of next week.

Arrange Series

According to Manager T. C. Richards of the Independent A. C. today, his team will play the Hillsville team winners of the Twilight League a series of games starting with a game at Hillsville on September 2.

The Hillsville team will play the second game of the series in New Castle on September 10. The playing field for a third game if such is found necessary will be selected later.

Tagging All Bases

(International News Service)

The Giants almost won a game yesterday, but infield errors put Jack Scott at a disadvantage and the Cincinnati Reds came through on top, 4 to 3.

The Robins regretted of their action a little while ago in toppling the Pirates out of first place, so they handed the dish back again yesterday, 10 to 1. Ray Kremer pitched beautiful ball, while Burleigh Grimes bowled for the Dodgers, allowing a rally of five runs in two innings, before he was relieved of the responsibility.

The Braves and the Cards divided honors in their doubleheader at St. Louis yesterday. The visitors took the first, 2 to 1, then fought a close battle to give Hornsby's boys the second, 6 to 5.

Long-distance batting was the rule of the Chicago Cubs, leaving the Philadelphia Nationals on the sour end of both games of a doubleheader. The first one went 9 to 4, while two homers by Hartnett and one by Wilson in the second helped shut out the visitors, 9 to 0.

The Senators and the Browns had the American League all to themselves yesterday, and for the Senators, everything was quite all right. Heavy hitting at the start gave them a sizeable lead, and St. Louis dropped on the short end of a 9 to 6 score. Rain caused postponement of all the other games.

Mrs. Roy Palmer, of Portland, aspires to win the Oregon State Left-handed Golfers' championship and is the only woman entered in the title tournament this year. Mrs. Palmer plays to an 18 handicap and declares she is ready to test her skill against any man left-hander in Oregon.

The major league record for total runs in one season is 457, made by Babe Ruth in 1921.

Wide-Awakes Hurl Diamond Challenge

The Wampum Wide-Awakes thru the News wish to challenge any team in Lawrence county for the midget championship.

The ages of the Wampm team are so arranged that it is a team of players ranging in age from 14 to 17, thus being a midget team in age and size.

The Wide-Awakes will play the first game of a series away from home, providing that the team gives them a return game. The Wide-Awakes have won 18 games, lost two, and have won four games by the forfeit route.

Following are the players making up the club roster: Manager Pat Moran, Business Manager Walter Gaffey, box 42, Wampum, Pa.; Captain John Porter, S. Allen, A. Demarke, E. Boone, T. Dubrovich, J. Ferrucci, P. Herbert, R. Harper, J. Galliard and Paul Campbell, coach.

National Stars In Western Open

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 25.—Most of the Nation's golf celebrities have arrived here to put in a few practice rounds over the Highland Golf and Country Club where the Western Open tournament will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Gene Sarazen and Willie Macfarlane, former National open champions and Macdonald Smith, present Western open titleholder, were over the course yesterday. Smith showed he will be a strong contender for the title again this year by shooting a 33 on the first nine.

The sixth straight Texas League pennant now seems likely to be the mouse that is going to elude the Fort Worth Cats.

Grays To Play Here Thursday

New Castle Team To Play At Beaver Falls Tonight; Grays Here Tomorrow

CANTON HERE FOR SATURDAY BATTLE

Business Manager Carm Sacco announced today that the Homestead Grays would be the attraction at Centennial field on Thursday evening at six o'clock, daylight savings time. It will mark the fourth time the Grays have played here this season. Hospidor will likely twirl for New Castle.

Tonight the New Castle boys trot down to the valley to engage Ed. Harvey's Beaver Falls Elks team and to try and get back some revenge for the defeats suffered in Beaver Falls this season. It was announced that Cebula, the lad from West Virginia, would occupy the mound for New Castle, while it was possible that Hollis Cannon might be called on to face his former mates.

The two new players signed recently by the New Castle team, Patterson, an infielder, and Gahles, a catcher, will be in the line-up for the Elks game tonight and will also be seen here for the first time on Thursday night in the Homestead Gray game.

Saturday afternoon at Centennial field the locals will have the Canton Hooper Coals as their opponents. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock.

Tellings Socked For Two Losses

Yield To Canton And Then Are Battered By Grays, 16-4

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 25. — With Gantz and Howenstine allowing them a combined total of five hits, Doik Novario's Tellings went down to defeat before Canton, 5 to 3, in an O. & P. league contest in the first game of a doubleheader at Dunn Field yesterday, then suffered a more crushing 16 to 4 defeat by the colored Homestead Grays in the exhibition nightcap.

The pitching of Tex Perry deserved better results in the first game, a mental lapse in the eighth inning really costing him the game. The break came in the eighth, when Zandt walked, Warshler sacrificed, Corl beat out an infield hit, Agler hit to Billy Abel, and the latter, instead of throwing to first, heaved too late to get Zandt going to third. This filled the bases and Big Bill Miller promptly cleaned the sacks with his second double.

The Grays, in the second game, were in great shape, while the Tellings put a juggled lineup on the field. The colored boys nicked Abel and Smith for nineteen bingles, scoring in each of the first four innings and also in the seventh and eighth.

Lawrence County Loop Race Nearing Fag-End

Ellwood City Plays Wampum At Ewing Park Saturday Afternoon

By ED FRITZ

Although the Lawrencce county baseball league championship is evidently destined to rest in Ellwood City during the long wintry months, there will be a sharp fight for second place between the Neshannocks and Mahoning and unless the "Nocks" continue to hit a fast gait "Hub" Hart and his seventh warders may slide in to second place as they are only three games behind the 1925 champions.

Throughout the season, which is fast drawing to a close, Ellwood has played consistent baseball while the "Nocks" have played good baseball in spots. Mahoning suffered a long and lasting slump until a few days ago when they came from their lethargy and hope to down Energy at Energy Saturday afternoon while indications point to the Neshannocks winning from Bessemer at Bessemer.

If these two teams win the league standing will remain unchanged, relative to their berths. Wampum travels to Ellwood City to engage the prospective champions and nothing would be more pleasing to Bob Robertson and his Crescents than to topple Ellwood into a defeat. Wampum has been hard hit this season by a combination of circumstances that has left them weaker than in 1925 and it is probable that Connie Wardman's outfit will tack another game in their victory column Saturday.

Following the games Saturday the teams will have only six more games to play as the season ends September 18. Ellwood and the Neshannocks have met for the last time and the only team on the card that seems to have a chance to stop Ellwood from making a run-away race is Mahoning and then only twice.

First Christians Defeat Leesburg

The First Christian team defeated Leesburg 5 to 0, in a game played at Leesburg on Monday night.

Ryon on the slab for the Christians pitched airtight ball and allowed but two hits and won his own game with a timely single. The Christians secured fourteen hits off the Leesburg hurler.

Select Oakmont For Golf Meet

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Bobby Jones probably will defend his American open golf title next year at the Oakmont Country Club, near Pittsburgh.

Selection of this course has not yet received official sanction, but the United States Golf Association is understood to favor it, instead of the Winged Foot Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y., also a bidder for the tourney.

In his comparatively short career Johnny Weissmuller, the famous Illinois A. C. aquatic star, has broken more than 50 speed swimming records.

The new Multnomah stadium in Portland, Ore., is to be dedicated with the Washington-Oregon football game, which is regarded as the gridiron classic of the Northwest.

Net Profits — By Feg Murray

Copyright 1926, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Now that the "the nightmare is over," to use Suzanne Lenglen's own words, and the temperamental prima donna of the courts is preparing for her second visit to America, this time as a professional, let us draw a long breath and think what may happen to Lenglen or to amateur tennis during the forthcoming invasion.

It seem to be taken for granted that the people will flock to see the acrobatic brunette because there are more in this country who have cast asparagus than eyes upon her, and curiosity brings out the multitudes. To make her tour a financial success, however, she must have an opponent worthy of her, and whether or not this can be provided remains to be seen.

It is very doubtful if the U. S. L. T. A., which seems to stand for "U Shall Leave Touring-professionals Alone", will sanction any exhibition matches between Suzanne and some of the best amateur players, either men or women. But if Bobby Jones can play a golf match with Walter Hagen and still remain a pure and sweet amateur, why cannot Helen Wills play an exhibition match with Suzanne Lenglen and still be untainted? Of course, the French girl and her manager would get all the dough, but they present Helen with an expensive trinket, say a diamond bracelet, or a platinum wrist watch, as Sir Walter did Bobby and make everybody happy.

The most interesting phase of the subject, to my mind, is whether or not it will lead to an open tennis tournament, for both amateurs and professionals. Such an event is quite within the realms of possibility.

Other questions brought up by Suzanne's forthcoming invasion are, "How will the lady get along without the liquors which she is wont to drink during the course of her matches?" Or, "Will she do without them?", "Will she 'get by' in the movies since it is admitted that her face is her fortune?" and "How about a vaudeville act?"

A most interesting tour, to be sure. And Suzanne wants interest—on her money.

Feg Murray Says—

Prohibition authorities should investigate. It is said that the Scotch pastime is being played at Rye, N. Y.

Over two billion smoked a month!
—what better proof could you ask?

Doesn't such popularity speak for itself?

OVER two billion Chesterfields smoked every month. Some cigarettes! But likewise—some cigarette!

Natural tobacco taste—nothing can take its place, and smokers are finding it out. The character and goodness of fine tobaccos brought out to the full—that's what smokers want. And they're finding it in Chesterfield—for natural tobacco taste and Chesterfield are one and the same thing!

Pinkie Mitchell To Fight Levine

Junior Welterweight King And Brooklyn Boy Head All-Star Card At Youngstown

BOUTS SCHEDULED FOR SEPTEMBER 1

By JOE HAYNES.
(Special To The News)

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 25.—When Pinky Mitchell of Milwaukee, Wis., answers the bell at Idora park September 1 the fans of this and surrounding towns will be treated to a glimpse of the fightingest champion of all the champs.

When Mitchell was declared the junior welterweight champion of the universe the wiseacre of the boxing game immediately got busy with the air hammers. He will put it away in moth balls, was the chant that went up with all the boys. Did he, well look his record over.

When you mention the names of Willie Harmon, Joe Dundee, Jimmy Finley, Joe Simonivich, Willie Doyle, Joe Jawson, Red Herring, Dave Shade, Lew Tendler, Bobby Barrett, Tommy Freeman, Joe Anderson, Hynie Gold, Billy Wells and Russie Le Roy you have just about called the names of all the good welters and junior welters in the game. Yet that is the list that Mitchell has boxed since winning the title.

Pinky also boxed ten rounds with Benny Leonard at Chicago, Ill. That fight is now history but the debonair Benny if questioned will tell you that Pinky gave him a hard battle that day. How many men can you name among all of Benny's opponents that ever made him step out to win. Few, and very few at that.

In meeting Georgie Levine of Brooklyn, N. Y., Pinky is grabbing an armful of trouble. This boy Levine is rated by New York critics as the best of the welterweight contenders and we will say that Pinky in meeting him showed that he still is, what he always was, a fighting champion.

This ten round battle between Mitchell and Levine will be one of three ten rounders and an eight round prelim that the Heakeh club will run off for the benefit of the Jewish center at Youngstown, O.

While the prices will be a little in excess of what has been charged in the past we think that with Mitchell-Levine Hill-Gardner, Jones Freedman, all signed to go over the ten round bout and Roberts and Harris going eight that the fans will be well satisfied with the prices.

Bakers Seek Game

The Bakers are without a game for Saturday afternoon August 28 and they would like to schedule a game away from home on that date.

The Bakers will take on any junior teams of the city or county. For information regarding a game call 2879-M between 4:30 and 6 o'clock and ask for Andy Mehalic, business manager of the team.

Freak Rock Sculpture Work Of Dame Nature

On the Cornish coast of England, Dame Nature has excelled in the art of the sculptor in the number of faces she has carved in the rock by means of wind and wave and weather. Every visitor to Land's end is taken to a certain point of vantage where can be seen the rugged features of Doctor Johnson, but in this case a little imagination is required. Far better is the remarkable likeness of Queen Victoria on the north coast of Cornwall. At Redruthen steps, the Queen Elizabeth rock rises majestically out of the sands on the summit of a mountain near Grasmere. The lion especially looks as well carved as one of the Landseer lions in Trafalgar square. Strangely enough, approaching from the other side, two or three miles beyond, another rock on the same mountain takes precisely the same form, and on coming closed this rock changes to what is called "The Lady at the Organ". This is a great rock in the shape of an organ, at which sits a woman with outstretched hands, as though producing "the sound of a great amen".

Governor Pinchot Discharges White

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 25.—Charles Fred White, Philadelphia negro attorney, has been removed as a member of the State Athletic Commission by Gov. Pinchot on a charge of breaking a promise not to take affairs of the state body regulating boxing into the newspapers. It is probable his successor will be named very shortly.

Exposure To Cold Not Harmful In Still Air

Professor Barcroft's heart beat and blood flow test on naked persons in the extreme cold of ten degrees below the freezing point suggests the question: What degree of cold can the unclad human body withstand? Perhaps the most surprising experiment in this direction was made during the international circumpolar expeditions in 1882-3. The officer in charge of the northern Siberian station, clad only in his nightshirt, left his tent for a stroll in the open air when the temperature was 72 degrees below the freezing point, and he was none the worse for it! This result was explained by the fact that during the promenade not a breath of air was stirring. Had there been a purga (the terrible blizzard of that region) with its dense, blinding and suffocating cloud of ice needles, it would have meant instantaneous death.

Ask Prosecution Of Bank Cashier

(International News Service)

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Aug. 25.—Hearing that a movement was under way to secure freedom for Will S. Leach, former cashier, and Joseph F. Ward, assistant cashier of the defunct bank of Benwood, a delegation of depositors appeared today before Prosecuting Attorney J. L. Arnold here.

The depositors sought information as to the proper steps in further prosecuting Leach and Ward, should they be pardoned or paroled from the state penitentiary, where they are serving 10-year sentences.

Various estimates place the loss in the bank crash in excess of a half million dollars. Depositors have never received anything on their deposits.

Oil Production Shows Increase

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Daily gross production of crude oil in the United States for the week ended August 21 amounted to 2,170,500 barrels, as compared with 2,162,050 barrels for the preceding week, an increase of 8,450 barrels, according to the weekly summary of the American Petroleum Institute issued today. Daily average production of California and mid-continent fields was 606,100 and 1,183,600 barrels, respectively.

Receipt of California crude and refined oil at Atlantic and gulf coast ports during the week totaled 719,000 barrels, a daily average of 102,714 barrels against a daily average of 64,429 for the preceding week. Imports of crude and refined oils at the principal United States ports averaged 160,857 barrels daily as compared with the previous week's daily average of 216,857 barrels.

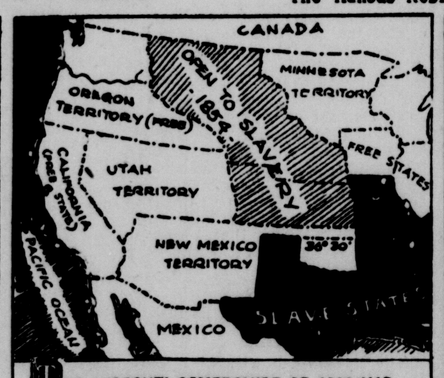
The Kansas-Nebraska Bill—1854.

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

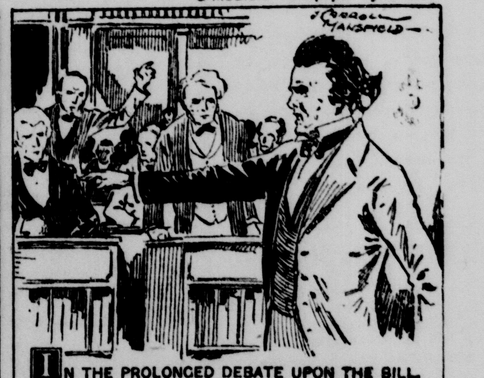
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

ON JAN. 23, 1854, STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS' KANSAS-NEBRASKA BILL WAS REPORTED TO CONGRESS. THIS BILL PROVIDED FOR THE DIVISION OF NEBRASKA INTO TWO TERRITORIES, KANSAS AND NEBRASKA. SLAVERY WAS TO BE PERMITTED IN THESE TERRITORIES IF THE INHABITANTS SO DESIRED.



THE MISSOURI COMPROMISE OF 1820 HAD BARRED SLAVERY "FOREVER" FROM THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE NORTH OF 36° 30'. AN AMENDMENT TO DOUGLAS' BILL EXPLICITLY REPEALED THE COMPROMISE AND OPENED A REGION TO SLAVERY THAT WAS LARGER THAN ALL THE "FREE" STATES PUT TOGETHER.

THE NORTH WAS ENRAGED BY THIS PROPOSED ANNULMENT OF THE MISSOURI COMPROMISE. NORTHERN LEGISLATORS PROTESTED TO CONGRESS, INDIGNATION MEETINGS DENOUNCED THE BILL, AND EFFIGIES OF DOUGLAS, WHOM THE NORTH ACCUSED OF SELLING HIMSELF TO THE SOUTH FOR THE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION, WERE BURNED.



IN THE PROLONGED DEBATE UPON THE BILL, DOUGLAS TRIUMPHED OVER ITS OPPONENTS. ON MAY 22, 1854, THE BILL PASSED THE HOUSE, WAS PASSED BY THE SENATE (MAY 26), AND ON MAY 30, WAS SIGNED BY PRESIDENT PIERCE WHO STRONGLY FAVORED IT.

Former Banking Official Dies

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 25.—Robert McAfee, 74, former state banking commissioner and a prominent Republican, died in his home here today from heart disease. He had been ill four days.

Governor Pennypacker in 1903 appointed him banking commissioner. He held that position two years, resigning to accept an appointment as secretary of the commonwealth.

He was successively re-appointed to the latter post by Governors Stewart and John K. Tener, serving until 1915.

N. Y. STOCKS

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Industrial stocks made a better resistance to bearish selling in the early trading today than during Tuesday's reactionary session of the stock market. The "big bears" offered the industrial speculative leaders in large blocks in the first hour, numerous sales of United States Steel in blocks of from 1,000 to 4,000 shares being reported at a point below yesterday's close and nearly 5 points below Tuesday's high price.

General Motors and Mack Trucks advanced fractionally in the face of heavy selling. Northwestern rails were also able to move upward in opposition to the general trend of the market, but the bulk of low priced industrials including the oils, coppers, sugars, tobaccos and utility stocks were unable to carry the weight of bearish selling without a moderate dip to the lower price levels.

The market relapsed into dullness in the second hour, and some of the industrial stocks staged a modest come-back. The rails were firm, with good buying of the northwestern issues. Warner Brothers A, for the specialties, hung up a new record at 39, up 25 points from the low of last month. Rubber and tie stocks were firm, with U. S. Rubber up about 2 points in active trading.

Tree Of Moses Grows In Kansas Arboretum

Rarity One Of 3000 Varieties Of Plants On 15 Acres Doc- — Planted

Few men are permitted to build their own monuments. An outstanding exception to this rule is found in the case of Dr. W. E. Bartlett of Belle Plaine, who has been the town physician thirty-three years, ever since he was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in St. Louis, says a Belle Plaine, Kan., dispatch to the New York World.

The monument is known as Bartlett Park. But the doctor prefers to call it "Bartlett's Arboretum."

In 1911 Dr. Bartlett purchased fifteen acres of ground adjoining Belle Plaine on the southwest. It was then only a jungle of weeds and brush. On this fifteen acres, which has been land-scaped and beautified in many ways, there are now growing 3,000 different varieties of trees and shrubs.

From all parts of the world have come the rarest varieties of trees—from China, Japan, Norway, Sweden, islands of many seas and the plains and mountains of North and South America. One of the rarest is the Tree of Moses, the burning brush of Biblical history, described in Exodus. When the first frosts come, the foliage turns to a fire red. This is said to be the only tree of its kind in Kansas.

Dr. Bartlett has written many articles for publication concerning his observations and studies. He is now preparing manuscript for a volume entitled "The Reflection of a Country Naturalist."

Young Brains Master Technical Job Quickly

Signalman On Strike Awed By Efficient Way Youths Handle Levers

The following true strike story deserves repeating, for it contains a moral, says "Peter Simple" in The London Post. X. who tells it, lives in rural Kent, and going home on the third day of the recent strike, met an old signalman, who is also one of his tenants.

The old boy was looking worried, and it transpired that having gone back to his signal box to fetch a coat he had left behind, he found a couple of youths in plus fours unconcernedly caring on. "There they was," said the old man in an awestruck voice, "pullin' away at my levers and pullin of 'em right, too, like as though they'd been doin' it for these twenty years.

" 'And 'ow long might you young gentlemen 'ave been alearnin' ter work them signals?' I asks them. 'Oh, a couple of hours, granpa,' says one of 'em, offhand-like. 'Law!' says I ter myself, sir, 'that's what comes of 'aving brains!' Two hours, 'e said. And I calls meself a skilled man! Brains! That's what it is. I'm going back to work tomorrow, I am. Brains!"

X. wished the old man luck and left him at his cottage door—still with the awestruck look on his face, and muttering "Brains! That's what it is."

Try It, Girls! Printer's Ink As A Hair Dye

Here's a story showing still greater possibilities for the use of printer's ink. It dyes horse hair, so why not human hair?

Bloomsburg, Pa.—Horse traders here have gone David Harum one better, and a new use for printer's ink has been found. The discovery came through a request made in a newspaper office for ink for a horse dealer, and he related the story.

Printer's ink applied at night to gray or white hair turns it brown by morning, and the ink then can be removed without any trace that the hair has been "doctored". Not all buyers are particular about looking a horse in the mouth when the coat of gray indicates it is not so old, and the printer's ink turns the trick, the dealer said.

Early last week he bought a horse from a local man, took it to a nearby farm, applied the printer's ink, and the next morning brought the horse back to town and sold it to the man from whom he had bought it for $40 more than he paid, the buyer not knowing it was the same horse he sold the day before.

Whether the ink scheme would work as well on human hair, the horse dealer didn't know.

Dickens' First Work Returns To England

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Charles Dickens' first manuscript, "Stratagems of Rozonza", dictated when he was 16 to his mother, has come back to England. The author signed himself C. J. H. Dickens, a reminder of his full name, Charles John Huffham Dickens, which he never used in later life.

The plot of the play is concerned with the loves and adventures of a cosmopolitan group gathered in a Venetian inn, but the description of it resembles more closely that of London's noted amusement place of Dickens' boyhood, Vauxhall Gardens.

The existence of the manuscript was unknown until a year ago, when an American collector, G. E. Miller, of California, found it in Paris.

The thing most responsible for the cityward trend is man's queer aversion to working hard for very little.
